(c) The Commission has little sympathy with and will not ordinarily lend its aid to, an effort by road to secure traffic that is reasonably tributary to another road by compelling the latter to join with it in through routes and rates, but will not permit the theory as to what traffic is tributary to a road to be pushed to such an extreme as to impose an undue burden upon shippers. C. & C. Traction Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 486, 492.

(d) A trunk line carrier which purchases a branch line road is justified in canceling through joint rates with another carrier when such cancellation will tend to move traffic entirely over its own line at reasonable and nondiscriminatory rates to the exclusion of the former two-line haul. In Re Proposed Rates on Lumber, 20 I. C. C. 575, 580.

(e) The statute provides that in establishing joint rates and through routes each carrier against which the order is made shall be given the benefit of the long haul by its own line "unless to do so would make such through route unreasonably long as compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established." The Commission cannot therefore establish in every case a through route and a joint rate, but must work under the limitation imposed by the Act of Congress as above set forth. In Re Investigation of Alleged Unreasonable Rates on Meats, 23 I. C. C. 656, 662.

(f) The carriers owe a duty to establish and maintain through routes and joint rates so that there may be the freest movement of traffic without the necessity of reshipment. In the formation of these through routes, however, the law recognizes the right of the carrier to protect its own long haul, and it may not be required against its own will to participate in a through route between any two points which does not include all, or substantially all, of its line or lines between those points, except when an unreasonably long or circuitous route would otherwise be established. Chamber of Commerce of New York v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 55, 76.

(g) The Commission does not condemn reasonable nondiscriminatory transit rates and privileges or the practice of carriers of reducing their reasonable rates on inbound raw material in consideration of receiving the outbound shipment of manufactured product, but does condemn as unreasonable and discriminatory the addtion thereto of any sum as a penalty to be forfeited if the outbound traffic does not move over the same line which handled the inbound raw material. May Bros. v. Y. & M. V R. R., 26 I. C. C. 323, 328.

(h) The law upholds a carrier in retaining tonnage to its line where the transportation can be performed with reasonable dispatch and without undue discrimination. Suffern Grain Co. v. I. C. R. R., 27 I. C. C. 192, 194.

(i) The cancellation of through routes not justified by determination of delivering carrier to protect its own mills from competition of mills on other lines. Rates on Corn Milled at Oneonta, 27 I. C. C. 367, 369.

(j) It does not lie within the proper exercise of the carriers' power arbitrarily to dictate where grain or other products shall be sold and what the delivering line shall be. Toledo Produce Exchange v. A. A. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 536, 544.

(k) The law upholds the carrier in retaining tonnage on its line where the transportation can be performed with reasonable dispatch and without undue discrimination. It is also settled that the Commission's authority under section 15 of the Act to establish in the first instance, or to continue in force voluntarily established through routes and joint rates, is limited to the extent that it may not require a carrier, without its consent, to embrace in such through route substantially less than the entire length of its railroad between the termini of the through route, unless to do so would make such through route unreasonably long as compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established. West Coast Lumber Mfrs. Assn. v. T. E. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 227, 229.

(l) While it is clearly in the interest of carriers to restrict delivery to points on their own lines, they should not be permitted to do so when the result is to restrict in number the markets that otherwise would be available to shippers. Kansas City Hay Dealers Asso. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 350.

(m) Section 15 of the act provides that in establishing joint rates a carrier may not be required to embrace in the through route substantially less than the entire length of its line between the terminal of the proposed through route unless such inclusion would result in an unreasonably long route compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established. Routing on sheep from K. C. M. & O. Texas points to Kansas City, 69 I. C. C. 4, 6.

(n) A carrier endeavoring to restrict its local markets to mines on its own lines unless higher rates are paid, is not justified in refusing to maintain reasonable joint rates from other producing districts. Coal from B. & L. E. R. R. stations to B. R. & P. Ry. stations, 73 I. C. C. 5, 6.

(o) Arrangement sought whereby the Kansas City Southern would be required to interchange traffic with its competitor, the Southern Pacific, at Port Arthur, Tex., legally possible only through a condemnation of the terminals of the K. C. S. for use by the S. P., which has access thereto provided the traffic moves via Beaumont, Tex. HELD, prayer equivalent to establishment of a through route and joint rate embracing less than the full length of the K. C. S. and since no better service would accrue to Port Arthur interests or the general public, the K. C. S. should not be required to afford such facilities to other roads. Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce v. T. & F. S. Ry., 73 I. C. C. 361.

(p) In the absence of a showing that the public interest would suffer by routing traffic through a specified point, a carrier should be allowed to handle traffic in its possession over its own line as far as it can. Routing of Coal from Western Maryland Mines to Eastern Destinations. 74 I. C. C. 127.

(q) While the law does not permit the commission to require rail carriers to establish through routes which result in the short-hauling of one carrier which has a reasonably direct route of its own, it is not a necessary conclusion, when such routes and joint rates are established, that local rates are fair divisions for the carrier which is short-hauled. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317, 355.

(r) In absence of undue prejudice or an unduly circuitous route, the commission can not, because of jurisdictional limitation contained in paragraph (4) of section 15 of the act, require a carrier to turn traffic over to a connecting line when to do so would require it "to participate in a through route embracing substantially less than entire length of its line." The New York Harbor case, 47 I. C. C., 643, 722. Miller Paper Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 80 I. C. C. 314, 317.

(s) A carrier originating traffic or receiving it from its connections should be allowed to carry it as far as it can before delivering it to a connecting line, if the public interest does not suffer thereby. Intermediate routing via North Dakota junctions on transcontinental traffic. 81 I. C. C. 272, 275.

(t) The Commission may, and it shall whenever deemed by it to be necessary or desirable in the public interest establish through routes, joint classifications, and joint rates, fare or charges, applicable to the transportation of passengers or property, and the divisions of such rates, fares or charges as hereinafter provided, and the terms and conditions under which such through routes shall be operated. In establishing any such through route the Commission shall not require any carrier by railroad, without its consent, to embrace in such route substantially less than the entire length of its railroad which lies between the termini of such proposed through route, unless such inclusion of lines would make the through route unreasonably long as compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established. New Mexico Central Ry. v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 81 I. C. C. 718, 720.

(u) With certain exceptions, a carrier may insist, as to traffic which it originates, upon including in a through route so much of its line as lies between points of origin and destination, provided such route is not unreasonably long. But a carrier has no right, under guise of reserving to itself the long haul, to restrict markets in which shippers may dispose of their products. Transit on Lumber and Forest Products, 83 I. C. C. 451, 458.

(v) A carrier is entitled to handle traffic originated by it over the route which will give it the long haul provided that such route is reasonable and practicable. Board of Railroad Commissioners of Montana v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 88 I. C. C. 183, 184.

§10. Status of intermediate carrier.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There is no provision in the law for the establishment of through rates by absorbing the local rates of another carrier for the purpose of establishing through routes over a through route composed of two or more carriers over which through route no joint through rate has been fixed by agreement. Coal Rates on the Stony Fork Branch, 26 I. C. C. 168, 173.

See Supra §1.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The purpose of section 15 of the Act relating to the establishment of through routes and joint rates is to afford relief to a shipping community and not to aid carriers to acquire strategic advantages in their contests with one another. While a railroad company is competent to file a complaint under the clause in question and to demand an order establishing said routes and rates with its connections, its right to such relief is to be tested by the needs of the community which it seeks thus to serve and not by the fact that stations on its line in such community have not been accorded such routes and rates by connecting lines. Chicago & Milwaukee Electric R. R. Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 13 I. C. C. 20, 26

(b) Railroads of the country are called upon to so unite themselves that they will constitute one national system; they must establish through routes, keep these routes open and in operation furnish necessary facilities of such transportation, make reasonable and proper rules of practice as between themselves and the shippers and as between each other. Missouri & Illinois Coal Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 39, 46.

(c) In every case in which the establishment or cancellation of a route is involved, the needs of the public or the community and the adequacy of the available facilities are questions of primary importance. If it is proposed to cancel an existing route, it is proper to consider whether or not the Commission could have required the establishment of the route as an original proposition. The Commission would not order the establishment of an additional route unless a carrier, shipper, or a community directly interested requested it; nor is there any reason why it should require the maintenance of such a route where carriers parties thereto desire its discontinuance and shippers directly interested do not protest, and where it appears that the community will be adequately served if the cancellation is allowed to be made effective. Ocean and Rail Rates to Charlotte, N. C., 38 I. C. C. 405, 410.

(d) When it is showed that a through route is a great convenience to shippers, add materially to available transportation facilities, and is therefore a substantial benefit to commerce, it must be held to satisfy the test of public necessity. Under these conditions through routes found justified in this case. Lourie Mfg. Co. v. C. N. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 448, 452.

(e) Whether joint rates must be ordered established and maintained depends upon such matters as public demand or necessity and whether or not the absence of joint rates is detrimental or obstructive to the public interest and the ends of justice between the parties. Empire Steel & Iron Co. v. Director General, 56 I. C. C. 158, 162.

(f) Where there is no apparent necessity or demand on the part of shippers for the establishment of through routes and joint rates, and where there is absence of unjust or unreasonable rates, practices or discriminations, the Commission can not view with favor an effort to require the establishment of such routes and rates merely to enable a carrier to wrest from its connections, or an agent to wrest from its principal, greater compensation. C. M. & St. P. Ry. v. U. P. R. R., 88 I. C. C. 312, 316.

§11 (2) When through route ordered or denied

CASES 1887-1908

(a) While through routes and reduced through rates, which would facilitate the movement of traffic and thereby benefit the public, are in some cases prevented by the reasonable refusal of carriers to unite in granting such facilities, and the statute was apparently designed to require connecting carriers to join in the formation of through routes at lower aggregate rates than a combination of locals, the machinery necessary to accomplish that purpose is not provided, and the Commission has repeatedly called attention to this defect in the law. N. Y. N. H. & N. R. Co. v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323, 338.

(b) The St. Louis S. W. R. Co. should not be required to make through rates via Memphis merely because it has established through rates from more southerly stations, Kendalls and points south via Gale or Thebes, Cairo or East St. Louis. Re Freight Rates between Memphis and Points in Arkansas, 11 I. C. C. 180.

(c) Complainant attacked refusal of New Haven Company to make joint through rates on petroleum and its products from Cleveland, O., Pittsburgh, Pa., and other points in Pennsylvania and Ohio to points reached by its lines in New England. The New Haven Company does participate in through rates to New England points on other traffic generally. Ordinarily the rate to Boston applies to points in Massachusetts and Connecticutt and it results that its refusal to join in through rates on petroleum and its products operates to increase the rate by the amount of its local charge. The Standard Oil Company brings crude oil by pipe line to its seaboard refineries and sends the refined oil and the products by tank steamers to distributing stations at Wilson Point, Conn., and India Point, R. I., from the distributing stations the oil and products are shipped out locally to interior points. Independent shippers, like complainant, are obliged to send shipments by rail to the same destinations. The combination rates on petroleum and its products from Cleveland and Pittsburgh to points reached by the New Haven result in unreasonable and unjust rates. There is no competitive relation between petroleum and its products on the one hand and the other articles of traffic on the other, and the failure of the New Haven to provide joint rates on petroleum and its products while maintaining joint rates on other traffic, does not constitute wrongful preference and advantage. The Act does not authorize the Commission to compel the establishment of joint rates by connecting carriers, nor to prescribe the divisions of joint rates or the conditions of interchange in case the connecting carriers fail to agree in respect thereto; and it follows, notwithstanding the combination rates complained of are unjust and unreasonable and the general shipping situation is such as to work a practical monopoly in favor of the Standard Oil Company, that relief can not be afforded by the Commission, complaint dismissed. Fred G. Clark Company v. L. S. & M. S. Ry., 11 I. C. C. 558.

(ce) On complaint of failure by defendants to establish a through route and joint rate on beef cattle from points on the International & Great Northern Railroad in Texas to New Orleans, La., it appeared that formerly a through route and joint rate of 45 cents per 100 pounds, except from Laredo, Tex., from which it was 47 cents, were discontinued by defendants other than the International & Great Northern Railroad Company on October 14, 1906, because of dissatisfaction with the rate divisions; that there is no other practicable route from the points of shipment to New Orleans, and that much inconvenience and loss have resulted to shippers from discontinuance of the route. HELD, that the public interest requires establishment and maintenance of the through route and joint through rates, and that the route and former joint rates should be re-established. No opinion upon the reasonableness of such rates is expressed, and this decision is without prejudice to determination of the question of reasonableness which may be involved in another proceeding now pending. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. G. H., & S. A. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 20.

(f) Through routes to New Orleans, La., from points on the International & Great Northern Railroad in Texas, on beef cattle, ordered re-established. Cattle Raisers' Asso. of Tex. v. G. H. & S. A. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 20.

(g) On complaint of failure by defendants to establish a through route and joint rate on beef cattle from Fort Worth, Tex, to Birmingham, Ala., it appeared that joint rates are established over their line between the points mentioned on fresh meats and packing-house products, but not on other traffic, and that there is no through route or joint rate for beef cattle by any line from Fort Worth to Birmingham: HELD, That a through route and joint rate thereover of not exceeding 50 cents per 100 pounds should be established and maintained for the transportation of beef cattle, in carloads, from Fort Worth to Birmingham. Birmingham Packing Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 29.

(h) Complainant attacked rates charged on beef cattle, from Fort Worth, Tex., to Birmingham, Ala., as unreasonable inasmuch as there were no joint routes or through rates. The lines involved are the T. & P., to Shreveport, La., distance 221 miles, V. S. & P., from thence to Meridian, 312 miles over which through rates are in effect. Beyond Meridian the A. G. S., is used distance 152 miles. Through rates are in effect on packing house products, 63c on fresh meats and 48c on other products. There seems to be nothing unnatural in the attempt to transport live animals this distance to a center of population as large as Birmingham. HELD, a through rate should be established not to exceed 50c per 100 pounds. Birmingham Packing Company v. T. & P. R. R., 12 I. C. C. 29.

(i) Through rates to Birmingham, Ala., from Ft. Worth, Tex., on beef cattle, ordered established; it appearing that joint rates are established between the points mentioned, on fresh meats and packing-house products, and that there is no through route or joint rate for beef cattle by any line between such points. Birmingham Packing Co. v. P. & T. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 29.

(j) Through rates from Ft. Worth, Tex., to Birmingham, Ala., on beef cattle, ordered established. Birmingham Packing Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 29.

(k) Through rates from points on line of Texas & Pacific Railway in Texas and New Mexico on live stock, held to be required by public interest. American Live Stock Asso. v. T. & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 32.

(l) Complainant attacked refusal of defendants to establish through routes and joint rates on livestock to and from points on the T. & P., over the line of that railway in connection with the lines of other defendants. Previously through routes and joint rates were in effect but they were canceled by the T. & P. Generally speaking, the inability to make through shipments had inflicted hardship and loss upon shippers and seriously interfered with the free movement of live stock through the junction points. The testimony plainly established that the refusal of the T. & P., to continue these joint rates did, by putting upon the shipper the burden of providing for the transfer of his stock at the junction point, occasion annoyance, delay, expense and loss to the shipping public. The only reason for refusing to establish through routes and joint rates is that the T. & P., did not desire to have its equipment moved off its rails. HELD, through routes and joint rates should be established, the measure of the rates to be those in effect prior to the time complaint was filed. American National Livestock Asso. v. T. & P. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 32.

(m) Through rates from Jamestown, R. I., to Philadelphia, for fish, ordered established. Enterprise Transportation Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 326.

(n) The complainant, located at Page, W. Va., on the Virginian Railway, 9 miles from its junction with the Chesapeake & Ohio, applies for the establishment of through routes and joint rates, with divisions thereof, for the transportation, in carloads, of coal and coke over these two roads, from Page to destinations on the Chesapeake & Ohio outside of West Virginia, such rates in no case to exceed those applied by the Chesapeake & Ohio from the junction point of the two roads and from other points on the line of the last-mentioned carrier in the same rate group. It is conceded that there is now reasonable and satisfactory through movement and handling of through shipments of the traffic involved, and that the through routes are asked for only for the purpose of supporting the application for joint through rates and divisions of the same, it not being shown that either the combination rates applying via the two roads from Page or the Chesapeake & Ohio rates from points on its line are unreasonable, and it further appearing that to make such an order would result in compelling the Chesapeake & Ohio to either discriminate between patrons in the rate group served by it or to reduce its rates materially on an important part of its traffic. Application denied. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian Ry. Co. et al., 12 I. C. C. 471.

(o) Application for the establishment of through routes and joint rates for coal and coke from Page, W. Va., on Virginian railways to destinations on the Chesapeake & Ohio outside of West Virginia, not to exceed those applied to Chesapeake & Ohio from a junction point and other points in the same rate group, which would result in compelling the Chesapeake & Ohio either to discriminate between patrons in the rate group served by it, or to reduce its rate materially on an important part of its traffic,—denied. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. V. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 471.

(p) Through rates from Page, W. Va., on the Virginian Railway, 9 miles from its junction with the Chesapeake & Ohio, to destinations on the Chesapeake & Ohio outside of W. Va., on coal and coke, application for through rates denied; it being conceded that there is no reasonable and satisfactory through movement in handling of through shipments, and that the through routes are asked for only for the purpose of supporting the application for joint through rates and divisions of the same, it not being shown that the combination rates are unreasonable. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 471.

(q) Through rates to be established only where necessary to secure reasonable facilities to the public, and to prevent unreasonable and unjust rates, practices and discriminations. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 471.

(r) Disparity in rates between points on different roads serving shippers of coal in the same territory does not necessarily constitute such inequality as to justify the establishment of joint through rates from points on the road farthest removed from the destination points on the basis of rates from points on the other road at the expense of the latter, especially where its rates are not shown to be unreasonable. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian Ry., 12 I. C. C. 471, 472.

(s) Where neither the interests of the public nor the ends of justice as between the parties directly interested will be promoted by the establishment of through routes and joint rates and divisions thereof, a proper case for the exercise of the authority to order through routes and joint rates is not shown. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian Ry., 12 I. C. C. 471, 472.

(t) Through rates do not inevitably follow physical connection. McRate Terminal Ry. v. Southern Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 545.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(u) The railroads should be regarded more and more as one national system, and the time may not be far distant when the Commission should proceed to the establishment of joint through class and commodity rates, between practically all points in the country. Intermediate Rate Asso. v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 226, 246.

(v) The prayer for establishment of through routes and joint rates denied where not shown necessary or desirable in the public interest, and its establishment would replace a one-line movement by a joint-like haul involving the delay and expense of three terminal interchanges and force the originating carrier to short haul itself. Phoenix Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, as Agent, 62 I. C. C. 368, 373, 374; Phoenix Chamber of Commerce v. Director General, as Agent, 62 I. C. C. 412, 416.

(w) The Commission has control over car distribution in the public interest and if there is otherwise sufficient reason for the establishment of joint rates from particular points such rates should not be withheld through fear that carrier's car supply may be depleted. Pittsburgh Term, R. R. & Coal Co. v., Director General, as Agent, 63 I. C. C. 179, 182.

(x) In considering a prayer for the establishment of joint rates the effect upon the possible diversion of traffic should be given consideration; but the desire of a carrier to retain traffic to its own lines should not be permitted to outweigh the public interest if the establishment thereof is shown to be necessary or desirable. Mason Valley Mines Co. v. W. P. R. R. Co., 64 I. C. C. 477, 481.

(y) The mere fact that one common-carrier railroad has a physical connection with another is not of itself sufficient ground upon which to base an order requiring the establishment of joint rates over those roads. The question of whether or not they should be established is one calling for the exercise of the Commission's judgment upon the circumstances and conditions of each particular case, as the act provides that the Commission may and shall establish joint rates "whenever deemed by it to be necessary or desirable in the public interest." Beaver Sand Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C. 285, 288, 289.

(z) The question of whether or not the establishment of joint rates should be required is one calling for the exercise of the judgment of the Commission upon the circumstances and conditions of each particular case. Beaver Sand Co. v. Director General, 66 I. C. C. 285, 289.

(aa) Fact that interchange facilties are inadequate for convenient operation is not of itself a defense if through routes are shown to be necessary or desirable in the public interest. If inadequate, they may be made adequate to perform the service which the law requires. York Mfrs. Asso. v. P. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 40, 50.

(bb) Complainants ask for reasonable joint rates and through routes on coal, from their mines over defendants to interstate destinations and attacked present rates as unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory and unduly prejudicial. Complainants mines are on sidings of the Monongahela, between Shinnstown, W. Va., and Bingamon Junction, W. Va., bear the West Fork River. Competitors are on the B. & O., across the river and on the Western Maryland between Wyatt, W. Va., and Bingamon Junction. All these mines are in a small area and within the socalled Fairmont district. Local charges of the Monongahela of 30c per ton, minimum $15 per car, to the point of interchange with the Western Maryland, or 40c per ton, minimum $20 per car, to point of interchange with the B. & O., and the district rates beyond, were collected. Competitors shipments are charged only the direct rates. Total mileage of the Monongahela is 130 miles, it transports passenger, freight in car load and less car loads, newspapers, and mail. It does not file tariffs with the Commission or participate in joint rates. Its lines are not adapted to the hauling of heavy freight. It is clear that the shipments from complainants mines to points without West Virginia were continuously in interstate commerce and that by participating therein the Monongahela subjects itself to the provisions of the act. The evidence shows that in addition to the street passenger service the Monongahela conducts an interurban service over its own tracks and over tracks of the W. M., transports freight both in car load and less carloads, and maintains freight stations. HELD, the Monongahela is a common carrier, that the rates in issue are not unreasonable or otherwise unlawful, and that the record does not justify the establishment of through rates and joint rates. Monongahela should promptly comply with section 6, complaints dismissed. Hood Coal Co. v. Monongahela Co., 73 I. C. C. 54.

(cc) In view of the parenthetical clause in paragraph (4) of section 15 of the act, the limitation put upon the commission's authority to establish through routes and joint rates does not apply where the commission finds it to be in the public interest to require one carrier to afford another carrier the use of its terminals. Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce v. T. & F. S. Ry., 73 I. C. C., 361, 363.

(dd) Public interest found to require establishment of through route and joint rates on coal from Sheridan, Wyo., to points on Great Northern in eastern Montana via Sidney. Western Coal Rates, 80 I. C. C. 383, 415.

(ee) Act provides that commission may and shall establish joint rates whenever deemed necessary or desirable in public interest. Mere desire to extend markets, unsupported by any substantial indication of public need, affords no adequate foundation for requiring establishment of additional through routes and joint rates. Western Coal Rates, 80 I. C. C. 383, 415, 434.

(ff) The general provision of paragraph (4), section 1, that carriers shall establish through routes and reasonable rates applicable thereto, is subordinated to specific provisions of section 15 for establishment of through routes and joint rates. Tidewater Paper Mills Co. v. B. T. R. R. Co., 80 I. C. C. 493, 497.

(gg) The law provides that in establishing a through route the Commission may not require a carrier to embrace in such route substantially less than the entire length of its railroad which lies between the termini. It is manifest that there may be instances where two roads connecting at various junctions might form a through route between two points and that the length of the haul of each would depend upon the junction point at which the interchange is made. In these cases the carrier which originates the traffic is entitled to the long haul. Fort Smith S. R. I. R. R., v. A. C. R. R., 87 I. C. C. 617, 620.

(hh) Where the public interest demands the maintenance of a through route which gives the originating carrier the long haul, the fact that such originating carrier may acquiesce in an arrangement under which it surrenders the long haul to a connection would not prevent the Commission from requiring the maintenance of the route which would be in the public interest. Fort Smith S. & R. R. R. R. v. A. C. R. R., 87 I. C. C. 617, 621.

(ii) Complainant, C. M. & St. P. Ry., sought establishment of through routes and joint rates via the O. W. R. R. & N., from the junction of the two carriers at Plummer, Idaho, or Marengo, Wash., on westbound traffic that originates on its line extending from Chicago, Ill., to Oreg., and points taking same rates. Through routes and joint rates, upon agreed divisions, have for many years been in effect between the two carriers via these interchange points on traffic originating north of the above territory, including that moving across Lake Michigan and destined to points north and west of Pendleton, Oreg., but the traffic here involved, under agreements made years ago between these carriers, moves via Council Bluffs, Iowa, and the U. P. This arrangement has the effect of depriving the Milwaukee of the long haul on the latter traffic, and routing and joint rates via Plummer or Marengo are sought. No dispute exists as to the essential facts. Complete track connections and interchange facilities between these carriers have long been installed and in use at both Plummer and Marengo. The distance from Chicago to Portland via Plummer is 2,214 miles, 49 miles less than via Council Bluffs. The practicability of the desired route is not questioned, and it would compare favorably with that of any of the transcontinental lines that reach the north Pacific coast. The present through rates via Plummer or Marengo are combinations of locals, which place the Milwaukee at a disadvantage in competition for this traffic by its own line. The allegation of undue prejudice arises from that fact that competitors of the Milwaukee enjoy through routes and joint rates to Portland and related points via interchange points with the U. P., in western Washington. These competitive lines may receive traffic from the Milwaukee for such routing, thus affording the latter only the short hauls. It is desirable in the public interest that the efficiency and availability of all the transcontinental lines be conserved and enlarged rather than restricted. The U. P., serves the south and central Pacific coast, as well as the north Pacific coast, while the Milwaukee reaches only the north coast. The Milwaukee was extended to the coast at great expense, its traffic density is lighter than any other transcontinental line, and the spirit of section 15 (4) that if a carrier has unrouted traffic in its possession it should be allowed to handle it by its own line as far as it can unless public interest will suffer thereby, can not be disregarded. There can be no doubt that the needs of the public, more especially in the future development of the northwest, would be more adequately met by the establishment of the additional route. HELD, refusal of defendants to enter into through routes and joint rates with complainant through Plummer or Marengo on traffic hereinbefore described is unreasonable. An appropriate order will be entered requiring their establishment. C. M. & St. P. Ry. v. U. P. R. R., 88 I. C. C. 312.

III. BILLS OF LADING.

See Bills of Lading II; Export Rates and Facilities II; Routing and Misrouting §3.

§12. Issuance in general.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) No legal obligation rests on a rail carrier to give a through bill of lading covering movement by water beyond its line, but the practice of withholding through bills of lading, except as to certain preferred water lines, is illegal discrimination. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 417, 424.

(b) A bill of lading issued by a rail carrier, covering the inland rail and also the ocean haul, is not strictly a through bill of lading. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 417, 425.

(c) The Commission has no more power to require the issuance of through bills of lading to foreign destinations than it has to establish through routes or rates to such destinations, but it does have power to remove unjust discrimination and may require the discontinuance of practices which create such discriminations. Arkansas Pass Channel & Dock Co. v. G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 403, 415.

IV. REASONABLENESS AND DISCRIMINATION.

See Commodity Rates II; Discrimination §7; Equalization of Rates; Evidence §66; Local Rates & Combinations; Proportional Rates; Reasonableness of Rates §27½; Water Carriers V.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Complainant charged discrimination in freight rates against Opelika, Ga. and in favor of Montgomery and Columbus, and that the Western Ry. of Alabama refused a through rate and through bills of lading from Opelika to New Orleans on cotton. Dissimilar circumstances and conditions may be made out by the existence of actual competition which is of controlling force in respect to traffic important in amount; and the limitations suggested by this rule are applicable, when the controlling force of water competition is invoked in respect to the second and third sections of the Act, as well as in respect to the fourth. The exceptional circumstance to be proved is actual competition, not possible competition likely to arise if rates are raised "of controlling force"—not when the rail line is the controlling force, but when the competing water line is able to dictate rates which will control the traffic, unless met by the railroad "in respect to traffic important in amount"—not when competition in a single direction or for the transportation of a single article or class of articles exist, but general competition of the character stated, controlling the carriage of the traffic on which the discrimination is made. That railroads have water competition and are compelled to meet it without more, is not sufficient to justify the lesser charge for the greater distance, much less to justify the making of such tariffs as the petitioners seek relief from. Where the petitioners ask that the discrimination against Opelika which it appears unjustly exists in favor of Montgomery and Columbus, be corrected, that is, that the rates to Opelika be reduced, but when the order which they seek would increase the existing discrimination in favor of Opelika as against the local points on each side of it, the relief was refused, as to grant it in a form in which no injustice would be done to other points, and yet conforming to the law, would involve a readjustment so general that other interests and localities are entitled to be first heard and their respective claims considered. Where the rate from Opelika to Savanah via C. & G. C., is 52c, while the rate to the same point by the same system from Montgomery and Columbus is 45c, and Opelika can obtain no other rate to New Orleans at all on cotton, although it has good and ample facilities for the handling of cotton, and the rate from Montgomery to New Orleans is 45c, and local rate from Opelika to Montgomery is 27c, or 72c through to New Orleans, thus cutting off that market, leaving Savanah as the only outlet-an order was made requiring defendants to cease and desist from such denial, the Commission finding from the evidence that through rates and through bills of lading on cotton offered for shipment at Opelika to New Orleans are unjustly and unreasonably refused by the Western Ry. of Alabama while given by said road on other commodities, and at other points similarly situated, and while said defendants connecting lines making the route to New Orleans are ready and willing to unite therein, and finding also, that Opelika is by such action of defendant subjected to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage. It is no defense against the issuing of such an order that some undisclosed connection of the defendant once made an offer of rebates to the merchants of Opelika for the purpose of getting the business away from what the defendant considered its ordinary and proper channel to New Orleans, it not being averred that the lines to New Orleans will not now unite in making the usual through rates and no reason whatever being stated why through rates and through bills of lading on cotton are not given over the line which forms the aforesaid ordinary and proper channel. HELD, relief denied in the matter of discrimination until the complaint is amended, and granted as to the through rate and through bills of lading. Harwell v. Columbus & Western R. R. 1 I. C. C. 631.

(aa) Complainant attacked the exaction of an unreasonable and extortionate charge of 30c upon the transportation of wheat from Walla Walla, Wash., to Portland, Ore., and asking that it be reduced to 15c. A variety of practical considerations must enter into the making of freight rates by a railroad company, and determine to a great extent in every instance the question whether such rates are reasonable or not. Railroad companies can not be required to make freight rates upon mere theories or conjectures. They have to deal with business as they find it. Where, from the very sparsely settled country through which defendant operates its lines, outside the through business which is furnished to it at Wallula by the N. P., and by the O. S. L. at Umatilla, one of the chief articles of freight on which it must depend is the transportation of wheat to Portland; where, as compared with other roads transporting wheat which pass through more populace communities, in addition to the through freights furnished by their connections, they have a greater variety of local and way freights, and are not compelled to depend, as is the defendant, upon what they receive for the transportation of any one local commodity, such as wheat, and can for this reason alone safely make their rates less on wheat than the defendant; where the wheat hauled by the defendant is transported in sacks—a more expensive mode of shipping and delivering than that usually adopted by other roads with which it has been compared, which is in carloads of solid wheat received from and delivered to elevators along their lines; where the volume of through freights forming a large proportion of the business of the defendant fluctuates very greatly, influenced by causes beyond the control of a remote carrier like the defendant; where the expense of frequently hauling empty cars to reach wheat before it can be received for carriage back to Portland, largely affects the question of the reasonableness of the rates upon wheat shipped from Walla Walla to Portland, where shortly after the petitions were filed the defendant, as it had a right to do under the statute, reduced its rate from $6 to $5 per ton and made large and general reductions on a large line of freight; and as rates are to a considerable extent so related to each other in the manner in which they are laid for the revenue of a railroad, that the instances are frequent, the present being one, where a change of rate upon one important article of commerce involves the consideration of the relative rates on other articles, and where the defendants lines are phenomenally well situated in their relation to through transportation facilities, and the large field of growing commerce and agriculture, and upon the statement in the answer of the defendant that further reductions on wheat rates are intended to be made by defendant as soon as this can be done, and upon the general course of dealing of defendant, that the rate for the next season on wheat will doubtless be further modified further HELD, that on and after Dec. 15, 1887, the defendant must cease to charge more than 23½c per 100 pounds, or $4.70 per ton on wheat transported by it over its lines from Walla Walla, Wash., to Portland, Ore., during the present grain season. Evans v. O. R. & N. Co., 1 I. C. C. 641.

(ab) That a refusal to give a through rate as for one shipment operates prejudicially to the town desiring privilege, does not make the refusal an unjust discrimination, when the carrier applies the same rule to all towns. Crews v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 703.

(ac) The fact that a refusal to give the through rate as for one shipment operates prejudicially to the town desiring the privilege and favorably to another town does not make the refusal operate as unjust discrimination when the carrier applies the same rule to all towns and accords the privilege to none. Crew v. R. & D. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 703.

(ad) A carrier is not responsible for rates made by connecting road merely because of its giving them in conection with its own rates to parties making through shipments. Crews v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 1, I. C. R. 703.

(ae) When the reasonableness of rates is in question the charges made on long through lines cannot form a just basis for comparison with local rates for relatively short distances. Crews, Danville Chamber of Commerce v. R. & D. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 703, 710.

(b) Complainant attacked rates from Dalton Ga to Knoxville, Johnson City and Bristol, Tenn., on lumber as unreasonable; also that the joint rates on lumber from Dalton to Roanoke and Lynchburgh, Va., as unreasonable. HELD as a rule in the transportation of freight by railroads while the aggregate charge is continually increasing the further the freight is carried, the rate per ton per mile is constantly growing less all the time, making the aggregate charge less in proportion every hundred miles after the first arising out of the character and nature of the service performed and the cost of the service; and thus staple commodities and merchandise are enabled to bear the charges of this mode of transportation from and to the most distant parts of the country. The Act so far from throwing hampering restrictions or obstacles in the way of the operation of this salutory rule, gives it all the aid of its sanction and safeguards providing that the carrier shall be entitled to receive a reasonable compensation for the service performed upon open published rates, against which no competitor can take advantage by allowing shippers secret rebates and drawbacks in order to get the business. In the nature of things joint rates on long hauls usually are, and as a rule should be, lower in proportion to distance than local rates on short hauls of the same commodity. Further HELD, local rates from Dalton to Knoxville Johnson City and Bristol not unreasonable. Joint rates to Roanoke and Lynchburg unreasonable to extent they exceeded 17c to Roanoke and 18 c to Lynchburg. Farrar & Co. v. East Tennessee Virginia & Georgia R. O. 1 I. C. C. 764.

(c) The Joint rates on long hauls usually are, and should be, proportionately lower than local rates on short hauls. Farrar v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 764.

(d) The Act to Regulate Commerce aids the rule making the aggregate charge of transportation of freight less in proportion every hundred miles after the first. Farrar v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 764.

(da) In the nature of things joint rates on long hauls usually are, and as a rule should be, lower in proportion to distance than local rates on short hauls of the same commodity. Farrar & Co. v. E. Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 764, 767.

(db) One feature of the transportation of freight by railroads in long hauls on joint rates, or what are usually called through rates, unless there be exceptional conditions which modify the rule, is that the rate per ton per mile grows less in proportion to the greater distance, while the aggregate of the rate increases in proportion to such greater distance; but this is not found the case in the local rates of a railroad, where the stations are occasionally grouped, but more usually graded according to distance, except as an incident of rare and highly exceptional conditions of the transportation service. Business Men's Asso. of Minnesota v. C. St. P. M. & O. Ry., 2 I. C. C. 41, 47.

(e) Railroad companies making through and continuous lines cannot rid themselves of responsibility for unjust charges by breaking the haul in two and calling themselves carriers on the separate ends of their line. Brady v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 78.

(f) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates on oil from Washington, Pa. to Baltimore, Md., of 50c whereas rates from Bradford and Clarendon, Pa., and to Olean, N. Y., to Baltimore are 40c, although the distances are about the same, the rate from Washington being a local rate. HELD, rate attacked unreasonable to extent it exceeded 40c. Brady & Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 2 I. C. C. 78.

(g) Through and continuous lines imply through rates which must be reasonable rates. Brady & Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 2 I. C. C. 78, 80.

(h) When railroad companies make a through and continuous line and offer it for the use of the public, they can not rid themselves of responsibility for unjust charges by breaking the haul in two and calling themselves carriers on the separate ends of the line. Brady & Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 2 I. C. C. 78, 81.

(i) Complainant attacked rates from Chicago, Ill., to Lincoln, Neb., as unjust and unreasonable in themselves, and as compared with the rates to Omaha and other competing towns in Nebraska. The Omaha rate is not based alone upon the mileage of the defendant road to that city, but as several lines from Chicago concentrate at Omaha, the mileage of the shortest route is the one which practically governs in the determination of the rate. The rates from Omaha and from Lincoln to interior Nebraska points are so arranged that the rates from Chicago are practically the same whether the freight is handled by jobbers at Omaha or Lincoln. Neither can the ratio of rates charged through the sparsely settled regions of the distant west decrease in proportion to distance without depriving the carriers of necessary revenue, and although this condition may not exist about Lincoln, yet, as the road is almost wholly confined to supplying the necessities of a farming population and the distribution of farm products, the possibilities of such tariff reduction as is made upon roads fed by mineral resources cannot be expected. HELD, complaint dismissed. Lincoln Board of Trade v. B. & M. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 95.

(j) Complainant attacked rates on coal as unduly prejudical from Hocking Valley and Pittsburgh mines to the northwest through Chicago as compared with the proportion of the through rates accepted by the Chicago destination lines on this coal and also because this proportion is lower than the local rate from Chicago. The rates from Chicago in some instances apply through Illinois mines from which points the rates are higher to the destination territory involved. A reduction of the rates on local shipments from Chicago to the proportion received by the northwestern lines upon the division of the through rates from the east, would involve either a general reduction from the entire group under the fourth section of the act, or an abandonment by defendant of the through rates in question, neither of which would benefit the complainant, while both would do great injury to all other interests involved. Under such circumstances the preference is not undue, nor is the advantage complained of unreasonable. HELD, complaint dismissed. Rend v. C. & N. W. R. R., 2 I. C. C. 313.

(k) At common law, the refusal of a common carrier to make through traffic arrangements, at, or upon joint through rates, with one connecting railroad company, such as it makes, or enters into, with another connecting line, does not constitute any undue or unreasonable discrimination in charges or facilities. Kentucky & Indiana Bridge Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 351.

(l) Section 5258 of the U. S. Rev. Stat. (embracing the Act of June 15, 1866) imposes no duty; it merely permits, or authorizes, the carriage of traffic from one State to another, and to that end, the formation of continuous lines, by mutual agreement. It confers no power to compel a railroad company to make through routes and through rates with one connecting line, because it has, by agreement, made them with another. Kentucky & Indiana Bridge Co. v. Louisvile & Nashville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 351.

(m) Through rates, like any other agreements that parties competent to contract may make, admit of very great variety in the forms they assume; and such rates, when reasonable and fairly adjusted in their relations to local business, are greatly favored in the Law because they furnish cheapened rates and greater facilities to the public, while at the same time they give increased employment and earnings to a larger number of carriers. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. Flint & Pere Marquette R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 393.

(n) A through rate does not unjustly discriminate against an intermediate point because less proportionally than the rate from such point to the common destination. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 393.

(o) As through rates are made by the American system of roads, agreed percentages of the total rate, considerably less in amount than the local rates of the respective roads receiving such percentages, are usually a leading feature of such through rates, and it is eminently proper, as a general rule, that this should be so. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. F. & P. M. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 393, 398.

(p) Where a rate is in itself a through rate, and made up of percentages to an intermediate point on a long haul, the circumstances and conditions of transportation must be rarely exceptional indeed, to be of such controlling force as to warrant any considerable excess of such a rate in amount, over a percentage of a through rate for an equal distance, along the same line, by way of the same point, to a more distant point. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. F. & P. M. R., 2 I. C. C. 393, 399.

(q) The transportation by a railroad company to a certain point on its line, of freight received from a connecting carrier which had reserved the right to forward the property by any carrier it might select, especially where the freight thereon was to be paid at the point of destination by the purchaser, is not a service rendered for the party by whom the through shipment is made, but for the connecting carrier; and therefore there may be an unlawful discrimination between the charges for such service and for a shipment by the same shipper to the same consignee at the same destination over the local line alone. United States v. Tozer (D. C. E. D. Mo.) 2 I. C. R. 597.

(r) An unreasonable adjustment of joint rates for through transportation may constitute an unreasonable discrimination against local traffic. United States v. Tozer, 2 I. C. R. (D. C. E. D. Mo.) 597.

(s) Through rates are not required to be made on a mileage basis, nor local rates to correspond with the divisions of a joint through rate over the same line, mileage is usually an element of importance, and due regard to distance proportions should be observed in connection with the other considerations that are material in fixing transportation charges. McMorran v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 604.

(t) Through rates are not required to be made on a mileage basis, nor local rates to correspond with the divisions of a joint through rate over the same line. McMorran v. Grand Trunk R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 604.

(u) Where property is billed from one station to another with the understanding that it is to be unloaded at an intermediate station, and that whether it shall be reloaded for further carriage will depend upon the volition of the shipper or of anyone who may have become purchaser, the case does not fall within the reasons governing rates on through transportation and the carrier is not at such intermediate points entitled to have the carriage protected as a through shipment as against competitors. Chicago Rock Island & Pacific R. Co. v. Chicago & Alton R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 721.

(v) Where property is to be transported by rail by continuous and uninterrupted carriage from one station to another, there may be sound and legal reasons for making a charge for the through transportation which is less than the sum of the locals for the transportation of like property from point to point between such stations. C. R. I. & P. R. v. C. & A. R., 2 I. C. C. 721, 725.

(w) Through rates are rates supposed to be fixed for through carriage and they differ from the sums of the locals because they are supposed to involve less cost and less labor to the carriers than do the local shipments. There is supposed to be but one loading and unloading. There is supposed to be less time occupied with men and equipment than would be necessary if the same freight were taken the same distance with one or more stoppages and unloadings on the way. It is for these reasons that the lesser aggregate charge for one shipment is made in practice and is justified in the law. C. R. I. & P. R. Co. v. C. & A. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 721, 725.

(x) In considering such questions concerning the transportation of cotton from Southern States to northern and Eastern mills and Atlantic ports, thru the circumstances and conditions surrounding the traffic in the respective services performed in its carriage by the rail carriers may be, and in these proceedings are found to be, substantially dissimilar and wholly unlike. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. Illinois Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 777.

(y) When questions involve the reasonableness of rates upon the transportation of cotton from the Southern States by all-rail lines to northern and eastern mills and Atlantic ports upon through rates and a long haul, on the one hand, and, on the other, the local rates of rail carriers to a near port upon a short haul at which their service terminates, they having no associated line of steamships for a continuous carriage to ultimate destination, but the cotton so carried by them to such near port being chiefly for export, and all such rail lines penetrating the same territory and competing for the same business, running north, south and east in opposite directions, such questions can only be disposed of on broad lines and not from narrow considerations. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. Illinois Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 777.

(z) The theory of a combination rate made up of a through rate to some point and the local back to another point on the same line, without showing the straight rate on the schedules, although popular with carriers, is an anomaly in rate making. A straight rate to every point on the line and duly shown on the tariff sheets is undoubtedly the correct method. Lehmann Higginson & Co. v. S. P. Co.. 3 I. C. C. 80, 91.

(aa) The joint through rate to Boston on flour is one that is forced upon the all-rail carriers by the competition of a water line not subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, and is a rate, low as it is, in which there is a small margin of profit to the all-rail carriers, while the combined local rates to Readville, although considerably higher, relate to a service that is wholly different in all its material features, methods and aspects, rendered by the carriers under circumstances and conditions that are substantially dissimilar. King & Co. v. N. Y. N. Haven & H. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 273.

(bb) Through rates may be lower, proportionately, according to distance than local rates, and this does not necessarily involve unjust discrimination. Capehart v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 278, 282.

(cc) An aggregate through rate is itself an entirety, although made up of agreed percentages, proportions or divisions of the entire rate among the several carriers. S. C. Capehart v. L. & N. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 278, 282.

(dd) The rate over through lines is correctly adjusted upon the distance through, and not upon the shorter distances over the several lines. Coxe v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 460.

(ee) Through transportation over connecting lines is favored by the statute, and the rate over such through lines is correctly adjusted upon the distance through, and not upon the shorter distances over, the several lines. Coxe Bros. & Co. v. L. V. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 460, 472.

(ff) Several railway companies forming a continuous through line carried certain traffic to the terminal point at a 30 cent rate and for the same rate to an intermediate point, and to a point on a branch line more distant than the said intermediate but less distant than said terminal point they maintained a rate of 42 cents on the like traffic: HELD That the roads might lawfully maintain the same rate at the intermediate and terminal points, and that some higher rate might be maintained to the branch line point off the direct through line wihout unjust discrimination. HELD further, that as to the branch line point the complainant was entitled to a refund of the amount paid in excess of a reasonable rate. Lehmann, Higginson & Co. v. Texas & Pacific R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 706.

(gg) Circumstances and conditions which affect the question of reasonable rates on strawberries from points in Florida to New York City, including such characteristics of the traffic and its transportation as volume, weight, bulk, value, perishability, risk, expense of handling and quick carriage in perishable freight trains, and return of empty cars, stated and compared with those surrounding the transportation of oranges and other traffic carried by defendant in the same trains. Upon the facts appearing in this case, HELD, That defendants' rates for services rendered in receiving, forwarding by their perishable freight trains, and delivering strawberries from Florida points to New York City should not exceed $3.33 per hundred pounds or $1.66½ per crate of fifty pounds from Callahan, Fla., to New York, and from Lawley. Hammock Ridge, and other stations more distant from New York than Callahan, the total through rates should not be unreasonably in excess of the charge from Callahan, and should be filed with the Commission and published according to law. Perry v. Fla. Central & Peninsular R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 740.

(hh) Carriers should not treat shipments of traffic intended to be continuous between interstate points as consisting of two kinds of service independent of each other, the one to or from a so called basing or competitive point on a through rate, and the other between the basing or competitive point and a so-called local or intermediate point on a local rate. Perry v. F. C. & P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 741, 748.

(ii) The only justification for a through rate less than an intermediate rate on the same articles is the compulsion of rail carriers to accept the reduced compensation or suffer ocean rivals to perform the service, and where the pressure of this alternative is not felt, there is no ground upon which the lower through charge can be excused. Merchants' Union v. Northern P. R. Co. (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 183.

(jj) Comparison of the local freight rate from a terminal to an intermediate point on a carrier's line, with the share which it receives of a joint through rate established with a connecting carrier for hauling freight received from the latter between such points, is not a proper method of determining whether or not the local rate is within the provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, §3, which prohibits undue and unreasonable preference or advantages. Tozer v. United States (C. C. N. D. Mo.), 4 I. C. R. 245.

(kk) No unlawful discrimination against a railroad is effected by the traffic arrangement of a rival road running parallel with it for a considerable distance from their common initial point, by which through tickets are sold to points on the rival road beyond the point of divergence exclusively over the latter, without granting the former any facilities for securing a share of the traffic to such points for the distance which it could carry it. Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. (C. C. W. D. Tenn.), 4 I. C. R. 261.

(ll) Where the roads and branches of two companies extend to and penetrate a wheat producing district, from which they make a joint rate for distances of 480 miles, and each company makes the same rate separately from the same district, one for distances of 450 and the other for distances of 650 miles over their respective lines to the same destination, the rates so jointly and separately made must be held excessive for a shorter distance of 311 miles over a less expensive route, from the same district to the same destination. Newland v. Northern P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 131.

(mm) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates on strawberries and vegetables from Charleston, S. C., destined to New York, where delivery is made by the roads at the terminus of the rail line in Jersey and in computing the total cost of transportation to New York, the expense of carriage over from Jersey City is to be added to the rate to that point. The carriers are charging for a less service the compensation which they had presumably deemed adequate for a greater and the rates to Jersey City as applied are prima facie excessive. HELD, rates charged unreasonable to extent they applied the rates from Jersey City to New York on shipments delivered at Jersey City. Truck Farmers' Asso. v. Northeastern R. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. 295.

(nn) Carriers cannot charge through rates on traffic over a line formed by connection of two or more roads, which, as a whole, are less than the rates in force on similar traffic carried under similar conditions in the same direction over either road. Daniels v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 458.

(oo) The word "line" as used in the statute means a physical line, not a mere business arrangement; and carriers are prohibited from charging through rates on traffic over a line formed by connection of two or more roads which are less as a whole than the rates in force on like traffic carried under similar conditions in the same direction over either of the constituent roads in such line. Daniels v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. 458, 476.

(pp) Unreasonable disparity between aggregate rates on hauls of different length to a common destination, whether by one carrier or by more than one jointly, resulting in undue advantage to one locality or business or disadvantage to another, is unlawful. It is lawful for a carrier, within reasonable limits, to accept less per ton per mile upon long hauls than upon short ones, and to widen the disparity between such rates per ton per mile as the difference in distance increases. Hence, the proportion received by some of the carriers out of a long distance through rate is not necessarily the measure of the through rate which such carriers are entitled to make over a materially shorter distance, though such proportion is an important consideration in determining the rightful relation of the two through rates. Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 6 I. C. C. 488.

(qq) The practice of making through rates on continuous shipments by combination of charges separately established for distant services is unjust. Re Alleged Unlawful Transportation Charges, 6 I. C. C. 624.

(rr) Application of combination rates to through and continuous shipments criticed as unjust. Alleged Unlawful Transportation Charges By I. C. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 624.

(ss) The through rate over a railroad 18½ miles long (10½ miles in Arkansas and 8 in Missouri) was $1.85, 10 cents per mile. The local charges between the stations in Arkansas were on the basis of 5 cents per mile, any higher charge being unlawful under the statute of the State. On roads of this class in Missouri the rate authorized is 4 cents to the mile. The net earnings are in excess of a moderate return on the actual investment of the railway company, but are less than in former years. HELD, that the through rate is unreasonable and unjust, and HELD, further, that any through rate over the road in excess of $1.20 (6½ cents per mile) is unreasonable and unlawful. Board R. & W. Comrs. of Mo. v. Eureka Springs Ry. Co., 7 I. C. C. 69.

(tt) Freight carried by the Louisville & N. R. Co., from New Orleans, either to Atlanta or La Grange, is through freight, entitled to through service, and the manner in which the service is conducted cannot alter its character so as to make that carried for La Grange partly local, while that to Atlanta is wholly through. Calloway v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 431.

(uu) Rates to noncompetitive points will not be held to be unreasonably high when made up of the through rate to that competitive point, which, when combined with the local rate from that point to the point of destination, will give the lowest through rate to the non-competitive point, where the carriage of freight to the respective competitive points is remunerative to the carriers to the extent that it pays the expenses of moving. I. C. C. v. Western & Atlanta R. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. App. LXXVII.

(vv) The defendants, having engaged under their tariffs and course of business in the through transportation of traffic from Chicago and other points to Kearney, Neb., over continuous lines formed by their connected roads, are required by the Act to Regulate Commerce to make their rates on such transportation reasonable and otherwise in conformity with the provisions of that statute, and such duty is not avoided by the fact that the rates to Kearney may be combinations of rates to and from Omaha. Gustin v. Atchinson, T. & S. F. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 277.

(ww) The denial by a railroad company of through joint rates on asbestos material to shippers at an intermediate station, from whom it exacts higher rates, subject such dealers to undue prejudice in their competition with other dealers for the sale of similar material. Chicago Fire Proof Covering Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 316.

(xx) The L. & N. Co. makes certain local rates on rosin and turpentine from stations on its P. & A. division in Florida to Pensacola, Fla., and it joins with connecting carriers in making certain through group rates from the same stations to Savanah, Ga. For its service to the junction point the L. & N. exacts shares of the through joint rates to Savannah which greatly exceed its purely local rates for like distances to Pensacola, while the shares accepted by its connecting carriers are reasonably low. Upon consideration of all the facts and circumstances,—HELD. That the shares of the L. & N. Co. in the through rates to Savanah are unreasonable and unjust and operate to make the entire through rates unlawful under sections 1 and 3 of the Act in comparison with the rates to Pensacola. That rates on rosin and turpentine from such P. & A. division stations to Savanah should be adjusted to the rates to Pensacola by adding to the local rates of the L. & N. Co. for the distance to Pensacola which is nearest to the distance from each station to River Junction, the present share accepted by the carriers to Savanah from River Junction; provided, however, that on shipments of turpentine to Savanah from stations east of Mossy Head the L. & N. Co. should have more than its local rate for the like distance to Pensacola, and that such rate should be determined by adding a differential of 6 cents to the L. & N. rate from Sneads to Pensacola, the carriers east of River Junction accepting their present share from such stations east of Mossy Head. Savanah Bureau of F. & T. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 377.

(yy) Complainants alleged that defendants rates on sugar and other commodities from New York to Chipley and other points in Florida were unlawful as compared with the rates for the greater distances to Pensacola, Mobile and New Orleans, but the evidence was insufficient to warrant a conclusion. Rates charged on bacon and other commodities from Savanah, Ga., to stations in Florida on the L. & N., were not shown to be unlawful in comparison with rates on like traffic to those stations from New Orleans or Pensacola. Defendants rate on uncompressed cotton from stations in Florida on the L. & N., to Savanah was $2.75 per bale at the time of hearing, when complaint was filed, and for some years prior thereto, but subsequent to the hearing this rate was increased to $3.30 per bale. The rates to Mobile and New Orleans were, and still are, $2.00 and $2.50 per bale. HELD that the rate of $2.75 per bale to Savannah was unlawful, and any higher rate on such cotton to Savannah than for the former difference of 25c per bale above the rate in force from the stations same to New Orleans violates section 1 and 3 of the act. The L. & N., makes certain local rates on rosin and terpentine from stations on its P. & A., division in Florida to Pensacola Fla., and it joins with connecting carriers in making certain through group rates from the same stations to Savannah, Ga. For its services to the junction point the L. & N., exacts shares of the through joint rates to Savannah which greatly exceed its purely local rates for like distances to Pensacola, while the shares accepted by its connecting carriers are reasonably low. HELD, that the shares of the L. & N., in the through rate to Savannah are unreasonable and unjust and operate to make the entire through rates unlawful under sections 1 and 3 of the act in comparison with the rates to Pensacola. That rates on rosin and turpentine from such P. & A. division stations to Savannah should be adjusted to the rates to Pensacola by adding to the local rates of the L. & N., for the distance to Pensacola which is nearest to the distance from each station to River Junction, the present share accepted by carriers to Savannah from River Junction; provided that on shipments of turpentine to Savannah from stations east of Mosey Head the L. & N., should have more than its local rate for the like distance to Pensacola, and that such rate should be determined by adding a differential of 6c to the L. & N., rate from Sneads to Pensacola, the carriers east of River Junction accepting their present share from such stations east of Mossy Head. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transportation v. L. & N. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 377.

(zz) In determining the Danville rate from New Orleans and western points of shipment, the Southern Railway, which dominates the situation, should, instead of adding to the rate to Lynchburg the local back from Lynchburg, recognize that the business is through business upon which Lynchburg, a competitor of Danville, enjoys a low through rate, and upon which Danville itself is entitled to a through rate. Danville v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 409.

(3ab) The system of rate-making into southern territory under which, on traffic from St. Louis, Chicago and other points, the rates to Danville are the sums of locals to and from the Ohio River, and the rates to Lynchburg are made on a much lower joint-rate basis, is utterly unreasonable. Rates to Danville should be adjusted with relation to through rates to competitive localities like Lynchburg, and the carriers from points of origin to destination should prorate in these rates if they participate in either Lynchburg or Danville business. Danville v. Southern R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 409.

(3c) Rates consisting of combinations of the through rates for the haul through one town to another and the local rates from such town back to the former, whereby the merchants of the more distant town may compete with the merchants of the nearer at their own doors on equal terms, and are able to undersell them in the territories between the localities, is in violation of §§ 3 and 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Board of Trade of Hampton v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 503.

(3d) The rate on roofing slag, carloads, from Leesport, Pa., to Harlem River Station, is $3.40 per ton, of which the carriers to Communipaw, N. J., on the Hudson River, receive $1.30 per ton, the balance, amounting to $2.10 per ton, going to the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Co. for its service in carrying the slag by its car floats from Communipaw around New York City to its Harlem River Station. Such through rate also applies as a group rate to numerous stations on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. in what is known as the Hartford group, including Waterbury, Conn. The freight could be transferred by an independent lighterage company from Communipaw to Harlem for 80 cents per ton, and railroads terminating on the New Jersey shore generally allow 60 cents per ton for lighterage to points within New York lighterage limits. HELD, upon all the facts, that the through rate of $3.40 to Harlem River is grossly unreasonable, and is rendered so by the excessive share of $2.10 to the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Co. for transfer by its car floats from Communipaw to Harlem River; that reasonable compensation for such delivery by car float should not exceed $1.00 per ton, and this added to the share of $1.30 received by the connecting carriers constitutes a reasonable and lawful rate of $2.30 per ton, which the defendant carriers are recommended to put in force; that the complainant is entitled to reparation on a shipment of two carloads of slag to the extent of the difference between the rate charged and the rate found reasonable. The propriety of the $3.40 rate per ton applied as a group rate to all stations in the Hartford group is not passed upon in this proceeding.

Warren-Ehert Co. v. Central R. of N. J., 8 I. C. C. 598.

(3e) Complainant attacked rates charged on lumber from West Virginia and southwestern Virginia to New York, N. Y., as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. Lumber in carloads is shipped from points in West Virginia and southwestern Virginia to New York over the N. & W., to Hagerstown, and thence via the P. R. R., to destination, and over the N. & W., to Shenandoah Junction thence via B. & O., under rates made by adding to those of the N. & W., to Hagerstown and Shenandoah Junction a specific or arbitrary of 13 c per 100 pounds charged by the Pennsylvania and B. & O. This specific rate was advanced from 12 to 13c in 1893, and the N. & W., charges were generally increased in 1899 and 1900 about 1½c per 100 pounds. Much lower rates on competing lumber have been and are maintained from neighboring points in the same shipping section to New York by the B. & O., and by the C. & O., connecting with the B. & O., at Staunton and the Pennsylvania at Washington. The N. & W., line is considerably longer than the C. & C., but present rates by the N. & W., yield higher rates per ton per mile than those of the C. & O. The rates from N. & W., points to Philadelphia are 6c lower than those for the 90 miles greater distance to New York, while on the C. & O., the difference in favor of Philadelphia against New York is only 2c. HELD, the through rates attacked are unreasonable and unlawful, and that there should be an aggregate reduction in the through rate of 2½c per 100 pounds. National Wholesale Lumber Dealers Asso. v. N. & W. Ry. 9 I. C. C. 87.

(3f) Lumber in carloads is shipped from points in West Virginia and southwestern Virginia to New York City over the N. & W. Ry. to Hagerstown, and thence via the P. R. R. to destination, and over the N. & W. to Shenandoah Junction and thence via the B. & O. R. R., under rates made by adding to those of the N. & W. to Hagerstown and Shenandoah Junction a specific or arbitrary of 13 cents per 100 lbs. charged by the Penn. and B. & O., respectively, therefrom. This specific rate was advanced from 12 to 13 cents in 1893, and the N. & W. charges were generally increased in 1899 and 1900 about 1½ cents per 100 lbs. Much lower rates on competing lumber have been and are maintained from neighboring points in the same shipping section to New York by the B. & O. and by the C. & O. Ry. connecting with the B. & O. at Staunton and the P. R. R. at Washington. The N. & W. line is considerably longer than the C. & O. line, but present rates by the N. & W. yield higher rates per ton per mile than those of the C. & O. line. The rates from N. & W. points to Philadelphia, Pa., are 6 cents lower than those for the 90 miles greater distance to New York, while on the C. & O. the difference in favor of Philadelphia against New York is only 2 cents. HELD, upon all the facts and circumstances, that the through rates complained of are unreasonable and unlawful, and that there should be an aggregate reduction in the through rates of 2½ cents per 100 lbs. Nat. W. Lumber Dealers' Asso. v. N. & W. Ry. Co. et al., 9 I. C. C. 87.

(3g) The failure of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Omaha Railroad to publish through freight rates from Chicago and other points to Norfolk, Neb., while such through rates are established and published by that company in connection with other carriers to other points on its line in Nebraska, amounts to unlawful discrimination against Norfolk. Johnson v. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 221.

(3h) The rule laid down in Johnston-Larimer D. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 6 I. C. C. Rep. 586, forbidding any higher charge to Wichita than to Kansas City on shipments from Galveston, is, in the light of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, no longer applicable; and defendants operating lines through Wichita to Kansas City are not prohibited from charging a higher rate to Wichita than to Kansas City, so long as the Wichita rate is reasonable. Lehman-Higginson Grocery Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 460.

(3ha) Complainant attacked as unduly discriminatory rates on grain from Cannon Falls, Minn., to Chicago, Ill., as compared with the rates from Minneapolis, Minn., and rates on rye from the same points to Louisville, Ky. With competition for the carriage of grain to and via Duluth and other northern lake ports, rates of 10c on wheat and 7½c on other grain from Minneapolis to Chicago are as high as can be obtained by the all rail lines between those points, and competition by lines other than defendants from Minneapolis to St. Louis has fixed the rates via all lines 10c, and this controls the rate to Louisville. The rates from Cannon Falls, 48 miles from Minneapolis, to Chicago, East St. Louis and Louisville are also competitive rates, and in its competition with Minneapolis, Cannon Falls is entitled to as low rates to common points as the difference in conditions will permit. In view, however, of the desirability of keeping open the Minneapolis market for Cannon Falls grain, the short distance between those points, and the low rates from Minneapolis forced by competition, it is apparently not unjust that the grain rate from Cannon Falls should be as high as the local rate to Minneapolis plus a 7½c rate therefrom to Chicago, provided the Cannon Falls dealer is not thereby subjected to disadvantage as compared with the Minneapolis grain dealer. HELD, Cannon Falls shipper is subjected to disadvantage as follows: the combination of rates on rye and other coarse grain from Cannon Falls to Minneapolis and Minneapolis to Chicago is ½c less than the straight rate from Cannon Falls to Chicago and is without justification. The favorable location of Cannon Falls with reference to Minneapolis and Duluth and the competitive advantage to which the Cannon Falls dealer is entitled by reason of the route via Duluth, are neutralized to an extent by manipulation of billing at Minneapolis whereby Cannon Falls grain sold in Minneapolis can be reconsigned to Duluth under a substituted billing and the balance of a through rate, resulting in a less total charge from Cannon Falls to Duluth than the charge on a through shipment from Cannon Falls to Duluth. The rate on rye, barley and other coarse grains from Cannon Falls to Louisville or East St. Louis is wrongfully higher than the rate on wheat between the same points. Cannon Falls Elevator Company v. C. G. W. Ry. 10 I. C. C. 650.

(3i) It is well understood that a through rate may properly be less than the sum of the locals to or from a divisional point. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. M. & O. R. R. 11 I. C. C. 90, 101.

(3j) The St. Louis S. W. R. Co. should not be required to make through rates via Memphis merely because it has established through rates from more southerly stations, Kendalls and points south via Gale or Thebes, Cairo or East St. Louis. Re Freight Rates between Memphis and Points in Arkansas, 11 I. C. C. 180.

(3k) This case, involving the reasonableness and justice of freight rates from Chicago, St. Louis, and other Ohio River and Mississippi River points, is similar to, and was held to await the final disposition of, the case of Wilmington Tariff Asso. v. Cincinnati, P. & V. R. Co. 9 I. C. C. Rep. 118, in which proceeding the Commission entered an order requiring correction of rates from the same points to Wilmington, N. C.; but such order the United States circuit court declined to enforce. During the present year the rates from Chicago to Ohio River crossings have been materially reduced on shipments destined to southeastern points, resulting in reduction of through rates from Chicago to Charleston and Wilmington. HELD, that in view of the decision of the circuit court in the Wilmington Case, no enforceable order of relief can be predicated upon the facts shown in this case, and the complaint must be dismissed. Bureau of Freight & Transportation of Charleston, S. C., v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 235.

(3l) Defendant carries coal to Baltimore destined finally to "points outside the Capes" (largely to New England seaboard points), and shipments of the same coal may also be made to Norfolk an Atlantic seaport. The rate to Baltimore on coal reshipped to "outside the Capes" points is forced by the competition of lines from other mines, and under such rate defendant secures a large annual tonnage via its line to the port of Baltimore. The rate to Baltimore on coal for Norfolk is the local rate to Baltimore. If the shipments to Norfolk and points outside the Capes be regarded as through shipments, on what are in essence through rates, the competition stated might justify a higher rate to Baltimore when the final destination is Norfolk than when it is a point outside the capes; but if this coal is all purely local to Baltimore, there is much doubt whether, as a matter of law, defendant can charge for the haul to Baltimore more in one case than in the other. City Gas Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 371.

(3m) The fact that through rates are less than the sum of in and out rates is not of itself a valid ground of objection, nor is it unlawful for defendants to maintain reconsignment rates which are higher in some cases than their proportion of through rates. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 486.

(3n) It is well understood that a through rate may properly be less than the sum of the locals to and from a divisional point. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. I. C. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 486, 493.

(3o) The result of the excessive rate on cotton-piece goods between the Missouri River and Denver, and the application of full locals in making up the through combination rate to New York, Boston, and other eastern points taking the same rate to Denver, is to make the through rate to Denver excessive; and such through rate to Denver, to be reasonable, should not exceed $1.50 per hundred pounds. Kindel v. Boston & A. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 495.

(3p) The application of combined local charges to a long-distance shipment places a wrongful burden upon the shipper. Kindel v. Boston & A. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 495.

(3q) Transcontinental rates from eastern points to San Francisco are made in competition with water rates, and are in no sense the measure of the value of the services; but that situation does not justify the carriage of goods to San Francisco at a loss, thereby placing additional burdens on other traffic. Kindel v. Boston & A. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 495.

(3qa) Complainant attacked rates as unjustly discriminatory and unreasonable charged on ticking, drills, and sheetings from New York to Denver of $2.24 whether carload or less carload, while duck is given a rate of $1.66 carload, and denims $1.79 carload; that denim, duck, drills and sheetings take lower rates to San Francisco, and duck drills, and sheetings take lower rates to Denver than ticking to the same points. HELD, the fact that a carload rating has been established on cotton piece goods from the east to Pacific coast points because of water competition, and the fact that duck and denims have been given carload rates to Salt Lake City and Denver to encourage manufacturing industries at those points, while elsewhere throughout the country the rate on cotton piece goods is the same for any quantity, do not indicate that the action of defendants in denying a carload rating on ticking, drills and sheeting to Denver is unlawful. Defendants rates per hundred pounds on cotton piece goods in less carloads from New York, Boston and other eastern points are $2.24 to Denver and $1.50 to San Francisco. The charge to Denver is a combination of rates from the point of shipment to the Mississippi River, from that river to the Missouri River and Missouri River to Denver. From New York to Chicago, from Chicago to Denver, and from St. Louis to Denver for a long period of years cotton piece goods have been given rates substantially below the rates on first class articles, and throughout the United States greater or less differentials on cotton piece goods under first class have been maintained with one notable exception, namely, from Missouri River to Denver. Transcontinental rates from eastern points to San Francisco are made in competition with water rates, and are in no sense a measure of the value of the service; but that situation does not justify the carriage of goods to San Francisco at a loss, thereby placing additional burdens on other traffic. The rate of $1.50 on cotton piece goods from the east to San Francisco, about 3,400 miles, is assumed to cover the actual cost of service, and that rate for the 1400 to 1600 miles less distance to Denver, and saving the haul of that distance over mountain ranges where fuel and labor are counted more expensive, is found to be reasonable for the transportation from eastern points to Denver. Under the present combination rate to Denver no reduction from local charges is made on account of the through haul of 2,000 miles. Such application of combined local charges to a long distance shipment places a wrongful burden upon the shipper. The exaction of first class rates on cotton piece goods between Missouri River points to Denver in view of the long prevailing differentials in other parts of the country and other existing conditions is unjust and unreasonable. HELD, the result of the excessive rate on cotton piece goods between the Missouri River and Denver and the application of full locals in making up the through combination rate from New York Boston and other eastern points taking the same rates to Denver is to make the through rate excessive, and such through rate to Denver to be reasonable should not exceed $1.50 per hundred pounds. Kindel v. B. & A. R. R. 11 I. C. C. 495.

(3qb) Defendants' rates per hundred pounds on cotton-piece goods in less than carloads from New York, Boston and other eastern points are $2.24 to Denver and $1.50 to San Francisco. The charge to Denver is a combination of rates from the point of shipment to the Mississippi River, Mississippi River to Missouri River, and Missouri River to Denver. From New York to Chicago, from Chicago to Denver, and from St. Louis to Denver for a long period of years cotton-piece goods have been given rates substantially below the rates on first class articles, and throughout the United States greater or less differentials on cotton-piece goods under first class have been maintained with one notable exception, namely, from Missouri River points to Denver. Transcontinental rates from eastern points to San Francisco are made in competition with water rates, and are in no sense a measure of the value of the service; but that situation does not justify the carriage of goods to San Francisco at a loss, thereby placing additional burdens on other traffic. The rate of $1.50 on cotton-piece goods from the east to San Francisco, about 3400 miles, is assumed to cover the actual cost of the service, and that rate for the 1400 to 1600 miles less distance to Denver, and saving the haul of that distance over mountain ranges where fuel and labor are counted more expensive, is found to be reasonable for the transportation from New York, Boston and other eastern points to Denver. Under the present combination rate to Denver no reduction from local charges is made on account of the through haul of 2,000 miles. Such application of combined local charges to a long distance shipment places a wrongful burden upon the shipper. The exaction of first class rates on cotton-piece goods between Missouri River points and Denver in view of the long-prevailing differentials in other parts of the country and other existing conditions is unjust and unreasonable. HELD, That the result of the excessive rate on cotton-piece goods between the Missouri River and Denver and the application of full locals in making up the through combination rate from New York, Boston and other eastern points taking the same rates to Denver is to make the through rate excessive, and that such through rate to Denver to be reasonable should not exceed $1.50 per hundred pounds. Kindel v. Boston & R. R. Co. et al. 11 I. C. C. 495.

(3r) In October, 1902, complainant shipped over defendant's road and connections a carload of potatoes from Good Thunder, Minn., to Washington, D. C., on which the rate was 46 cents per 100 pounds, and another carload of potatoes from Mankato, Minn., to Scranton, Pa., on which the rate was 50.2 cents per 100 pounds. As there were no through rates in force, the Good Thunder shipment was moved at the combination of the published rates to and from Chicago, and upon the Mankato shipment there was $13.39 overcharge above the published combination rate of 47 cents. In 1889 the "Soo Line" put in through rates on potatoes from St. Paul and Minneapolis to New York, Philadelphia and Boston of 40 cents per 100 pounds, which were met by the American lines. The "Soo Line" kept the rate in force until April, 1898, when it was withdrawn, and in June, 1898, all lines, including the "Soo Line" put in force rates of 37 cents to New York, 40 cents to Boston, 35 cents to Philadelphia, and 34 cents to Baltimore. These rates were not effective from Mankato or from Good Thunder, the first station south of Mankato. By most lines the St. Paul and Minneapolis rates to the eastern points mentioned applied as maximum rates to intermediate points. From September, 1900, to April, 1903, the Chicago Great Western had in force a rate on potatoes from Mankato to eastern seaboard destinations 2 cents higher than from St. Paul and apparently this rate was also used over the Chicago & Northwestern line. Complainant cannot handle potatoes at Mankato or Good Thunder for these eastern shipments under the Chicago rate combination. At the time of the shipments above specified complaint was shipping over the Great Western and Northwestern at 2 cents above the St. Paul rate. Though the through rates from St. Paul are the result of competition, they have been long in force as normal rates, are reasonable and just, and as high as could properly be applied to this traffic. HELD: That defendant's rates on potatoes in carloads from Mankato and Good Thunder to Washington, Scranton, and other eastern destinations, are unreasonable and unjust, and that the St. Paul rate may also be used, for the purposes of this case, as a standard of comparison. That reasonable and just rates on potatoes in carloads from Mankato and Good Thunder to Washington and Scranton would be 39 cents to Scranton and 38 cents to Washington, and said rates would be 4 cents above the rates from St. Paul; and defendant is also recommended to put in corresponding rates from Mankato and Good Thunder to the various eastern destinations. That complainant is entitled to reparation for excessive rates on the shipments in question. Hoerr v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 548.

(3s) There is no competitive relation between petroleum and its products on the one hand, and other articles of traffic on the other; and the failure of the New Haven Company to provide joint rates on petroleum and its products, while maintaining joint rates on other traffic, does not constitute wrongful preference and advantage. Fred G. Clark Co. v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 558.

(3t) Complaint shipped two carloads of flour from Lamar, Mo., to Hope, Ark., by the St. L. & S. F. R. R. in December, 1903 under a milling-in-transit rate from Pennsboro and Everton, the same rate applying from Lamar, Pennsboro and Everton to Little Rock, Ark., and from that point the flour was carried by the St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. to Hope under the rate in force between those points applying on interstate shipments. This rate from Little Rock to Hope was 42 cents per 100 pounds for a distance of 112 miles, and is the subject of complaint. The Arkansas Commission rate in force on state traffic from Little Rock to Hope is 11 cents. The M. P. and the St. L. I. M. & S. had in effect a through rate from Lamar to Hope of 28 cents, and to this must be added a $3 per car switching charge from complainant's mill to the M. P. tracks in Lamar. The rate by the M. P. line from Lamar to Litle Rock was 20 cents, the same as the rate by the St. L. & S. F. and its connecting line. Defendants subsequently reduced the charge on these carloads of flour from Little Rock to Hope from 42 to 24 cents per 100 pounds, refunding substantially the difference to complainant, and finally offered to reduce to the basis of a 19 cent rate applying from Memphis through Little Rock to Hope, which the tariff specified as the maximum charge between intermediate stations, but such offer of settlement was declined by complainant. This Memphis rate has since been increased to 20 cents. Upon all the facts and circumstances, HELD: That the rate of 42 cents for this service between Little Rock and Hope on interstate shipments of flour was grossly unreasonable; that the rate of 19 cents was, and the rate of 20 cents is, as applied to such service, unreasonable and unjust; and that a reasonable and just rate therefor would be 11 cents per 100 pounds. Complainant awarded reparation. J. W. Moran & Son v. Missouri I. R. Co. et al. 11 I. C. C. 598.

(3u) Complainant attacked as unreasonable rates charged on flour in carloads from Pennsboro and Everton, Mo., milled in transit at Lamar, Mo., and forwarded therefrom to Hope, Ark. Complainant shipped two carloads of flour from Lamar, Mo., to Hope, Ark., by the Frisco in December, 1903, under a milling in transit rate from Pennsboro and Everton to Little Rock, Ark., and from that point the flour was carried by the Iron Mountain to Hope under the rate in force between those points applying on interstate shipments. This rate from Little Rock to Hope was 42c, for a distance of 112 miles and is the subject of complaint. The state rate is 11c. The M. P. and Iron Mountain had in effect a through rate from Lamar to Hope of 28c and to this must be added a $3 per car switching charge from complainants mill to the M. P., tracks at Lamar. The rate via the M. P., from Lamar to Little Rock was 20c the same as the rate by the Frisco and its connecting line. Defendants subsequently reduced the charge on these carloads of flour from Little Rock to Hope from 42 to 24c, refunding substantially the difference to complainant, and finally offered to reduce to the basis of a 19c rate applying from Memphis through Little Rock to Hope, which the tariff specified as the maximum charge between intermediate stations, but such offer of settlement was declined by complainant. This Memphis rate has since been increased to 20c. HELD, the rate of 42c from Little Rock to Hope unreasonable; rate of 19c and 20c was unreasonable, that a reasonable rate would be 11c; reparation awarded. J. W. Moran & Son v. M. P. Ry. 11 I. C. C. 598.

(3v) While a carrier under the law may decline to join with its connections in the making of joint through routes and rates applicable thereon, or may join in such arrangements with one connection and refuse to do so with another, no carrier can for any reason or purpose lawfully exact unreasonable and unjust rates for any service which it may perform in the transportation or handling of interstate traffic. Moran & Son v. M. P. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 598, 604.

(3w) There are two routes over which coal may be shipped from the Thacker District, in West Virginia, to Alexandria, Ind.; one by the N. & W. and C. C. C. & St. L., the shorter line, and one by the N. & W., H. V., and L. E. & W. Complainants in 1903 had shipped to them at Alexandria, Ind., eight carloads of coal from the Thacker District, W. Va., over the latter route, and by that line the published rate was $1.90 per ton, while over the other route the rate was $1.65 per ton. November 26, 1903, the rate by the route used was reduced to $1.65, and later the other line lowered its rate to $1.55. Complainants, acting on behalf of the consignor, demanded reparation. The evidence relates solely to the rate itself, and the fact that a lower rate was in force over a competing short line. HELD, that the rate charged is not shown to have been unreasonable, and that, in view of their published tariff, the carriers in the through line over which the coal was carried could not lawfully apply the lower rate in effect over the competing line. J. J. Marley & Son v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 11 I. C. C. 616.

(3x) It often happens that where traffic moves over two or more railways a certain expense attaches to the interchange of that traffic, which makes reasonable the imposition of a higher rate than if the movement were over a single railroad for the same distance; and it is also true that one road might, as a matter of policy, decline to participate in a low rate which the other road desired to put in effect. Texas Cement Plaster Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. 12 I. C. C. 68, 72.

(3y) Through rates from Kalamazoo, Mich., to Elkhorn, Wis., via Chicago, on silos, conceded to be excessive to the extent of difference between that rate and combination rate on Chicago. Kalamazoo Tank & Silo Co. v. Michigan C. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 154.

(3z) Through rates to Freeport, Ill., via Chicago, from Oil City, Pa., on petroleum products reduced from 25½ cents per 100 to 23 cents, the combination rate. National Petroleum Asso. v. Pa. R. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 153.

(4a) Through rate to Pemberton N. J. on grain, flour and feed, carloads, from Chicago and other western points, of New York rate plus 5 cents, as compared with the rate to Mt. Holley, N. J. 6 miles west, which takes New York rate on account of developed water competition,—held excessive and prejudical, where former differential against Pemberton was 2 cents. DeCou v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 160.

(4c) Through rates to South Omaha, Neb., via East St. Louis, from Hollow Rock, and other Tennessee ponts, on cooperage products, alleged to be unreasonable when compared with rates on such commodities when destined for Alexandria, Mo., or Keokuk, Iowa; the South Omaha rate being a combination of the 14 cent rate of the Nashville C. & St. L. and Illinois Central, plus the local rate of 10 cents of the C. B. & Q., whereas the Keokuk or Alexandria rate was a joint rate of 19 cents, 14 cents to the first two carriers, and 5 cents to the C. B. &

Q., no complaint being made of the C. B. & Q. rate, and it appearing that some years ago the division gave the C. B. & Q. its full local from East St. Louis to Keokuk or Alexandria, and the two eastern carriers two cents less than the joint rate to East St. Louis; but the divisions as now made gives these two roads the same earnings on cooperage products carried from Tennessee points to East St. Louis, whether destined to South Omaha, Alexandria, or Keokuk. Complaint dismissed. Omaha Cooperage Co. v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 250.

(4d) Through rates to Hope, Ark., via Texarkana, from points north of Shreveport, La., on the T. & P. Railway, 30 cents per 100 held unreasonable and reduced to 17½ cents, the sum of the locals, with minimum carload rate of 30,000 pounds. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 265.

(4c) Through rate to Reno, Nev., from Marquette, Neb., on grain, necessity, for not shown. Poor Grain Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 469.

(4g) A through rate for transportation over a line composed of two or more separate roads greater than would be reasonable and sufficient if the same transportation were over a single road is not in all cases unjust. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian Ry., 12 I. C. C. 471, 477.

(4h) While the joint through rate over a line composed of several roads often is and should be less than the sum of the local or individual rates, this is not always so, especially where the through line is composed of only two roads, one of which performs only a short haul. Loup Creek Colliery Co. v. Virginian Ry., 12 I. C. C. 471, 478.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(4i) The plain, unmistakable requirement of the law is that through traffic shall be subject to just, reasonable and non-discriminatory through rates. Hammerschmidt & Franzen Co. v. C. & N. W. R. R. Co., 30 I. C. C. 71, 82.

(4j) While recognizing the carrier's standpoint of preserving the integrity of through rates, the Commission must also look to the means employed for this purpose and rates to and from gateways used as factors in constructing through rates must be no more than reasonable. Peanut Rates to Oklahoma City, Okla. 30 I. C. C., 346, 347.

(4k) To apply to a reconsigned shipment a higher specific through rate to final destination than was applicable to such destination on direct shipment, held not unreasonable. Great Western Sugar Co. v. Y. & M. V. R. R. Co., 34 I. C. C. 45, 46.

(4l) By forming through routes and publishing through rates applicable thereto carriers merge their lines into one route or line so far as the particular traffic covered by such rates is concerned As a single through route or line they cannot withhold from some points on that route valuable services which they voluntarily perform at other points on that route. Rates on Grain Milled in Transit, 35 I. C. C. 27, 32.

(4m) In a situation where through rates are sought from the farm to the market, with transit arangements at milling points, a comparison of the results obtained under a rate system made by adding the charge on rough rice into the milling points to the charges on the clean rice out, for the purpose of determining the relative advantages of respective milling points, appears to be reasonable and proper. Southern Rice Growers' Assn. v. T. & N. O. R. R., 43 I. C. C. 90, 94.

(4n) The mere existence of combination rates rather than joint rates between certain points, without a showing of unreasonableness or undue prejudice, does not of itself make out a case justifying corrective measures. Connor Lumber & Land Co. v. G. N. Ry., 43 I. C. C. 243, 246.

(4o) It is not practicable to have rates into and out of all jobbing points so constructed that the resulting through charges from the factory to ultimate destination are the same via all jobbing centers. Advantages of location, competitive conditions, the volume and flow of traffic, and numerous other considerations come into play, and must be given due weight in determining the adjustment of rates into and out of different jobbing points. Wichita Wholesale Furniture Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 339, 344.

(4p) Too much emphasis should not be placed upon the separate factors entering into the composition of rate scales The important problem is the determination of the reasonableness and nondiscriminatory character of the entire parts. Western Cement Rates, 48 I. C. C. 201, 235.

(4q) A fair measure of the reasonableness of a through rate which exceeds the aggregate of the intermediate rates is the lowest combination which would apply if the through rate were cancelled. International Paper Co. v. B. & M. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 31, 33.

(4r) Somewhat higher rates for hauls over routes composed of two or more lines, not under common management and control, than for hauls over one line or over two or more lines under a common management and control, are reasonable. Royster Guano Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 34, 43.

(4s) A shipper is not to be denied a reasonable rate over a through route merely because a lower rate could have been secured by the use of another route. Gosline & Co. v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 220, 223.

(4t) A charge is not necessarily unlawful because it is made up of two separately published charges. The real question is as to the propriety of the aggregate charge. American Wholesale Lumber Asso. v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C., 393, 397.

(4u) Proof that a carrier is not earning operating expenses on its State and interstate freight traffic as a whole does not establish that the joint interstate rates on a particular commodity if reduced in accordance with findings in Reduced Rates, 1922, 68 I. C. C., 676, would be less than just and reasonable. Reduced Rates, 1922, 73 I. C. C. 189, 191.

(4v) In 58 I. C. C. 549 and 60 I. C. C., 453, the commission required the removal of an undue prejudice against the Ottawa, Ill., district and an undue preference of Gray's Summit, Silica, and Pacific, Mo., in the rates on silica sand to points east of the Indiana-Illinois State line. Upon further hearing carriers required to revise their rates to correct departures from the fourth section of the act. Silica Sand Producers' Traffic Asso. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 549.

(4x) Respondents proposed to increase their rates on soft coal, carloads, from mines on the Cumberland & Manchester to points in central territory, the Southeast and Northwest Cumberland & Manchester, respondent, is a short line extending from Barbourville, Ky., to Manchester, Ky., 22.9 miles. Coal constitutes about 90 per cent of its tonnage. Rates from points on respondents line to destinations on the L. & N., are joint rates, and are made by adding certain published arbitraries over the rates from the junction point. Respondent favors the application of the through rates provided it receives adequate divisions out of the through rates. No attempt was made to justify the increased through rates to the destination territories. The record is devoid of any evidence tending to prove the present through rates unreasonably low. HELD, increased rates not justified. Bituminous coal from mines on the C. & M. R. R., 74 I. C. C. 723.

(4y) The mere fact that a carrier participates as an originating carrier in joint rates in connection with which a transit arrangement is allowed at points off its line does not make it guilty of undue prejudice by failing to accord transit to a point on its line. C. R. R. Co. of N. J. v. United States, 257 U. S., 247. Compression of Cotton, 77 I. C. C. 184, 188.

(4z) Participation in joint rates do not make connecting carriers partners. They can be held jointly and severally responsible for unjust discrimination only if each carrier has participated in some way in that which causes the unjust discrimination. If this were not so, the legality or illegality of a carriers practice would depend, not on its own act, but on the acts of its connecting carriers. If that rule should prevail, only uniformity in local privileges and practices or the cancellation of all joint rates could afford to carriers the assurance that they were not in some way violating the provisions of section 3. What Congress sought to prevent by that section as originally enacted, was not differences between localities in transportation rates, facilities and privileges, but unjust discrimination between them by the same carrier or carriers. Storage in transit rules at Minnesota Transfer, 78 I. C. C. 265, 268.

(5a) In determining reasonableness of through charge it is proper to consider its components, not withstanding the through charge itself is first to be considered. Armour & Co. v. C. of G. Ry. Co., 81 I. C. C. 33, 36.

(5b) Where the issue is whether the joint rates as such are free from undue prejudice and preference; it would constitute no defense to show that the divisions of certain of the carriers participating in the rates are reasonable or otherwise not violative of the act. Clay County Coal Operators Asso. v. C. & M. R. R. Co., 81 I. C. C. 414, 419.

(5c) Evidence tending to prove inadequacy of tariff allowance for transportation service undertaken by shipper on behalf of carrier does not establish unreasonableness of through charge. Swift & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 677.

(5d) Rates assailed as unduly prejudicial were participated in by defendant and another carrier; defendant using joint route for this particular traffic instead of its own rails exclusively over another route, due to longer haul over latter route. Contention that as to issue of undue prejudice the second participating carrier is a necessary party, not sustained. Defendant, having its own rails between points involved, is not compelled to resort to joint route. As between these two carriers, defendant is clearly rate-making line and responsible for undue prejudice, if any, resulting from rate adjustment in controversy. Second participating carrier is proper but not necessary party. Southern Appalachian Coal Operators v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 136, 139.

(5e) In determining whether rates are unreasonable, consideration can not be confined to one component; the through charge must be examined. Cairo Asso. of Commerce, 62 I. C. C., 701; Silica Sand Producers Asso., 63 I. C. C., 217; Western Meat Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 83 I. C. C. 218, 220.

(5f) Through rates may not be condemned as unreasonable merely because constructed upon combination. Barnes Automobile Co. v. D., T. & I. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C., 350, 352.

(5g) The shipper is concerned primarily with the reasonableness of the through rate he has to pay and not the factors composing the rate. This principle is in no way altered because one of the factors is a switching rate. It may be that the switching rate was unreasonable but that is a matter with which the complainant is not concerned. It has been damaged when it paid the unreasonable rate. International Harvester Co. v. N. Y. C. R. R., 88 I. C. C. 368, 372.

(5h) Although the existence of water competition may justify railroad carriers in granting to dealers in a commodity at a certain point the privilege of unloading and rebilling, and reshipping to further points at through rates from the point of initial shipment, it does not necessarily follow that the particular privilege granted does not give to such dealers an undue preference or advantage over dealers at other points to whom the same privilege is not extended, but the question is one of fact to be determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the power conformed by section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act. Nashville Grain Exchange v. United States, 234 Fed. 699.

§13a. Burden of proof.

See Burden of Proof.

(a) Where several companies join in joint tariff those making greater charges must justify it. Boston & A. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 571.

(b) Where a proportion of a through rate for part of a through haul is greatly disproportionate to the balance of the through rate, the knowledge of the circumstances and conditions (if any) justifying such disproportionate rate being peculiarly in the possession of the carrier, the burden is on the carrier to make proof of such justifying circumstances and conditions. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala v. Ala. Mid. Ry. Co. et al., 6 I. C. C. 2.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Proposed cancellation of combination rule, providing where no through rates are published and there are effective separately established rates to and from junctions, the through rate will be computed by deducting specific amounts from each factor and adding a specific amount to the resulting sum of the factors, in connection with rates defined territories to points in Arkansas and certain border points in Missouri, Oklahoma, and Louisiana, found not justified. While the combination rule may be undesirable as a tariff rule, that fact alone does not justify its elimination unless carriers publish joint or proprotional rates in lieu thereof to prevent unwarranted increases. Cancellation of Combination Rule to the Southwest, 74 I. C. C. 505.

(d) The burden of proof to show that increased joint rates are just and reasonable is cast upon the carriers by the statute. Bituminous Coal from Mines on C. & M. R. R., 74 I, C. C. 723, 725.

(e) In determining the reasonableness of a joint rate the rate must be considered in its entirety. Wichita Board of Commerce v. Director General 81 I. C. C. 423, 425.

§13½. Factor of the rate.

See Class Rates §2; Proportional Rate.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The apportionment of rates to different parts of a through line do not determine the charge to the public, but may be significant on the question of reasonable rates for the whole distance. Brady v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 78.

(b) It is not a violation of the law for a carrier to accept a less division of a through rate for traffic going over its road than the charges to the stations it serves; the circumstances and conditions are substantially different, and the service entirely dissimilar. Rice Robinson & Witherop v. W. N. Y. & P. R. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 298, 301.

(c) Under the exceptional circumstances requiring such through rates, shippers locally, from Chicago, of Ohio and Pennsylvania coal cannot justly insist upon rates no higher than the division of such through rates which appertains to the lines running northwest from that city—the circumstances under which the through rate is made being such that it cannot be differently adjusted. Rend v. Cg. & Northwestern R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 313.

(d) In the absence of through traffic arrangements between two railroad companies, the one has the right to treat freights tendered to it by the other as local business, and to charge for the transportation thereof its local rates to destination; and in doing so, no discrimination is made against the other company, on the traffic it carries. Nor does the company, charging local rates on such freights, make, or give, any undue or unreasonable preference to other lines, or to the traffic they handle, with whom it has agreements for through routing, an dat through joint rates which may be lower than its local rates to the same points; because the service in the two cases is not the same, or identical. Kentucky & Indiana Bridge Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 351.

(e) The difference between proportions of through rates along the same lines should be fairly reasonable in amount and properly graded in their application and not such as to injure or suppress business in one locality in order that it may be stimulated and built up in another. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. F. & P. M. R., 2 I. C. C. 393, 399.

(f) Through rates are not necessarily illegal which when divided between carriers give them less than their local rates, provided that the through rate itself is not less than some one of the locals, or so low as to burden other business with part of the cost of the business upon which it is imposed. L. Lippman & Co. v. I. C. R. 2 I. C. C. 414, 415.

(g) Complainant attacked as unjust and unreasonable rates over the Grand Trunk from Port Huron, Mich., to Buffalo, N. Y., because disproportionate to the through rate from Chicago to Buffalo. Rate charged 8c per hundred pounds on grain and 10c on grain products from Port Huron and 15c from Chicago. HELD that though the local rate from Port Huron to Buffalo might be regarded as disproportionate on the basis of distance alone, other considerations are involved, and in view of the terminal and ferry expenses at Port Huron, the Niagara Bridge charges and the Buffalo terminal charges, all of which are borne by the Grand Trunk alone upon business originating at Port Huron, the complaint against the 8c rate on grain is not sustained; but no good reason having been shown for a higher rate on grain products, that portion of the complaint is sustained, and the products ordered to be carried at the same rate as grain. McMorran & Co. v. G. T. R. R. of Canada, 2 I. C. C. 604.

(h) Through rates are not necessarily illegal which, when divided between carriers, give them less than their local rates, provided that the through rate itself is not less than some one of the locals, or unjustly discriminating against individuals or localities, or so low as to burden other business with part of the cost of the business upon which it is imposed. Lippman v. Illinois C. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 414; Chicago, R. L. & P. R. Co. v. Chicago & A. R. Co. (Com.), 2 I. C. R. 721.

(i) The proportion of one carrier in a through rate upon a long haul often is, and frequently well may be, considerably less than its local rate for hauling the same freight over its own line, without there being any unjust discrimination, unlawful preference or extortion involved in such a method. New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. I. C. R. R. 2 I. C. C. 777, 786.

(j) Through rates on long hauls more usually than local rates on short hauls encounter water competition and are made lower in proportion to distance by this cause as well as other causes which have been repeatedly discussed and considered by the Commission; and the doctrine contended for by petitioner in this proceding, that an estimated proportion of the through rate must not be less according to distance than the local rate from an intermediate point to another point named in the line covered by the through rate, has often been held by the Commission to be untenable. See Detroit Board of Trade et al. v. The Grand Trunk Railway Company and others, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 202, 2 I. C. C. Rep. 320; New Orleans Cotton Exchange v. The Illinois Central Railroad Company et al. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 777, 3 I. C. C. Rep.. 534. Pougekeepsie Iron Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 248.

(k) The doctrine that an estimated proportion of a through rate must not be less according to distance than the local rate from an intermeidate point to another point named in the line covered by the through rate, is untenable. Poughkeepsie Iron Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 248.

(l) An estimated proportion of the through rate may be less according to distance than the local rate from an intermediate point to another point named in the line covered by the through rate. Poughkeepsie Iron Co. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. 248, 253.

(m) The joint through tariff rates established by two or more carriers over their lines or any parts thereof cannot be made the basis by which the reasonableness of the local rates on either line can be determined. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne (C. C. App. 8th Co.), 4 I. C. R. 257.

(n) The apportionment of a rate to different parts of a through line does not determine the charge to the public, but it may be significant on the question of a reasonable rate for the whole distance. James & Abbott v. C. P. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 274, 281.

(o) The fact that a carriers proportion of a through rate is its local for the haul over its own road or is a fixed amount, which remains the same for all points of origin or destination of traffic reached by the through line, can not relieve it from joint responsibility as a component of the through line, if the entire rate be violative of the law. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala v. A. M. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 348, 350.

(p) Where a proportion of a through rate for part of a through haul is greatly disproportionate to the balance of the through rate, the knowledge of the circumstances and conditions justifying such disproportionate rate being peculiarly in the possession of the carrier, the burden is on the carrier to make proof of such justifying circumstances and conditions. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala., v. A. M. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 348, 357.

(q) A local rate which is presumably adopted as covering both the initial and final expense of a local haul, is prima facie excessive as part of a through rate over a through line composed of two or more carriers. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala., v. A. M. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 348, 357.

(r) When a proportion of a through rate for part of a through haul is greatly disproportionate to the balance of the through rate, the burden is on the carrier to make proof of justifying circumstances and conditions. Troy Bd. of Trade v. Alabama M. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 1.

(s) Although one of two connecting carriers may lawfully accept less for its compensation on a shipment over both roads than for local delivery to the point at the end of its line, a charge of more than twice as much in the latter case is exorbitant. Cordele Machine Shop v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 361.

(t) The proportion received by some of the connecting carriers out of a long distance through rate is not necessarily the measure of the through rate which such carriers are entitled to make over a materially shorter distance, although such proportion is an important consideration in determining the rightful relation of the two through rates. Colorado Fuel & I. Co. v. Southern P. Co., 6 I. C. C. 488.

(u) The through rate over long routes is almost never a fair test of what the rate per ton per mile ought to be upon local divisions of that route. Board of Railroad Commissioners of Kentucky v. C. N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 380, 383.

(v) When rates established to apply between points within a single State are applied as part of combination rates on transportation between different States, such State rates, as well as the interstate rates with which they are combined, must be published at stations and filed with the Commission as provided in §6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Re Export Rates from Points East and West of Miss. River, 8 I. C. C. 185.

(w) The necessities of carriers often demand, and traffic conditions frequently warrant them in exacting, a share of through rates, which gives them more per mile than that which results to a connecting carrier from a division accepted by it. Gustin v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 277.

(x) If a railroad company can not secure other than an unreasonably low share of a joint rate to a seaport on another road, it may be justified in declining to join in such rate, especially when it can take the traffic to a seaport reached by its own road; but a carrier engaged in transportation over the through line finds no such justification when it is able to secure for itself a share of the joint rate which fully equals the rate established by it for purely local service over like distances on its own road. Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transportation v. L. & N. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 377, 406.

(y) Rates for the terminal portion of a through haul, which are a continuation to the end of the haul of mileage rates, are, in the absence of exceptional conditions, reasonable and proper. The general rule applicable to through hauls, indeed, is that, while the aggregate rate increases with the length of haul, the rate per ton per mile decreases. Board of Trade of Hampton, Fla. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 8 I. C. C. 503, 527.

(z) Although a shipper or consignee has no direct interest in the way a joint rate is divided between the carriers, nor in the amount of the division received by each carrier, he is entitled, nevertheless, to inquire into such division when he complains that the joint rate is unlawful, for the amount received by the different carriers may be significant upon the reasonableness of the aggregate charge; and when an unlawful rate results from some arbitrary share or division exacted by one of the carriers, the Commission will find the facts and state its conclusions with respect to such share or division. Warren-Ehret Co. v. Central R. R. of New Jersey, 8 I. C. C. 598.

(za) When an unlawful joint rate results from some arbitrary share or division exacted by one of the carriers, the Commission will find the facts and state its conclusions with respect to such share or division. Warren-Ehret Co. v. Central R. of New Jersey, 8 I. C. C. 598.

(aa) Although a shipper or consignee has no direct interest in the way a joint rate is divided between the carriers, nor in the amount of the division received by each carrier, he is entitled, nevertheless, to inquire into such division when he complains that the joint rate is unlawful, for the amount received by the different carriers may be significant upon the reasonableness of the aggregate charge. Warren-Ehret Co. v. Central R. of New Jersey, 8 I. C. C. 598.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(bb) A shipper whose through rate is reasonable and non-discriminatory cannot complain of the division thereof. It does not follow that the component parts of a carrier's through rates are beyond the regulation and control of the Commission. It sometimes happens that a through rate is unreasonable because of the excessive character of a component proportional rate, and the Commission's authority to reduce the unreasonable through rate by reducing the excessive proportional rate is beyond question; but where a proposed through rate is found reasonable and there is no evidence that it is discriminatory a component proportional cannot be attacked. Malt Rates to New Orleans, La. 30 I. C. 587, 590.

(cc) It is not the separate factors in a through rate, but the rate of charge as a whole, to which the test of reasonableness must be applied. People's Fuel & Supply Co. v. G. F. W. Ry. Co., 30 I. C. C. 657, 659.

(dd) Commission has power to make corrections of single factor of through rate. Northern Pine Mfrs. Asso. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 33 I. C. C., 360, 365.

(ee) A shipper has no legal grievance with respect to his through traffic, unless compelled to pay excessive charges for the through service. If the through charges are lawful in the sense that they are reasonable charges for the through service, a shipper can not predicate unlawfulness of one of the component parts of the through charges by alleging that it is excessive compensation to that carrier for that part of the through service. He pays for the completed service, and it is no concern of his how the charges are divided, so long as the through charges for the through carriage are reasonable. Northern Pine Mfrs. Ass'n v. C. & N. W. Ry., 33 I. C. C. C. 360, 365.

(ff) Generally speaking, the public and the Commission are interested only in the through charge; but where carrier is also shipper, payment of a special and abnormal division challenges attention. Rates on Railroad Fuel and Other Coal, 36 I. C. C. 1, 11.

(gg) One factor of a combination rate yielding somewhat high earnings found not exorbitant when consideration given to the fact that the distance was short and the country traversed mountainous. Burns & Knapp v. B. S. & K. R. Ry. Co., 62 I. C. C. 345, 347.

(hh) Combination rate charged on rubber shoddy from Plymouth, Mass., to East Cambridge, Mass., during Federal control, found unreasonable to extent that the factor from South Station, Boston, Mass., to East Cambridge, exceeded lower proportional rate subsequently established. Reparation awarded. Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 13.

(ii) On through movements a portion of a rate can not be considered by itself and without regard to its relation to the entire rate for the through haul. Goss v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 649, 653.

(jj) Combination rates on steel plates and tank material, k. d., from Leetsdale, Pa., to Dubberly and Mansfield, La., found not unreasonable due to the fifth class differential assessed for the factor Leetsdale to St. Louis, Mo. A lower commodity differential contemporaneously was in effect from Pittsburgh territory, in which Leetsdale is located, but no shipments have been made thereunder, and it is therefore a paper rate. Furthermore, iron and steel articles are generally rated fifth-class in this territory. Gulf Refining Co. of La. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 729.

(kk) Fact that a component of a through rate is found unreasonable does not establish the unreasonableness of such through rate. New Orleans Board of Commissioners v. Director General, as Agent, 77 I. C. C. 664, 667, 668.

(ll) In determining the reasonableness of a through rate it is proper to consider its components, notwithstanding the through charge itself is first to be considered. Armour & Co. v. C. of Ga. R. Co. 81 I. C. C. 33, 36.

(mm) In examining into the reasonableness of a combination rate or charge the Commission is not precluded from looking to the several factors thereof in an effort to locate unreasonableness in the total charge. Wilson & Company v. Director General 81 I. C. C. 39, 41.

(nn) Where the Commission decides that a local rate between two points in the same state, used as part of a joint through rate, is excessive, it has power to direct its reduction when used in making up the through rate. D. & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Baer Bros. Mercantile Co., 209 Fed. 577, 580.

See Divisions §4; Evidence §13 (2).

(a) The total charge for transportation is all that concerns the shipper, and not the percentages allowed by agreement to one or more of the connecting carriers in a through line. Carriers voluntarily enter into agreements for through shipments over connecting roads, and the division of the through rate is part of their mutual agreement which the parties to the arrangement adjust themselves, and the adjustment of which does not affect the shipper. Boston Chamber of Commerce v. L. S. & M. S. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 754, 760.

(bc) The public has no interest in the division railroads make among themselves of their joint earnings from transportation over through lines. It is the reasonableness of the through rate, not of any division or part of it, that the complainants have a right to insist upon. Brady v. Pennsylvania Co., 2 I. C. C. 78, 80.

(d) Under exceptional circumstances requiring through rates via Chicago westward from points in a coal-mining district extending across the whole State of Illinois, which is properly treated as one point in making rates, shippers locally, from Chicago, of Ohio and Pennsylvania coal, cannot justly insist upon rates no higher than the division of such through rates which appertains to the lines running northwest from that city,—the circumstances under which the through rate is made being such that it cannot be differently adjusted. A reduction of their rates on that basis would involve either a general reduction from the entire group, under the short-haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Law, or an abandonment by defendant of the through rates in question, neither of which would benefit complainant, while both would do great injury to all other interests involved. Under such circumstances the preference is not undue, nor is the advantage complained of unreasonable. Rend v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 313.

(e) Through rates are not necessarily illegal which when divided between carriers give them less than their local rates, provided that the through rate itself is not less than some one of the locals, or unjustly discriminating against individuals or localities, or so low as to burden other business with part of the cost of the business upon which it is imposed. Lippman & Co. v. Illinois Central R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 414.

(f) The Commission prescribed a through rate on peaches from New Jersey and Delaware to Boston, Mass. Motion filed for rehearing upon the claim that some of the other defendants construed the decision of the Commission as justifying them in insisting that the freight charge prescribed should be divided among the carriers on a mileage basis merely. HELD, the decision of the Commission could not fairly be construed as justifying the claim that the single freight charge between the interstate points should be divided on a mileage basis. The Commission can prescribe the through rate as an entirety, the rate to be reasonably and fairly divided among the several carriers by themselves. Motion for rehearing overruled. Boston Fruit & Produce Exchange v. N. Y. & N. E. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 604.

(g) Divisions of a joint rate among the carriers are sometimes inquired into for the purpose of ascertaining, from the divisions, whether a rate unreasonable in itself may not be traced to the inequality of such divisions. Perry v. F. C. & P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 740, 744.

(h) Divisions of a through rate need not be considered on the question of the way in which the through rate is affected by an arbitrary differential. Toledo Produce Exch. v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 830.

(i) While the share which a carrier receives out of a joint or through rate over a line of which its road is a part is not necessarily the measure of reasonable rates by such carrier for a similar length of haul over its own road, it is proper in any case under the statute to use the aggregate joint or through rate in force over such line as a basis of comparison in determining the legality of rates charged by such carrier over its own road. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., et al, 6 I. C. C. 458.

(j) The necessities of carriers often demand, and traffic conditions frequently warrant them in exacting, a share of through rates which gives them more per mile than that which results to a connecting carrier from the division accepted by it. Gustin v. A. T. & S. F. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 277, 288.

(k) Although a shipper or consignee has no direct interest in the way a joint rate is divided between the carriers, nor in the amount of the division received by each carrier, he is entitled, nevertheless, to inquire into such division when he complains that the joint rate is unlawful, for the amount received by the different carriers may be significant upon the reasonableness of the aggregate charge; and when an unlawful rate results from such arbitrary share or division exacted by one of the carriers, the Commission will find the facts and state its conclusions with respect to such share or division. Warren-Ehret Company v. C. R. R. of N. J. 8 I. C. C. 598, 604.

(l) Divisions of joint rates are usually less than the corresponding locals, and almost without exception not greater; and while a case may arise in which such a division could with propriety be made greater than the local or straight rate, no such case is presented where the total through rates on competitive traffic exceed the sum of charges to and from immediate points. Hilton Lumber Co. v. Wilmington & Weldon R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 17.

(m) Generally speaking, the public is not interested in the division of a through rate, and the Commission, therefore, has no authority to condemn the division of the rate, unless a part of the through line and the article shipped have a common ownership, and a grossly excessive division is made for the purpose of paying a rebate. Re Transportation of Salt, 10 I. C. C. 148.

(n) The share of the through rate for the transportation of salt from producing points in Michigan to points on the Missouri River, which is allowed to the boat line on Lake Michigan, the controlling interest in which is owned by the same persons who own a controlling interest in the corporations producing salt at the point named, and which share amounts to from 30 to 33 1-3 per cent of the through rate, and is considerably higher than the former charge of carrying salt on Lake Michigan, but which increase is partly accounted for by the fact that additional services are included,—is not so grossly disproportionate to the value of the additional through services as to amount to a rebate in favor of the salt interests which control the boat line. Re-Transportation of Salt, 10 I. C. C. 148.

(o) It should be borne in mind that, generally speaking, the public is not interested in the division of a through rate, and the Commission, therefore, has no authority to condemn the division of a rate, unless a part of the through line and the article shipped have a common ownership, and a grossly excessive division is made for the purpose of paying a rebate. Re transportation of Salt, 10 I. C. C. 148, 171.

(p) Divisions of through rate among carriers forming through route, does not affect unity of rate. Re Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 163.

(q) A division of a joint rate is not conclusive evidence of discrimination. Omaha Cooperage Co. v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 251, 252.

(r) Divisions of joint rate on beef cattle from Ft. Worth, Tex., to Birmingham, Ala., in view of terminal charges of receiving and delivering lines, and ferry charge of intermediate line, made upon mileage basis. Birmingham Packing Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 500.

(s) Terminal expense taken into consideration on division of joint rate. Birmingham Packing Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 500.

(t) Terminal charge may be considered in divisions of through rates. Birmingham Packing Co. v. T. & P. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 500.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(u) Where the Commission orders a carrier to establish through routes and joint rates, it will not specify the connecting carriers, but will leave defendant to negotiate with the various connecting carriers in such a manner as will enable it to best protect its own interest in securing divisions, so long as the rates and routes put into effect by it are reasonable. Chamber of Commerce of Milwaukee v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 460, 467.

(v) The Commission has many times expressed the view that the division received by a carrier as its share of a joint rate is not conclusive evidence of the unreasonableness of the joint rate involved. Wichita Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 625, 631.

(w) Ordinarily much weight cannot be given to comparisons of divisions of joint rates. West Virginia Rail Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 26 I. C. C. 622, 625.

(x) One of the duties of a common carrier is to participate in joint rates as the public interest requires. This is an incident of their undertaking and equity does not necessarily demand that they be compensated by larger divisions in the instances where it might be more advantageous to confine traffic to their own lines. Pittsburgh & West Virginia Ry. v. P. L. E., 61 I. C. C. 272, 283.

(y) In determining whether or not a complainant has been damaged by the exaction of unreasonable or unduly preferential reshipping rates the total through charges paid from point of origin must be considered. Edwards & Bradford Lumber Co. v. Director General, 64 I. C. C. 503, 505.

(z) Cancellation of joint rates can not be justified on the ground that the divisions thereof are unsatisfactory. If satisfactory divisions can not be agreed upon between carriers, that matter may be presented to the Commission in an appropriate proceeding. Routing Restrictions on Lumber, 66 I. C. C. 56.

(aa) While the law does not permit the commission to require rail carriers to establish through routes which result in the short hauling of one carrier which has a reasonably direct route of its own, it is not a necessary conclusion, when such routes and joint rates are established, that local rates are fair divisions for the carrier which is short hauled. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317, 355.

(bb) The Commission cannot deny a carrier a reasonable division out of joint rates because of past or present derelictions, or even the fear of further violations of the law. L. & P. Ry. Co. v. United States, 209 Fed. 244, 254.

§15. Exceeding combination of intermediates.

See Comparative Rates; Evidence §13 (3); §13 (5); Local Rates and Combinations; Long and Short Hauls §6¾.

(a) In the nature of things joint rates on long hauls usually are, and as a rule should be, lower in proportion to distance than local rates on short hauls of the same commodity. Farrar & Co. v. E. Tenn., Va. Ga. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 764.

(b) Although the share which a carrier receives out of a through rate over a line of which its road is a part is not necessarily the measure of reasonable rates by such carrier for a similar length of haul over its own road, the aggregate through rate in force over such line may properly be used as a basis of comparison in determining the legality of rates charged by such carrier over its own road. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 458.

(c) A through rate over a railroad 18½ miles long lying partly in Arkansas and partly in Missouri, of 10 cents per mile, while the local charges as allowed by statute in one state are 5 cents per mile and in the other 4 cents per mile, is unreasonable and unjust, where the net earnings are in excess of a moderate return on the actual investment. Railroad & W. Comrs. v. Eureka Springs R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 69.

(c) Usually the charge for a single transportation service from one place to another should not exceed the lowest combination of rates established for consecutive services covering the whole distance between the two places. Savannah Bureau of Freight v. C. & S. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 601, 609.

(e) The exaction by a carrier of shares of through joint rates greatly in excess of its purely local rates for the same service makes the entire through rate unjust and unreasonable as compared with the local rates, and a violation of §§1 and 3 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Savannah Bureau of Freight v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 377.

(f) The through rate on lumber from Wilmington to Philadelphia, Jersey City, and Boston via Norfolk or Portsmouth is unreasonable, and violates §§ 3, 1, and 2 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, where it is greater than the aggregate local rates on transportation of lumber under similar circumstances and conditions. Hilton Lumber Co. v. Wilmington & Weldon R. Co. 9 I. C. C. 17.

(fa) The local rates on lumber from Wilmington to Norfolk or Portsmouth, Va., added to the rates in force from Portsmouth or Norfolk to Philadelphia, Jersey City and Boston, produce lower aggregate charges than the through rates in effect on lumber carried by the connecting defendant carriers from Wilmington direct to Philadelphia, Jersey City and Boston via Portsmouth and Pinners Point, adjacent to Norfolk. This results from the fact that the arbitrary or proportion of the through rate from Wilmington exacted by the carriers north of Portsmouth or Norfolk is greater than their rates on shipments from Norfolk or Portsmouth. The rates to Philadelphia, Jersey City and Boston from Norfolk or Portsmouth are made to meet water competition, and such competition also exists for traffic from Wilmington to Northern seaport cities. Lumber manufacturers in Wilmington and Norfolk and vicinity compete actively for the sale and shipment of lumber to northern markets. The circumstances and conditions applying on the transportation of lumber from Portsmouth, Norfolk and vicinity to Philadelphia Jersey City and Boston on traffic originating at those points and at Wilmington are substantialy similar, or if any difference exists it is in favor of the through Wilmington busines. HELD —That the through rates from Wilmington to Philadelphia, Jersey City and Boston, to the extent that they exceed the sum of rates from Wilmington to Norfolk or Portsmouth and from the latter points to the northern cities mentioned, are unjust and wrongfully prejudical to Wilmington shippers in violation of sections three, one and two of the Act to regulate commerce., Hilton Lumber Co. v. Wilmington & W. R. R. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 17.

(fb) The lumber shippers are unjustly discriminated against by a through rate to Philadelphia, Jersey City and Boston via Portsmouth and Pinners Point which is greater than the aggregate local rates on lumber from Wilmington to Norfolk or Portsmouth Va. added to the rates in force from the latter places to Philadelphia, Jersey City, and Boston, where the local rates from Norfolk or Portsmouth to the named northern points are made to meet water competition; and such competition also exists in traffic to Wilmington from northern seaports; and the circumstances and conditions applying to the transportation of lumber from Portsmouth Norfolk, and vicinity to the northern points, on the traffic originating there and at Wilmington, are substantially similar. Hilton Lumber Co. v. Wilmington & Weldon R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 17.

(g) Complainant attacked through commodity rate of 55c at estimated weight of 8,500 pounds unreasonable charged on two cows and a calf from Newport, Vt. to Pawtucket, R. I. It appears the local rate from Newport to Worcester, Mass., distance 235 miles is 45c, estimated weight 3,300 pounds and from Worcester Mass. to Pawtucket, distance 39 miles is 12c estimated weight 7,500 pounds. HELD, under the general rule of using the combination of local rates where they aggregate a less amount than the through rate, defendant paid the resulting overcharge, complaint dismissed. Sayles v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. 9 I. C. C. 492.

(h) Complaint desired to ship cotton seed in carloads from Louisiana station on defendant's line to Hope, Ark., at the sum of local rates based upon Texarkana, Ark., which sum was less than the published through charge, but defendant refused to apply its local rate to Texarkana, which was 12½ cents per 100 pounds, on such through shipments, and also refused to allow complainant to ship locally to Texarkana under the 12½ cent rate in force to that point. HELD: That while defendant was entitled to insist upon the application of the through rate to the through shipment to Hope, it could not lawfully refuse to receive and carry complainant's freight to Texarkana under its local rate to that point, and that complainant is entitled to reparation for damages resulting from its inability to ship 640 tons of cotton seed to Hope which it had contracted for and desired to have transported over defendant's line. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 10 I. C. C. 697.

(i) Silos from Kalamazoo, Mich., to Elkhorn, Wis., via Chicago, joint through rate of 28 cents per 100 pounds, while combination rate to Chicago at same time is only 17 cents, conceded to be excessive to the extent of difference. Kalamazoo Tank & Silo Co. v. M. C. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 154.

(j) Complaint alleged that defendants' joint through rate of 67 cents per 100 pounds on cotton seed, in carloads, from points north of Shreveport, in Louisiana, on the T. & P. Ry. via Texarkana to Hope, Ark., on the St. L., I. M. & S. Ry., is unreasonable and unduly discriminatory and that a just and reasonable rate would be a through rate equal to the sum of the present local rates in and out of Texarkana, which is 17½ cents per 100 pounds. After complaint was filed, defendants put in effect between the points of origin in Louisiana and Hope a joint through rate of 30 cents per 100 pounds on cotton seed in carloads, with a minimum weight of 30,000 pounds per car. HELD, upon the record, that the present through rate of 30 cents is unreasonable and that it should not exceed 17½ cents the sum of the locals, with a minimum carload weight of 30,000 pounds. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas & Pacific Ry. Co., Et al. 12 I. C. C. 266.

(k) Complainant attacked defendants joint through rate of 67c commodity, on cotton seed, carloads, from points north of Shreveport, La., on the T. & P., via Texarkana, to Hope, Ark., on the Iron Mountain as unreasonable and unduly discriminaory, and that a just and reasonable rate would be the sum of the present local rates to and out of Texarkana, which was 17½c. Defendants put in effect a joint through rate of 30c. HELD, present rate of 30c unreasonable to extent it exceeded 17½c. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. T. & P. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 266.

(l) The Commission can make no general ruling that through rates must not exceed the sum of the locals; each case must be disposed of upon its own merits. Coffeyville Vitrified Brick &

Tile Co. v. St. L. & S. F. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 498, 499.

(m) A carrier may, because of commercial conditions or competition, establish at a given point an especially low rate, but it does not necessarily follow that all like traffic that moves through that point in the same direction must be given the benefit of that low rate, and while a through rate that is higher than the sum of the local rates between the same point is prima facie unreasonable, it can not be reduced to equal such sum of locals except through lawful change in tariff. Morgan et al. v. Mo. Kans. & Tex. Ry. Co. et al., 12 I. C. C. 525.

(n) Through traffic not necessarily entitled to benefit of low rates at intermediate points, although a through rate that is higher than the sum of local rates is prima facie unreasonable. Morgan v. M. A. & T. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 525.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(o) That the through rate should not exceed the sum of the locals is a doctrine well established, but it does not follow as a corollary that the sum of the locals should always be reduced to equal the through rates. Williams Co. v. V. S. & P. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 482, 485.

(p) Some time since the Commission announced the rule that it would consider a joint through rate prima facie unreasonable if it exceeded the shipment of the local rates between the same points. It has since become necessary, in order to do more complete justice, to extend the application of the rule so that except in special and unusual circumstances, and respecting fully the limitations placed in tariffs upon the use of basing, proportional or arbitrary rates the fair measure of the reasonableness of a joint through rate that exceeds the combination between the same points via the same route is the lowest combination that would lawfully apply if the joint through rate were canceled. Windsor Turned Goods Co. v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 162. 164.

(q) Where a local rate for a short local haul is added to a rate for a considerable distance to make a through rate, the principle should be invoked that the local rate should be considered in connection with the entire haul. In other words, the through charge should bear a proper relation to the total distance involved. While distance is not the sole factor to be considered, it is manifest that the application of the full locals as parts of the through rate may be unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory. St. Matthews Produce Exchange v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 233, 236, 237.

(r) Generally accepted principle of rate making that through rates should be less than the sum of the intermediate Rates. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C., 384, 392.

(s) Until shortly prior to the movement of this shipment it had been the carriers general practice to apply to shipments, which were in fact through shipments from eastern seaboard territory to interior destinations in Texas, combination rates based on Galveston which were lower than the joint rates in effect for the through movement. The carriers by consciously participating in the practice of rebilling prior to that period and thereafter by the establishment of joint rates made the combination of locals the measure of what they deemed appropriate rates on traffic from Atlantic Seaboard territory to interior Texas points. Taylor & Smith v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 520, 522.

(t) A joint rate in excess of the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the act is prima facie unreasonable. M. L. Davis v. G. C. & S. F. Ry., 68 I. C. C. 303, 304.

(u) When distances are relatively great, and when transfer at rate breaking points is not attended by unusual costs, the combination basis, using local rates, ordinarily is abnormal and unscientific and often discriminatory. The Commission has generally recognized that through rates should be less than the combinations. Pacific Creamery Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 68 I. C. C. 340, 342.

(v) Joint rates can not be condemned solely because, when originally established they were based on combinations of intermediate rates. Silica Sand Producers Asso. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 73 I. C. C. 588, 589.

(w) Rates on scrap iron from Hot Springs and Pine Bluff, Ark., to Quincy, Ill., exceeded the aggregate of intermediate rates based on East St. Louis, Ill. Reparation awarded and measure of maximum reasonable rates prescribed. Standard Rail & Steel Co. v. M. P. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C., 219.

(x) Fifth-class rate on hoop steel from Glassport, Pa., to Manor, Pa., during Federal control, found unreasonable to extent it exceeded the aggrgate of intermediate rates to and from Homestead Junction, Pa. Reparation awarded. Pittsburgh Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 555.

(y) Rates which are higher than the aggregate of intermediate rates are prima facie unreasonable, Burns & Knapp v. B. S. & K. R. Ry. Co., 74 I. C. C. 112.

(z) It is a generally accepted principle of rate making that through rates should be less than the sum of the intermediate rates. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317, 356.

(aa) Through rates higher than the aggregate intermediates are prima facie unreasonable, but the prima facie presumption is rebuttable. Virginia- Carolina-Chemical Co. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co. 78 I. C. C. 107, 108.

(bb) In justification of rate assessed in excess of aggregate of intermediate rates, defendant submitted evidence of increase in operating costs and decrease in revenue during period of movement. HELD: General observations such as these are not sufficient to overcome presumption of unreasonableness where joint rates exceed aggregate of intermediates. Henderson Lumber Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 83, 84.

(cc) A joint through rate in excess of the aggregate of intermediate rates is prima facie unreasonable, but the presumption is rebuttable. Green Lumber Co. v. A. A. R. R. Co., 80 I. C. C. 185, 189.

(dd) When assessment of a switching charge in connection with transit results in greater aggregate compensation to carrier than sum of intermediate rates, it can not be considered that section 4 has thereby been violated, for services performed are not the same in the two instances. Transit involves an additional service on part of carrier for which separate charge may be made; the switching charge is an additional expense incident to transit service. Detroit Board of Trade v. W. Ry. Co. 80 I. C. C. 717, 720, 721.

(ee) A joint rate which exceeds the sum of the intermediate rates contemporaneously in effect is prima facie unreasonable. Tulsa Paper Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. 81 I. C. C. 293.

(ff) Through rates may not be condemned as unreasonable merely because constructed upon combination. Barnes Automobile Co. v. D., T. & I. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 350, 352.

(gg) A rate that exceeds the aggregate of intermediates is prima facie unreasonable, but that presumption is rebuttable by a showing that the joint rate is not intrinsically unreasonable. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. L. & P. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C. 499, 500.

§15½. Rate via other routes.
See Evidence §47.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) There are two routes over which coal may be shipped from the Thacker District, in West Virginia, to Alexandria, Ind.; one by the N. & W. and C. C. C. & St. L., the shorter line, and one by the N. & W., H. V., and L. E. & W. Complainants in 1903 had shipped to them at Alexandria, Ind., eight carloads of coal from the Thacker District, W. Va., over the latter route, and by that line the published rate was $1.90 per ton, while over the other route the rate was $1.65 per ton. November 26, 1903, the rate by the route used was reduced to $1.65, and later the other line lowered its rate to $1.55. Complainants, acting on behalf of the consignor, demanded reparation. The evidence relates solely to the rate itself, and the fact that a lower rate was in force over a competing short line. HELD, that the rate charged is not shown to have been unreasonable. and that, in view of their published tariff, the carriers in the through line over which the coal was carried could not lawfully apply the lower rate in effect over the competing line. J. J. Marley & Son v. Norfolk & W. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 616.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The joint through rate over another road is not a proper basis for reparation. Iola Portland Cement Co. v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 91, 92.

(c) Evidence that lower combinations were in effect via routes other than the one over which the shipments moved is not of itself sufficient basis for a finding that the joint through rates are unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory. Corporation Comm'n of North Carolina v. S. Ry., 33 I. C. C., 487, 492.

(d) The fact that a transit arrangement at a point is available in connection with joint rates effective over other lines affords no basis for a finding that higher combination rates attacked are unreasonable. Chapin & Co. v. C. I. & L. Ry., 38 I. C. C. 611, 612.

(e) Combination rates on stock cattle from Suggs and San Angelo, Tex., to Chickasha, Okla., via Lone Wolf, Okla., found unreasonable to extent they exceeded lower joint rates via another route through Altus, Okla., which lower rate was subsequently made applicable via route of movement. Reparation awarded. Snugg & Johnson v. C. R. I & P. Ry. Co., 73 I. C. C., 721.

(f) No presumption of unreasonableness attaches to a joint rate applicable over a particular route because a lower combination rate applies over another route. Paine Lumber Co. Case, 24 I. C. C. 626, followed. Stanley Works v. P. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. 2147.

§16. Reparation.

See Procedure Before Commission V; Reparation.

(a) Railroad companies which, acting independently, arrange their charges of freight so as to make a single through rate to be divided between them, for transportation between competitive terminal points, are not responsible for the charging, by another road joining in such through charge, of a local rate to an intermediate point on its line, although the through rate to the terminal point for the greater distance is less than that to the intermediate point for a less distance. Behlmer v. Louisville & Nashville Ry. Co. et al. 7 I. C. C. App. XII.

(b) One who does not show that he would have taken advantage of a joint tariff if he had known of it cannot recover of a carrier for failure to publish the tariff or file it with the Interstate Commerce Commission as required by the Interstate Commerce Act. Before any party can recover under the Interstate Commerce Act for the nonpublication of a joint tariff he must show, not merely the wrong of the carrier, but that the wrong has in fact operated to his injury. Parson v. Chicago & Northwestern Ry. Co. 7 I. C. C. App. XCI.

(c) The complainant is entitled to reparation for damages resulting from its inability to ship 640 tons of cotton seed to Hope, which it had contracted for and desired to have transported over defendant's line to Texarkana, and then by way of another line to Hope, and which shipment defendant had refused to accept under its local rate to Texarkana, but attempted to compel the complainant to pay the through rate to Hope, which was higher than the local rates based upon Texarkana, Ark. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 696.

(ca) Complainant attacked rates charged on cotton seed, carloads from Louisiana stations to Hope, Ark., as unreasonable. Complainant desired to ship cotton seed in carloads from Louisiana stations to Hope, Ark., at the sum of local rates based upon Texarkana, Ark., which sum was less than the published through charge, but defendant refused to apply its local rate to Texarkana, which was 12½c, on such through shipments and also refused to allow complainant to ship locally to Texarkana, under that rate. HELD, that while defendant was entitled to insist upon the application of the through rate to the through shipment to Hope, it could not lawfully refuse to receive and carry complainants freight to Texarkana under its local rate to that point, and that complainant is entitled to reparation for damages resulting from its inability to ship 640 tons of cotton seed to Hope which it had contracted for and desired to have transported over defendants line. Hope Cotton Oil Company v. T. P. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 696.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) Carriers under a joint rate are severally liable for damages for the violation of the law in which they participate. Sondheimer Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 606, 610.

(e) Where an unreasonable joint rate has been collected, the liability of the parties to such action is joint and several, and the Commission may award reparation against one of the roads which participated in the traffic, even though other roads which performed a part of the service are not made parties defendant to the formal complaint asking reparation. Webster Grocer Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 20, 21.

(f) The Commission will not, where a feasible and available joint rate and route are in effect, establish a joint rate over another route merely for the purpose of awarding reparation to a shipper who selected such other route and was compelled in consequence to pay a higher rate. Birge-Forbes Co. v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 28 I. C. C. 409, 411.

(g) American line parties to a joint rate from or to a point in Canada, the charges under which are unreasonable "cause to be done" or "do" a thing (i. e. the collection of unreasonable charges for the transportation of property) "prohibited and declared to be unlawful" by the act, and are "liable to the person or persons injured thereby for the full amount of the damage sustained." International Nickel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C., 627, 628.

(h) If railroads constituting a through route for traffic from a point in Canada to a point in the United States concurred in a through rate or a carload minimum that was unreasonably high, they are jointly and severally responsible for any damage that might result to any shipper on account of such unlawful rate or minimum. American Cynamid Co. v. Director General, 69 I. C. C. 337, 343.

(i) Where the commission's findings condemned joint rates, of which complainants bore only a portion, such complainants are entitled only to their proportionate share of any reparation awarded. Peoria Board of Trade v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 73 I. C. C., 532, 534.

(j) Shipment from point in United States, destined to another point in United States, moved in part through Canada. Contention by director general that commission is without jurisdiction to award reparation in respect of such rates, not sustained. Rate assailed was a joint rate, and all carriers parties thereto are jointly and severally liable for any damage resulting from its application. American lines over which shipment moved are subject to jurisdiction of the commission. Director general was operating them and is thus liable for full amount of any damage sustained. International Nickel Co., 66 I. C. C., 627, 628. Staley Mfg. Co. v. C. P. Ry. Co., 80 I. C. C. 512.

(k) Where a connecting carrier receives carloads of oil consisting of tank cars and carloads made up of barrel packages from the initial carrier and merely joins with the initial carrier in a joint rate in itself reasonable, it is not liable for the alleged discriminatory acts of the initial carrier in charging for the weight of the barrel package used in shipments made by one class of shippers, while at the same time making no charge for the weight of the tank cars against a competing class of shippers using such method of shipment. Penn. Refining Co. v. W. N. Y. & Penn. R. R. Co., 208 U. S. 208, 222, 28 Sup. Ct. 268, 52 L. ed. 456.

V. TARIFFS AND CONSTRUCTION.
See Reshipping Rates; Tariffs.

§17. In general.

(a) Any one member of a joint combination may file copies of joint tariff for all the members. Re Filing Copies of Joint Tariff, 1 I. C. R. 76.

(b) Joint tariffs to be printed in ordinary type, and copies kept at every depot or station upon the line of the carriers uniting therein. Order as to Publication of Joint Tariffs, 1 I. C. R. 598.

(c) Joint tariffs of rates, fares or charges established by two or more common carriers for the transportation of passengers or freight passing over continuous lines or routes, copies of which are required by the sixth section of the Act to be filed with the Commission, shall be made public so far as the same relate to business between points which are connected by the line of any single common carrier required by the first paragraph of such section to make public schedules of its rates, fares and charges. Such joint tariffs shall be so published by plainly printing the same in large type of at least the size of ordinary pica, copies of which shall be kept for the use of the public in such places and in such form that they can be conveniently inspected, at every depot or station upon the line of the carriers uniting in such joint tariff, where any business is transacted in competition with the business of a carrier whose schedules are required by law to be made public as aforesaid. Orders as to publication of joint tariffs. 1 I. C. C. 599.

(ca) Roads located wholly in one state or Territory, which interchange freight or passenger traffic with connections to or from points outside of such State or Territory on through tickets or bills of lading, should file tariffs covering such traffic with the Commission. If such through rates are made by the addition of local rates to the rates of connecting roads, such local tariffs should be filed with the Commission, together with a statement that through interstate rates are made by adding such local rates to the rates of the carrier with which connection is made. If joint rates are made on any basis other than by the addition of the local rates to the through rates of connecting carriers, tariffs showing such rates should be filed with the Commission covering all interstate business transacted thereunder. Re filing of joint tariffs, 2 I. C. C. 9.

(d) Such common carriers are also subject to the provisions of the Act in respect to joint tariffs of rates, fares and charges for continuous lines or routes. Matter of Grand Trunk Railway Co. v. 2 I. C. R. 496.

(e) The publication of inland joint tariffs for the transportation of foreign merchandise, and of advances and reductions, should be made by posting in a public place at the depot of the carrier where the freight is received in the port of entry, and also where it is delivered at the place of destination in the United States. New York Bd. of Trade & Transp. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 417.

(f) A schedule of rates designated a "joint freight tariff" announcing a rate from New Orleans to Kansas City of 30 cents per hundred pounds of sugar was duly published and filed with the Commission by the New Orleans Traffic Association on behalf of the roads composing said Association "and connections." The Texas & Pacific Railway Company, a member of said Association, in its own behalf, issued and filed a supplemental sheet announcing said rate of 30 cents effective. The several companies composing said Traffic Association operate roads extending to and leading out of New Orleans, but none of them extending to Kansas City: HELD, That a joint tariff of rates or charges must show on its face what carriers unite in establishing such joint tariff, and that the publication and filing of said schedule and supplemental rate sheet did not establish as provided by section 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce a joint tariff of rates and charges on a continuous line from New Orleans to Kansas City over the roads of said Association, or of any of them, in connection with any other road or roads. HELD further, That where freight passes over a continuous line or route operated by more than one company on which no joint tariff of rates or charges has been established, the tariffs of rates or charges is the sum of the established local rates or charges of the several companies operating such continuous line. Lehmann, Higginson & Co. v. Texas & Pacific R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 706.

(g) A joint tariff of rates or charges must show on its face what carriers unite in establishing such joint tariff, and for this purpose the words "and connections" are insufficient. Lehmann Higginson & Co. v. T. & P. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 706, 710.

(h) Carriers should not treat shipments of traffic intended to be continuous between interstate points as consisting of two kinds of service independent of each other, the one to or from a so-called basing or competitive point on a through rate, and the other between the basing or competitive point and a so-called local or intermediate point on a local rate. Re Atlanta & W. P. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 461, 3 I. C. C. Rep. 46, and Hamilton v. Chattanooga R. & C. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 482, 4 I. C. C. Rep. 686, cited and affirmed. Perry v. Fla. Central & Peninsular R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 740.

(i) A tariff sheet whose caption shows that the rate made applies only when the grain is destined through to points on the seaboard, and which has a memorandum at its foot showing that the total through rate is to be ascertained by consulting another tariff sheet for the rate from the point mentioned in such sheet to the seaboard, sufficiently shows that the rate named is a part of the joint through rate, and not a local rate. Parsons v. Chicago N. W. R. Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 5 I. C. R. 95.

(j) An indispensable element in every through shipment would seem to be a contract for such through service; an agreement between the parties at the inception of the carriage that the freight shall be transported to the point of destination at the through rate. Matter of alleged unlawful rates and practices, 7 I. C. C. 240, 247.

(k) In the matter of rates for thru routes whether via a single line, or a combination of carriers, the provisions of the law differ in no respect except one, and that is merely that the Commission may prescribe the measure of publicity which the carriers shall be required to give of their rates and fares on such continuous lines or routes, while as to the other class such requirement is specified in the law itself. Such exception does not go to the form, substance, maintenance or application of the rates in any degree whatsoever; and the Commission has, by order duly made March 23, 1889 prescribed that carriers by such continuous lines or routes shall publish their joint rates in the same manner as separate or individual roads are required by law to do. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 182.

(l) Joint through routes and rates are ordinarily the subject of agreement between the participating carriers, but when they have been established, and until finally abrogated or changed, they are required by the statute to be kept open to public use. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 182.

(m) The Commission has prescribed, by order duly made July 23, 1899, that the several carriers operating a continuous line or route shall publish their joint rates in the same manner as separate or individual roads are required by the statute to do. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 I. C. C. 182.

(n) Under section 6 of the act two kinds or classes of routes are recognized and provided for, namely, the line of a single carrier, and a continuous line or route operated by more than one carrier where the participating carriers established joint tariffs of rates or fares or charges for such continuous line or route; and in respect of both classes of lines or routes the provision is uniform that established rates shall not be increased except after ten days notice nor reduced except after three days notice. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 9 I. C. C. 182, 205.

(o) The failure of the C., St. P., M. & O. Railway Company to publish through freight rates from Chicago, Ill. and other points to Norfolk, Neb., while such through rates are established and published by that company in connection with other carriers to other points on its line in Nebraska amounts to unlawful discrimination against Norfolk. Johnson v. Chicago, St. P., M & D. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 221.

(p) At common law, and under the Act to Regulate Commerce as interpreted by the courts, joint through routes and through rates are matters of contract between the connecting carriers, and the defendant, as party to a joint tariff which does not give shippers the privilege of milling in transit, acted within its legal right in notifying its immediate connections and the complainant that it would not permit that practice. Diamond Mills v. Boston & Main R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 311.

(q) Carrier over whose line through route established, given opportunity to apply for an order requiring complainant to indemnify it against loss by reason of complainant's financial irresponsibility. Enterprise Transportation Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 326.

(r) Rates charged by connecting lines to be governed by joint tariff. Pacific Purchasing Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 549.

(s) Equipment provided, cannot affect rate as established by joint tariff for carload lots of certain minimum magnitude, except as the tariff in specific terms provides certain minimum rates on carloads in cars of certain lengths or capacity. Pacific Purchasing Co. v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 549.

(t) Joint rates established by a joint tariff not to be affected by equipment provided. Pacific Purchasing Co. v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 549.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(u) Where a through rate is constructed on a combination, each factor must be published and filed with the Commission. Without the filing of each factor, there is no official measure of the rate. Awbrey & Semple v. G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co., 17 I. C. C. 267, 271.

(v) Combinations of joint rates not filed with the Commission are not lawful factors to be considered by it in the determination of the reasonableness of the joint rate. Milburn Wagon Co. v. L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 144, 146.

(w) A through rate may not be constructed of factors not on file with the Commission. Hagar Iron Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 18 I. C. C. 529.

(x) Where port to port rates, reconsignments and intrastate rates are not on file with the Commission they cannot be used as a basis for determining in a claim for reparation the legality and reasonableness of the lawfully published through rate exacted. Hager Iron Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 18 I. C. C. 529.

(y) Where an initial line publishes and maintains one joint tariff, which is not properly concurred in by its connections, and at the same time another joint tariff naming the higher rates and properly concurred in, the latter tariff is the legal one and must be applied. Kennedy & Co. v. St. L. S. W. Ry. Co., 22 I. C. C. 277.

(z) Concurrence with others in joint rates that effect unjust discrimination or undue preference is the voluntary action of the carriers at the point where the unjust discrimination or the undue preference exists. Chamber of Commerce, Ashburn, Ga. v. G. S. & F. Ry. Co., 23 I. C. C. 140, 149.

(aa) In the absence of a reconsignment privilege applicable to the shipment in question, held that the sum of the local rates to and from the reshipping point was properly assessed. Deeves Lumber Co. v. A. & V. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 42, 43; Platten Produce Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 30, 31; Talge Mahogany Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 44, 45.

(bb) A distance rate has been held inapplicable to a rebilled shipment, where a joint rate was in effect. Memphis Freight Bureau v. I. C. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 1, 2.

(cc) Carriers cannot engage in through transportation, without publication of definite and specific rates, including all services incident to through movement. Hampton Mfg. Co. v. O. D. S. S. Co., 27 I. C. C. 666, 668.

(dd) Where rates are constructed by the use of combinations upon gateways between any two groups, the through rates should be increased by applying to each factor its respective percentage. Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C. 220, 246.

(ee) Shippers are entitled to use any through route available under the tariffs. If tariffs are so worded that routes other than a direct route are possible such routes should be available alike to all shippers and the through rate applicable via such route should be assessed against all shipments of the same kind of freight regardless of whether the shipment traveled the particular route because of a reconsignment order or under original billing. Reconsignment and Diversion Rules, 58 I. C. C., 568, 573.

(ff) If carriers intend to restrict application of joint rates to any particular route, and to likewise restrict reconsignment service in connection therewith, they should do so in clear and unequivocal language. Watters-Tonge Lumber Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., 59 I. C. C. 229, 231; McGowin Lumber & Export Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 238, 240; Meeds Lumber Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 243, 244, 245.

(gg) Under the Commission's tariff regulation joint rates on interstate traffic might be published as single amounts or by addition of arbitraries. Latter form of publication does not render rates any the less joint rates, and mere fact that arbitrary might have been increased under general order No. 28 at time of its promulgation does not necessarily now justify increases proposed by carriers, upon whom the burden of proof still lies. Switching Charges to and from South Tacoma, 61 I. C. C. 128, 129.

(hh) Rates between specified points, when unrestricted in the carrier's traffic to any particular route of movement, apply over all routes of carrier. Pioneer Lumber Co. v. Director General, as Agent 74 I. C. C. 289.

(ii) Where schedules purport to publish joint rates, and intermediate carrier, which forms a necessary link in the through route, actually participates in through movement, and for whose account a switching charge is published, is not shown as concurring carrier, such method of publication is contrary to the act and commission's tariff regulations. Cord and Pulp Wood to Canton, 78 I. C. C. 593, 596.

(jj) Local rates and joint through rates are placed by the Act on the same level, both being required to be openly published and uniformly applied, and although the carriers are obliged to establish local rates and are left to agree upon joint through rates, or not, as they choose, still if they do agree therein, the rates can become legally operative only by being established as prescribed in the Act. K. C. S. Ry. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 597, 32 Sup. Ct. 316, 56 L. ed. 556.

§18. Application of proportional rate.

See Supra §13½; Facilities and Privileges § 11½, §15, §18; Proportional Rates; Reconsignment §6¼; Reshipping Rates; Through Routes and Joint Rates §19.

(a) Complainant, C. R. I. & P. Ry, alleged respondent, C. & A. R., transported cattle from Kansas City, Mo., to Chicago, Ill., at less than the published rates, for the reason that the livestock originating at points west of Kansas City is stopped at Kansas City to try the market and is again reshipped to Chicago, Ill., at the through rate from point of origin to destination, where as the proper charge should have been on the Kansas City combination. HELD, complaint dismissed as the shipments were not through consignments, the combination rates as per tariff were protected in some cases with some carriers, and in others the through rates were used with stopping in transit privilege at Kansas City in accordance with published tariffs. C. R. I. & P. R., v. C. & A. R., 2 I. C. C. 721.

(b) While defendant carrier was entitled to insist upon the application of the through rate to the through shipment on its line to Hope, Ark., instead of applying the sum of local rates based upon Texarkana, Ark., which sum was less than the published through charge, it could not lawfully refuse to receive and carry complainant's freight to Texarkana under the local rate to that point, even though the complainant's attempt to ship its freight to Texarkana was for the purpose of having it subsequently reshipped from that point by another line to Hope, Ark. Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 696.

(c) The Evansville & Terre Haute Railroad Company having, instead of making a through rate from points in Indiana to destinations south of the Ohio River, established a local rate on hay of 8 cents per hundred pounds to Evansville, and a proportional of 6½ cents to Evansville when the shipment is billed through to a specified destination, acts unreasonably and unjustly in insisting upon the billing of these shipments to a specified destination in order to secure application of the lower proportional rate, while it declines to assume responsibility for such billing, and does not post in its stations the tariffs from which the shipper can himself ascertain the rate at which the shipment should be billed. While the proportional rate is kept in force it is reasonable and just that these shipments shall be billed to Evansville in care of the road leading southerly therefrom. T. M. Kehoe & Co. v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 172.

(d) The fact that through rates are less than the sum of in and out rates is not of itself a valid ground of objection, nor is it unlawful for defendants to maintain reconsignment rates which are higher in some cases than their proportion of through rates. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 486.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) Although a proportional rate is published this does not make it a legal rate, if there exists a published through rate. Lindsay Bros. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., 16 I. C. C. 6, 8.

(f) A joint through rate takes precedence over a combination of a proportional and local. Delray Salt Co. v. D. T. & I. Ry. Co., 18 I. C. C. 245.

(g) Principle of rate making which determines the measure of inbound rates on raw material by the compensation received for subsequent independent movements of outbound manufactured products not a correct one. Curry & Whyte Co. v. D. & I. R. R. R. Co., 30 I. C. C. 1, 12.

(h) Whenever absorption of elevation charges is made the grain can not lawfully move forward except at the balance of the through rate. Merchants Exchange of St. Louis v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 34 I. C. C., 341, 351.

(i) A combination where the rates on grain to and on the product from the transit point is greater than the thru rate has frequently been held to be unjustly discriminatory against the intermediate milling point to the extent that the combination of the rate on grain to and on the product from the transit point exceeds by more than the established transit charge the rate contemporaneously in effect on the product. Eldred Milling Co. v. C. N. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 215, 219.

(j) It is not practicable to have rates into and out of all jobbing points so constructed that the resulting through charges from the factory to utimate destination are the same via all jobbing centers. Wichita Wholesale Furniture Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 44 I. C. C. 339, 344.

(k) A reshipping or rebilling rate is a proportional rate under which after a commodity has been shipped to a distributing market and unloaded for the purpose of storage or treatment in transit the same commodity or an equivalent amount may be reshipped to final destination. There is a close analogy between reshipping rates and transit. The reshipping rate is usually less than the local rate from the distributing or transit point to the final destination and must be regarded as part of the through rate or charge from the point of origin through the transit point to the ultimate destination. Cairo Bd. of Trade v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C., 343, 348.

(l) Reshipping rates are not merely divisions of through rates but are separately established rates generally published by the carriers other than those engaged in the inbound, movement and without the concurrence of the latter; and the point of reshipment is a rate-breaking point. A change in the reshipping rates, even though it may affect the through charges, will have no effect upon the inbound rates. Cairo Bd. of Trade v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 343, 350.

(m) In determining whether or not a complainant has been damaged by the exaction of unreasonable or unduly preferential reshipping rates the total thru charges paid from point of origin must be considered. But this does not hold true of a determination of the reasonableness or justness of the reshipping rate itself. Reshipping rates are not merely divisions of through rates, but are separately established rates generally published by carriers other than those engaged in the inbound movement and without the concurrence of the latter; and the point of reshipment is a rate-breaking point. A change in the reshipping rates, even though it may affect the through charges, will have no effect upon the inbound rates. The inbound carriers have a right to secure reasonable compensation for their part of the haul by reasonable inbound rates. Hence they are subject to review independently of the outbound rates. An excessive reshipping rate might produce a reasonable through charge in connection with an unduly low inbound rate and vice versa. It can not properly be argued that a proposal to increase unremunerative reshipping rates could be denied upon the ground that the through charge composed of an excessive inbound rate and the unremunerative reshipping rate is just and reasonable. The converse must also be true, namely that shippers may not upon like grounds be denied relief from unreasonable or unduly prejudical reshipping rates. This is also true as to proportional rates that are applicable to shipments going or from beyond and which are not limited as applying only on shipments from or to designated points or territory. Each of such rates must be judged upon its individual merits. Cairo Bd. of Trade v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C., 343, 350.

(n) It is the universal practice to accord transit under the through rates wherever necessary at points along the direct line of movement. At points so located defendants must either equalize in and out rates by means of reshipping rates or provide transit under through rates. Cairo Bd. of Trade v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C., 343, 351.

(o) A system of reshipping rates is more simple, easier of application, and less subject to abuse than any system involving transit arrangements with their attending complexities and difficulties of enforcement. Buffalo Grain Cases, 46 I. C. C. 570, 582.

(p) Carriers which participate in joint through transportation are jointly and severally liable in a proceeding for reparation. Swift & Co. v. U. P. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 336, 337.

(q) So long as lines forming through routes and publishing joint rates applicable thereto allow transit on basis of the through rates at some points, they may be required to accord transit on the same basis at competing points on such through routes. Southern Hardwood Traffic Asso. v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 132, 141.

(r) The collection on outbound shipments of grain stopped in transit at Cincinnati, Ohio, and Louisville, Ky., of amounts equal to the division of the through charges accruing to the outbound carriers with subsequent refund when the total charges so collected is greater than the through charge from point of origin to destination, found not unreasonable or unduly prejudicial. Cincinnati Grain & Hay Exchange Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C., 104, 108.

(s) The fact that combination through rates were composed of proportional factors, the use of each of which was dependent upon the use of the other factor or factors, did not invest them with the character of joint through rates. Van Dusen Harrington Co. v. Director General, 78 I. C. C. 729, 731.

(t) Whenever by any transit arrangement through rates are applied, they must be as of the date of the first movement of the shipment from the point of origin under such through rates. Washburn-Crosby Milling Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. A480.

(u) Whenever under a transit arrangement a through rate is applied, such through rate must be as of the first movement of the shipment from the point of origin under such through rate. La Junta Milling & Elevator Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A507.

(v) The Interstate Commerce Act, §6, prohibits any carrier from charging, demanding, collecting, or receiving any greater, less, or different compensation for the transportation of passengers or tariffs filed thereunder than the rate specified in such tariff. Section 8 provides that any common carrier, doing anything prohibited thereby, shall be liable to the persons injured for the full amount of damages sustained. Section 9 authorizes any person, damaged by any carrier subject thereto, to sue for the recovery of the damages in any United States District or Circuit Court. Plaintiff and defendant had a joint tariff providing a through rate for shipments of lumber originating on defendant's line, but providing no through rate permitting such shipments to be stopped at the junction point and there dressed and then forwarded. On lumber so shipped defendant collected from the original shipper the local rate to the junction point, but demanded and received from plaintiff a portion of the freight from such junction point to destination; the rate in force on such shipments being the same from the junction point as from the point of origin on defendant's line. HELD, that plaintiff was entitled to sue for the payments so made, though they were voluntary, and though in making such payments both plaintiff and defendant were guilty of an unlawful act, as plaintiff was damaged by such payment, and the statute is not limited to the regulation of contracts between shipper and carrier. Mobile & O. R. R. v. Washington & C. Ry., 242 Fed. 531.

(w) Before a lower transit tariff can be applied to a shipment through a transit point, it must appear that there is some relation between the inbound and outbound shipments; since an inbound shipment consumed or reconsigned at the transit point cannot be made the basis of transit shipment. G. R. & I. Ry. Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 577, 585.

(x) An application of transit rates to shipments consumed or reconsigned at the transit point constitutes rebating. Nichols & Cox Lumber Co. v. United States, 212 Fed. 588, 591.

§19. Breaking Transit.

See Creating in Transit; Fabrication in Transit; Facilities and Privileges §18; §15; Interstate Commerce Commission §1; Proportional Rates; Reshipping Rates; Stoppage in Transit; Storage in Transit; Transportation §11;

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A shipper may transport merchandise to a given point, take possession of it at that point and reship it, even though the effect of the transaction is to secure transportation from a point in one state to a point in another at a less cost than the published through interstate rate. Montgomery Freight Bureau v. W. Ry. of Ala., 14 I. C. C. 150, 152.

(b) The combination of locals, and not the joint through rate, was properly collected on a shipment which was ordered reshipped before it reached its original billed destination, in the absence of a reconsignment privilege. Floridin Co. v. S. A. L. Ry., 21 I. C. C. 610.

(c) A forwarding movement, ordered by consignee who does not take possession of goods, is not a new shipment. Memphis Freight Bureau v. I. C. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 1, 2.

(d) Carrier is fairly entitled to a higher charge on the outbound product than on the inbound movement of raw material to the transit point. Mixed Car Dealers Asso. v. D. L. & W. R. R. Co. 33 I. C. C., 133, 139.

(e) No unlawful discrimination or preference can be predicated upon the fact that sash and door rates must be paid upon outbound movement which results in making aggregate costs greater than on the through movement of lumber or sash and doors. Anson, Gilkey & Hurd Co. v. S. P. Co., 33 I. C. C., 332, 337.

(f) Only substantial commercial and transportation reasons can justify a carrier in permitting a practice like reshipping, which admittedly is similar to that of reconsignment and from which shippers obtain similar benefits and results, while denying to other shippers who can not avail themselves of the reshipping arrangement the right of reconsignment. Doran & Co. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry., 33 I. C. C., 523, 531.

(g) Reshipping admittedly similar to reconsignment. Doran & Co. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 33 I. C. C., 523, 531.

(h) The right to make two separate and dissociated shipments of the same commodity, the one at a local rate in and the other at a lower rate out of a reshipping point, cannot be denied. Merchants Exch. of St. Louis v. B. & O. R. R., 34 I. C. C. 341, 350.

(i) While reshipping or proportional rates should in all cases be regarded as applicable only for part of a through but suspended movement from point of origin to ultimate destination, local rates although they may likewise apply to part of a through movement, cannot be limited according to the point of origin of the shipment or the rates which were paid inbound. Merchants' Exch. of St. Louis v. B. & O. R. R., 34 I. C. 341, 351.

(j) It might be that competition has influenced the establishment of an adjustment on one commodity moving outbound which it would not be just to carriers to require on another moving inbound. Alpha Portland Cement Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 34 I. C. C. 414, 421.

(k) If through charges are lawful in the sense that they are reasonable charges for the through service, a shipper can not predicate unlawfulness of one of the component parts of the through charges by alleging that it is excessive compensation to that carrier for that part of the through service. Des Moines Saw Mill Co. v. C. M. & St. P. R. R. Co., 35 I. C. C. 182, 184.

§20. Change in rate while shipment at transit point.

See Supra §18; §19; Facilities and Privileges §15; §18.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The through rate on the finished product is applicable from origin to destination. Monarch Milling Co. v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 17 I. C. C. 1.

(b) Tariffs provided that on reshipment from concentration point the through rate from origin to final destination would be protected. Consignment was destroyed by fire while at transit point. Claim for refund of local rate from origin to transit point denied. Anderson, Clayton & Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 12.

(c) Whenever by any transit arrangement through rates are applied, such through rates must be as of date of first movement from point of origin under such through rates. In Re Milling-in-Transit Rates, 17 I. C. C. 113.

(d) Where grain is shipped under a milling-in-transit privilege and the through rate is changed after shipment from the point of origin and before shipment at the point of milling, the rate in effect at the time of the shipment at point of origin governs under the rule that rates cannot be changed while shipments are in course of transportation. In Re Milling-in-Transit Rates, 17 I. C. C. 113, 114.

(e) Although the rate is advanced while oil was at a refining-in-transit point, the legal rate is the rate in effect at the time of original movement. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 19 I. C. C. 434, 435.

(f) With respect to shipments moving in connection with transit arrangements, the through rates and regulations lawfully applicable to the transportation and transit service are those in effect when the shipments originated. Fargo Iron & M. Co. v. G. N. Ry., 46 I. C. C., 399, 400.

(g) On barley from South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Iowa to points in Pennsylvania, malted in transit at Chicago, Ill., charges assessed found unlawful to extent they exceeded those based on rates in effect at time of initial shipment east of Chicago. Reparation awarded. Columbia Malting Co. v. N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 53 I. C. C. 137.

§20a. Combination rule.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Fact that publication of combination basis of rates from all points would complicate tariffs does not constitute sufficient reason to warrant continuance of practice of charging through rates in excess of aggregate of intermediates. Archenhold Automatic Supply Co. v. A. S. R. R. Co. 78 I. C. C. 434, 438.

(b) Proposed restricted application of so-called combination rule, providing for single increases to combination rates where no through rates in effect, to rates only where there is no through rate via any route, and to effect same result through restriction of certain rates to certain routes of A. C. L. R. R., found not justified. Generally accepted interpretation of the rule is that combination rates constructed as provided therein are invariably applicable unless there is joint through rate in effect over route of movement, and much traffic has accordingly moved over so-called unauthorized routes since inception of rule. Cancellation Rule for Combination Rates, 81 I. C. C. 745.

(c) Respondents proposed to restrict the application of the so-called combination rule for constructing lumber rates from the Mississippi Valley and southeastern points of origin to Ohio and Mississippi River crossings when the shipments are destined for points beyond these crossings. The combination rule provided for the application of single increases to the combination rates where no through rates were in effect from point of origin to destination. The application of this rule has in many instances resulted in lower rates than were applicable under the published through rates. At this time there is a substantial movement of lumber over the so-called authorized routes now enjoying the protection of this rule. HELD, proposed schedules would increase rates, proposed basis not justified. Cancellation rule for combination rates, 81 I. C. C. 745.

(d) Although the Commission has frequently indicated that the combination rule, designed as a temporary expedient, is undesirable as a permanent tariff rule, it does not think that carriers publishing one factor of a through rate under which there is a substantial movement, should be permitted to cancel the application of the combination rule to that factor, unless carriers publishing the other factors join in the cancellation or in the publication of joint through rates. Combination Rule on Box Shooks, 89 I. C. C. 219, 220.

(a) Any one member of a joint combination may file copies of joint tariff for all the members. Proceedings at Atlanta, 1 I. C. R. 76.

(b) No authority to issue through tickets or through bills of lading for property, at through rates, over connecting lines, is conferred by the Act to Regulate Commerce upon common carriers of interstate commerce, in the absence of arrangements between the companies. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. D. Ky.) 2 I. C. R. 351; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 454.

(c) The publication by a carrier subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, of the aggregate local rates between points on its own line and those on the line of a connecting carrier with which it has no joint tariff, is not illegal; but it cannot lawfully add to the duly established rates of another carrier any amount it pleases less than its own rate, and publish and use that sum as a through rate, without the consent of the other company. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323.

(d) Rates established by a single carrier "upon its route" and shown on individual tariffs, and joint rates "over continuous lines or routes operated by more than one carrier" shown on joint tariffs, are the rates authorized by section 6 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and required to be posted at stations and filed with the Commission. The word "joint," and the express reference in the statute to the several carriers over a continuous line and the joint tariffs which they establish, import concurrence and assent in fixing aggregate rates for a combined service, as distinguished from the separate rates of a single carrier for transportation "upon its route." New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323.

(e) It is indispensably necessary in interstate traffic that the consent of each of several lines over which freight is to be carried should be had in the establishment and operation of what is called "through rates." Such rates are the subject of agreement, and for their existence depend upon agreement. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323, 335.

(f) At common law, and under the Act to Regulate Commerce as interpreted by the courts, joint through routes and through rates are matters of contract between the connecting carriers, and the defendant, as party to a joint tariff which does not give shippers the privilege of milling in transit, acted within its legal right in notifying its immediate connections and the complainant that it would not permit that practice. Diamond Mills v. Boston & Maine, R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 311.

(g) Every common carrier by rail or water which forms a link in a through route must either file or concur in some tariff under which it handles the through business. Enterprise Transportation Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R. 12 I. C. C. 327, 337.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) It would be improper for one road to establish a joint rate from a point on another road without the concurrence of the latter. Coal Rates on the Stony Fork Branch, 26 I. C. C. 168, 173.

(i) The shipper is not bound by the terms of concurrence sheets where they conflict with tariffs, since concurrence sheets are not posted in the same manner as are tariffs, and no opportunity is afforded the general public to ascertain whether or not the terms of the concurrence limit the application of the tariff in so far as the participating road is concerned. Healy & Towle v. C. & N. W. Ry., 43 I. C. C. 83, 84.

(j) Rate on quarry-run limestone from Lewisburg, Ohio, to Cement City, Mich., increased under the Fifteen Per Cent case, 45 I. C. C., 303, found not unreasonable or unduly prejudicial as compared with rates of competitors between other points which were not increased following that case. Such competitive rates were controlling factors in arriving at rates here in issue but defendant herein does not concur therein and carriers maintaining them are not parties to rates here involved. Peninsular Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 542.

(k) Paragraph (4), section 6, of the act requires that the "names of the several carriers which are parties to any joint tariff shall be specified therein," and that each of the parties thereto other than the one filling the tariff shall file such evidence of concurrence therein as may be required by the Commission.

New York Dock Ry. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C., 656, 662.

(l) Where schedules purport to publish joint rates. and intermediate carrier, which forms a necessary link in the through route, actually participates in the through movement, and for whose account a switching charge is published, is not shown as concurring carrier, such method of publication is contrary to the act and the commission's tariff regulations. Cord and Pulp Wood to Canton, 78 I. C. C. 593, 596.

(m) Shipments moved as routed by shipper and charges collected at combination rate, to each factor of which was applied increase under General Order No. 28 of director general. Tariff of delivering carrier contained provision that such increase be added but once to combination rate, tariffs of other participating carriers being silent on this point. HELD: Following Sligo Iron Store Co., 62 I. C. C., 643, 73 I. C. C., 551, publication of such provision is holding out to shipper of rate so constructed which carrier should protect. Reparation awarded. Tuffli Bros. Pig Iron & Coke Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 123.

(n) The mere insertion in the tariff of an erroneous concurrence number did not invalidate the rates shown therein. Bartlett Co. v. C. P. & St. L. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A203.

§20¾. Different Classification applicable.

See Classification §20.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where through charges exceed the aggregate of the intermediates, as a result of the differing rules and minimum weight applicable in two rate territories, the rules that produce such results are clearly improper. Minneapolis Threshing Machine Co. v. M. & St. L. R. R. 37 I. C. C. 92, 95.

(b) When through rates are published from points in one classification territory to points in a territory in which a different classification applied they must be made subject to one or the other of such classifications. Where such through rates are approximately equal to the sums of the intermediate rates of corresponding classes the charges computed at the through rate subject to the higher classification will exceed in some instances the aggregates of the charges to and from points at the boundaries of the classification territories computed at rates subject to one classification up to the boundary line and to a different one beyond. This can be avoided only by reducing the through rates or increasing the intermediate rates, or by both processes, so that the former will in no instance produce a greater total charge on a through shipment than the aggregate of the charges obtained by the use of rates to and from an intermediate point; or by publishing commodity rates to apply on various articles on which the charges on the basis of the through rate would not exceed the aggregate of the charges based on the intermediate rates. Through Rates to Points in Louisiana and Texas, 38 I. C. C. 153, 159.

See Intermediate Clause; Tariffs §13a.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Rate on bituminous slack coal from Landon to Rostraver and Monessen, Pa., during Federal control, based upon the rate to Webster, Pa., the first station beyond Monessen and applicable to intermediate points, including Rostraver and Monessen. found applicable and not unreasonable. Carriers maintained a lower rate between certain stations, including Landon, but rate referred to another tariff naming distances between stations to and from which the rate applied, and such tariff did not include distances from Landon. Warner & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C., 523.

(b) Tariff Circular 18A of the Interstate Commerce Commission, provided that a tariff should contain an alphabetical index of the points from and to which it applies, and, further, that "this is not to be understood as prohibiting the incorporation in a tariff of a rule for the affirmative and definite application of the rates or fares named in that tariff to or from points not indexed, and which are distinctly intermediate on the same line with points that are indexed." A tariff published by a railroad company provided that "between stations * * * rates to or from intermediate stations will be the same as shown to or from the next more distant station to or from which rates are named." HELD, that such provision must be construed in connection with the circular under which it was issued, and to or from which specific rates were named. National Elevator Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. 246 Fed. 588.

(c) In a railroad tariff, fixing rates to and from stations named, and also providing for the rates to apply to "intermediate stations," the word "intermediate" refers to stations between those named. National Elevator Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry., 246 Fed. 588.

(d) Where the tariff sheet of a railroad named the rates on coal from two points on its line to a common destination within the same state, the higher rate being charged for the shorter haul, the further clause appearing on the sheet "On interstate traffic a higher rate must not be charged for a shorter than a longer distance over the same line, * * the shorter being entirely included within the longer distance," did not effect the named rates, and was not an offer to transport coal from the farther point at the same rate charged from the point nearer the common destination, though the ultimate destination of the shipments was beyond the state. Sunderland Bros. Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R., (Mo. 1916), 19 S. W. 650.

§22. What is legal rate.

See Supra § 15; §15½; §18, §20; §20 3-4; §21; Commodity Rates II; Facilities and Privileges §18; Legal Rate; Tap Lines §18; Tariffs §3 (1); §3 (2); §18; Through Routes and Joint Rates §18; §20.

(a) A rate is none the less a through rate when freight is shipped upon a through bill of lading from the point of origin to destination, accompanied by a way bill showing the route over which it is to pass, with the percentages of all the other lines set forth on the way-bill, because the initial carrier charges its local rate as part of the total rate, and the remaining lines charge an agreed rate made by percentages. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 393.

(b) When a combined rate, evidenced by a through bill of lading from the point of origin to destination, has every constituent of a through rate, it is not necessary that it should be formally quoted by one of the carriers to another who is engaged in the making of it, in order to constitute it a through rate. Names are nothing in such a transaction; the law looks at the elements and substance of the transaction itself. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce v. F. & P. M. R. R. 2 I. C. C. 393, 398.

(c) When there is no joint rate in effect from a station on the line of one carrier to a station on another carriers line to which a ticket is applied for, it is competent to name a through rate made up of the sums of rates prevailing on the several roads or parts of roads made use of in the journey, using for such a through rate local rates where there are no joint rates in effect, and joint rates in combination with locals where they are in effect for any part of the distance. When no joint rates are announced it is understood that the local rates are employed in arriving at the through rates. Re passenger tariffs 2 I. C. C. 445, 447.

(d) A railway company had in force from Nebraska points to Turner, Illinois, a tariff sheet directing corn destined to the seaboard to be billed from such Nebraska points to Turner at different rates when destined to different seaboard points. The corn was carried from Nebraska to Chicago where the rebilling and transferring was done. No shipments could be made under this tariff from Iowa points. HELD, that as billed, the shipment was to Turner; that by billing at different rates to Turner, an illegal preference was given; and that Iowa grain growers were subjected to unreasonable disadvantage in marketing corn. Northwestern Iowa Grain & Stock Shippers Asso. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 431.

(e) The carriage of freights can not be prevented from being treated as one continuous carriage from the place of shipment to the place of destination by any means or devices intended to evade any of the provisions of the act. Matter of Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 2 I. C. C. 497, 503.

(f) The Act to Regulate Commerce, §§2, 3, are not violated by charging a local rate on cotton from a more distant point to Vicksburg, Mississippi, when, after pressing there, it is forwarded to its point of destination at less than Vicksburg rate to such point, the total of such two rates being made to equal the regular rate from such initial point to such destination. Cowan v. Bond (C. C. S. D. Miss.) 2 I. C. R. 542.

(g) Where property is billed from one station to another with the understanding that it is to be unloaded at an intermediate station, and that whether it shall be reloaded for further carriage will depend upon the volition of the shipper or of anyone who may have become purchaser, the case does not fall within the reasons governing rates on through transportation, and the carrier is not at such intermediate points entitled to have the carriage protected as a through shipment as against competitors. C. R. I. & P. R. v. C. & A. R., 2 I. C. C. 721, 725.

(h) Where freight passes over a continuous line or route operated by more than one company, on which no joint tariff of rates or charges has been established, the tariff of rates or charges is the sum of the established local rates or charges of the several companies operating such continuous line. Lehmann v. Texas & . R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 706.

(i) The continuity of the carriage of freight over a line formed by two or more roads, is not broken in fact and cannot be broken in law by the charge of a local rate by one (or more) of such roads as its proportion of the through rate. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala., v. A. M. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 348. 351.

(j) That a local rate is made part of a through rate does not render the latter rate illegal, provided that neither the local nor the through rate is unjust or unreasonable, and that neither of them unjustly discriminates nor gives an undue preference or advantage to persons or traffic similarly situated. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. (C. C. App. 5th C.), 5 I. C. R. 685.

(k) The fact that a local rate is made part of a through rate, does not render the through rate illegal, provided neither the local nor the through rate be unjust or unreasonable; and provided neither of them unjustly discriminate, or give an undue preference or disadvantage to persons or traffic similarly situated. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama M. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 685.

(l) The continuity of the carriage of freight over a line formed by two or more roads is not broken in fact, and cannot be broken in law, by the charge of a local rate by one (or more) of such roads as its proportion of the through rate. Board of Trade of Troy, Ala. v. Ala. Mid. Ry. Co. et al, 6 I. C. C. 2.

(m) Where a contract is made with a shipper by a carrier, member of a through line, for shipment of goods over the line at a less than the published lawful rate charged shippers in general, it is not a violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission for the delivering carrier to exact payment of the full lawful rate before delivery, although if the shipper was an innocent party he might be entitled to his goods on payment of the contract rate. Duncan v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 85.

(n) The mere fact that one of several connecting carriers receives a share of the total through charges equal to its individually established rates between the points covered by its road is insufficient to make such shipments purely local, and relieves it from liability to make reparation for illegality in such charges, but they must be treated as through shipments unless they are local in all essential respects. Independent Ref. Asso. v. Western N. P. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 378.

(o) The mere circumstances that the Boston & Maine received a share of the total through charge which was equal to its individually established rate from Boston to the points of destination, is altogether insufficient to make these shipments take on a purely local character over the Boston & Maine; and if the shipments were not, in all essential respects, local from Boston to the destination points, then they were through shipments over the through line of the connecting carriers, and must be so treated. Independent Refiners Asso. v. Western N. Y. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 378.

(p) Shipments of grain were carried to Kansas City, Mo., from points west thereof at local rates, and quantities of grain were afterwards reshipped and rebilled from Kansas City to Chicago or other destinations at the balance of the established through rate from the original point of shipment to Chicago or other ultimate destination, instead of the higher local rate in force from Kansas City to such destination. There was no agreement for through carriage between shipper and carrier at the original point of shipment, no other destination than Kansas City was named, and upon carriage of the grain to that point and delivery to consignee the transportation was completed and the local rate in effect to Kansas City was paid; but the practice was to allow the consignee or other owner of grain at Kansas City to ship from Kansas City to Chicago and other points at the "balance of the through rate," upon presentation of the paid expense bill to Kansas City and certification by a joint agent of carriers at Kansas City. Under this "expense bill" practice it was practicable through transfer of expense bills, to secure a lower "balance of through rate" than would result from deducting the local rate between the actual point of origin and Kansas City from the through rate between said point of origin and the final destination, and other rate manipulations were possible. HELD, That such shipment and reshipment did not constitute a through shipment from the point of origin to the point of final destination, and grain so shipped and reshipped was not entitled to the benefit of the through rate in force. HELD, further, That the shipment from the point of origin to Kansas City was local, resulting in the grain becoming Kansas City grain, and the fact that it had come from a point farther west was no reason for applying on shipments of such grain from Kansas City any less or different rate than was in force from Kansas City. Matters of Alleged Unlawful Rates and Practices, 7 I. C. C. 240.

(q) A shipment of grain to Kansas City from points west at local rates is local in its reshipment to Chicago or other destination, and does not entitle the grain to the benefit of the through rate from the original point of shipment, in the absence of any agreement at such point for through transportation; and the fact that such grain comes from a point further west is no reason for applying upon it any less or different rate than that in force in Kansas City. Re Alleged Unlawful Rates and Practices, 7 I. C. C. 240.

(r) A carrier which has published and filed its rates as the law requires may combine such rates with the lawfully established rates of a connecting carrier or carriers, and thus announce the aggregate amount for which traffic will be transported from points on its railroad to points on the line of such connecting carrier or carriers; but one carrier cannot lawfully add to the duly established rates of another carrier any amount it pleases less than its own local rates, and publish and use that sum as a through rate to points on the line of such other carrier without its consent. Such a through rate is not a "joint rate," for joint rates can be made only by concurrence or assent; nor is it a combination rate, for one of its component parts has no legal existence or sanction as a separate or local charge; there must be lawful rates upon each of the roads before there can be a lawful combination of rates. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323.

(s) In the absence of some agreement or understanding with a connecting line by which a joint tariff of rates is authorized, a given carrier cannot lawfully publish or apply any other rates than those which it fixes for transportation between points reached by its railroad; and the rates so fixed are the only lawful rates which such carrier can charge for any transportation service which it may perform, whether the traffic carried is destined to points on its own road or to points on the line of some other carrier. New York N. & H. R. Co. v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323.

(t) Notwithstanding the contention that higher rates are lawfully in force on shipments from Summerdale than from Milwaukee and other more distant points to eastern localities, it appears that, under the tariffs in force over defendants' through line, the rates from Summerdale were actually the same as those from more distant stations, including Milwaukee, at the time a less than carload lot of asbestos pipe coverings was shipped by complainant from Summerdale to Lima, O. HELD, That in failing to apply the through Milwaukee-division rates from Summerdale on such shipment the defendants acted contrary to the requirements of section 6 of the Act, and that complainant is entitled to recover the overcharge. Chicago F. P. Covering Co. v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 316.

(u) A carrier which is a party to a joint rate from Buffalo to Boston on grain shipped from the west under a through rate cannot repudiate the contract of shipment, and cannot impose an arbitrary in addition to the through rate, on the ground that the grain had been milled in transit at Buffalo under an arrangement with a connecting carrier, as the carrier must apply the established rate under which the traffic moved, although it may refuse to become a party to a joint tariff which permits milling in transit. Diamond Mills v. Boston & Maine R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 311.

(v) Where a joint through route has been formed, the rate charged is a through rate, and a shipment will move upon the rate existing at the time it is billed by the initial carrier. The adoption of a joint through rate will not affect a shipment moving upon a combination through rate. Re Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 163.

(va) A rate is a unit and liability for same as a whole is incurred by the shipper at the time of making shipment. Re Through Routes and Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 163.

(w) A through rate ascertainable from the tariffs of the participating carriers at the date of shipment applies where through billing is given by the originating carrier, and is recognized by all connecting carriers; and when such rate is made up of the sum of the locals, the locals apply as of the date of shipment. Any increase in the through rate so made after the date of the shipments, or any decrease therein, is not applicable to such through shipments. Re Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 163.

(x) Where through billing is given by the originating carrier and is recognized by all connecting carriers to destination, there is in existence a through route over which a through rate applies, which through rate is ascertainable from the tariffs of the participating carriers at the date of shipment; and when such rate is made up of the sum of the locals, the locals apply as of the date of shipment. Any increase in the through rate so made after the date of shipment, or any decrease therein, is not applicable to such through shipments. Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 164.

(xa) Where a through route has been formed the rate charged is a through rate, and the shipment will move upon the rate existing at the time it is billed by the initial carrier. Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 164.

(y) Existence of a through route is to be determined by the incidents and circumstances of the shipment, such as the billing, the transfer from one carrier to another, the collection and division of transportation charges, or the use of a proportional rate to or from junction points or basing points. These incidents named are not to be regarded as exclusive of others which may tend to establish a carrier's course of business with respect to through shipments. Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 I. C. C. 164.

(z) Tariffs can not be given a retroactive effect; they can not be made to apply to conditions other than those existing upon the date when such tariffs become effective. A combination through rate is as binding, definite and absolute as a joint through rate; and all the conditions, regulations and privileges obtaining as to any factor in such combination rate for through shipment at the time of initial shipment upon such combination through rate must be adhered to and cannot be varied as to that shipment during the period of such shipment to its final destination. A local or proportional rate "in" can not be absorbed, diminished or affected by any "out" rate not in effect at the time when the traffic moved upon such local or proportional rate. In the matter of through routes and through rates 12 I. C. C. 164, 172.

(aa) Through traffic not necessarily entitled to benefit of local rates. Morgan v. M. K. & T. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 525.

(bb) Through shipment not necessarily entitled to benefit of low rate established from intermediate points, because of competition. Morgan v. K. M. & T. R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 525.

(cc) A carrier may not charge a higher through rate upon one shipment and a lower combination rate upon another shipment of the same kind between the same points at the same time. Morgan v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 525.

(dd) A specific through rate is the lawful rate for a through shipment, even though some combination of rates may make lower. Morgan v. M. K. & T. Ry. Co., 12 I. C. C. 525.

(ee) While shipper may consign his shipment to a given point, pay charges on same, assume custody and take possession of the property, and, later, reship to another point under rates lawfully applicable to such reshipment, neither a carrier nor an agent of a carrier may act as forwarding or reconsignment agent for shipper in such a manner as to evade or defeat the terms or intent or purpose of the law. D. Morgan v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 525, 528.

(eea) The principal defendant established, temporarily and because of competition in that locality, an especially low rate upon shipments of live stock from Crowder City, Ind. T., to Kansas City, Mo. Defendants had specific tariff rates applicable to shipments of live stock from other points in Indian Territory to Kansas City, which shipments moved through Crowder City. Complainants allege that the local rates from points of origin of such shipments to Crowder City added to the special low rate from Crowder City to Kansas City made lower rates than the specific rates from points of origin to Kansas City, and that, therefore, defendants should refund charges collected in excess of combination rates on Crowder City. HELD, the specific through rate is the lawful rate, to be applied. No attack being made on its reasonableness, complaint dismissed. Morgan et al v. Mo., Kan. & Tex. Ry. Co. et al, 12 I. C. C. 525.

(ff) A specific through rate is the lawful rate for a through shipment, even though some combination of rates may make lower, and carrier may not charge the higher through rate upon one shipment and the lower combination rate upon another shipment of the same kind between the same points at the same time. D. Morgan v. M. K. & T. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 525, 528.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(gg) Notwithstanding the presumption of unreasonableness attaching to through rate in excess of combination of locals, so long as such rate remains in effect it must be applied. Momsen & Co. v. Gila Valley, Globe & Northern Ry. Co., 14 I. C. C. 614.

(hh) If no specific rate from point of origin to destination on a through shipment is provided, and no specific manner of constructing a combination rate for it is prescribed, the lowest combination of rates applicable via the route over which the shipment moves is the lawful rate for that shipment. Porter v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 1, 4.

(ii) Where initial carrier's advanced rate tariff did not cancel lower commutation fare named in tariff of another carrier to which initial carrier was a party, such lower rate was the legal rate. The lawfully established rate remains in force until specifically canceled. Stilwell v. L. & H. R. Ry. Co., 19 I. C. C. 404, 405.

(jj) Concurrence with others in joint rates that effect unjust discrimination or undue preference is the voluntary action of the carriers at the point where the unjust discrimination or the undue preference exists. Chamber of Commerce, Ashburn, Ga., v. G. S. & F. Ry. Co., 23 I. C. C. 140, 149.

(kk) Where two carriers, one within the jurisdiction of the United States and one without, operate in interstate commerce and there is no joint tariff, the through rate must be made up of the separately established rates and charges. Eagle Pass Lumber Co. v. National Rys. of Mexico, 25 I. C. C. 5, 7.

(ll) In the absence of a reconsignment privilege applicable to a given shipment held that the sum of the locals to and from the point of reshipping is the legal rate. Talge Mahogany Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 44, 45; Deeves Lumber Co. v. A. & V. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 42, 43; Platen Produce Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 30, 31.

(mm) A through route does not necessitate joint rates, but may be open to traffic upon the payment of the combination of locals. Eastern Shore Development S. S. Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 32 I. C. C. 238.

(nn) Where a specific through rate exists that rate is the only lawful rate for a through movement, and the duty is incumbent upon the carrier to make such through rates as do not violate the law. It is the duty of the carrier, in case any through rate in contemplation violates the provisions of the fourth section, to protect such deviations by application to the Commission and not to file or publish any such rate until favorable action on the application has been taken by the Commission. Chamber of Commerce, Houston, Tex., v. I. & G. N. Ry. Co., 32 I. C. C. 247, 254.

(oo) The lawful rate for a through movement is the specific through rate wherever such through rate exists, and the application thereof can not be defeated by practices of diversion, reconsignment, or reshipment. Doran & Co. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry. 33 I. C. C. 523, 527.

(ppqq) Mere pro forma and paper transactions without substance, except as a means of getting through service at less than the lawful rate, held unlawful. Kanotex Refining Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 271, 276.

(rr) Any plan of first billing to intermediate points an interstate shipment in order to defeat the interstate rate is unlawful. Kanotex Refining Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 271, 276.

(ss) A device for defeating the lawful through rate is unlawful. Kanotex Refining Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 271, 276.

(tt) The lawfully established interstate rate applies on shipments first billed to an intermediate point within the state of origin and then rebilled to the intended destination in an adjoining state, this plan having been devised for the sole purpose of getting the traffic through to the interstate destination at the rates applicable to and from the intermediate point, the sum of which was materially less than the through rate for the through service. Kanotex Refining Co. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 34 I. C. C. 271, 276.

(uu) No question concerning different rates from a port to inland destinations or the relationship thereof on domestic and import traffic can arise, where the shipments involved are merely from the foreign port to the given port, there being no definite ultimate destination in the mind of the shipper when the shipment leaves the foreign port. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. Channel & Dock Co., 34 I. C. C. 330, 332.

(vv) A rate made in meeting competition at a point becomes the lawful factor in making up aggregate of intermediate rates. Montrose & Delta Counties, Frt. Rate Asso. v. D. & R. G. R. R., 34 I. C. C. 409, 410.

(ww) It is well settled that the character and nature of the movement of the traffic, that is, whether the movement is a through or local movement, and not the mere accidents of billing, determine the nature of the commerce and the rate applicable. Rates on Railroad Fuel and Other Coal, 36 I. C. C. 1, 8.

(xx) Where a shipment from one point to another in the same state is not a separate intrastate shipment, but only part of a through interstate movement, a state distance rate in terms made applicable to interstate shipments will apply. Rutter & Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry., 36 I. C. 272, 277.

(yy) In cases where shipers attempt unlawfully to defeat through rates the duty is upon carriers to apply the thru rates. Lumber Rates from Newcastle, Cal., 37 I. C. C. 596, 597.

(zz) After shipments moved effort was made to have new bills of lading issued but complainant could not by rebilling the shipments have rendered the intrastate rate applicable. Waverly Oil Works Co. v. P. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 216.

(3a) The character and nature of the movement of the traffic, that is, whether the movement is a through or local movement, and not the mere accidents of billing, determine the nature of the commerce and the rate applicable. Madero v. E. P. & S. W. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 322, 324.

(3b) The carrier can not always ascertain the intention that is in the shipper's mind, but where it is apparent from the surrounding circumstances and the manner in which the shipments are handled that the transportation transaction is not in good faith, but done with a view to obtaining an undue advantage, the Commission will look to what is actually done and the necessary effect thereof, irrespective of incident of billing or of transparent devices intended to defeat the law. Tuckerton R. R. Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co. 52 I. C. C. 319, 322.

(3c) The through rate can not be protected where reconsignment is effected at a point not on a through route to which the rate applies, or where a back haul becomes necessary, except under special tariff provisions. Northern Brokerage Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 60 I. C. C. 182.

(3d) Shipments originated on rails of carriers publishing rates higher than when originating on the line of delivering carrier specified in bill of lading, whose rails also reached point of origin. Complainant asks that lower rates named in tariff of terminal carrier be applied on traffic originating on such other lines, but since carriers on whose lines shipments originated concurred in tariff naming lower rates on traffic to, via, but not from points on the concurring line, rates charged found legally applicable. Lieberman Iron Co. v. Director General, 61 I. C. C. 21.

(3e) Where, in the absence of through rates or a specific manner of constructing through rates, combination rates charged exceeded lower combinations of legally published interstate rates over route of movement, shipments found overcharged to extent that rates charged exceeded the lower combinations. Reparation awarded. Southern Veneer Asso. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 62 I. C. C. 669, 674.

(3f) Where a rate is unrestricted in its application it applies to shipments which move through a point via which it was not intended to apply even though such route is unusual and unduly circuitous. St. Tammany Ice & Mfg. Co. (Ltd.) v. Directory General, as Agent, 64 I. C. C. 491, 492.

(3g) A through rate, however made up, whether joint or in some form combination, still remains a through rate and necessarily must be that which was in effect at the time of shipment from the point of origin. Kansas City Board of Trade v. A. T. & S. F. R. R., 69 I. C. 185, 188.

(3h) A joint agency tariff, to which the Southern Railway is a party, names rates on berries, without restriction, as to kind. A later tariff of the Southern's own issue names rates between the same points on strawberries, in crates of sizes the same as and additional to those provided for in the agency tariff, which has never been specifically canceled. HELD, that as to crates of sizes common to both tariffs the rates in the later tariff were not legally established; and as to crates of sizes provided for only by the later tariff were legally established. Strawberries from Virginia Points to Eastern Destinations, 73 I. C. C. 365.

(3i) Rate on bituminous slack coal from Landon to Rostraver and Monessen, Pa., during Federal control, based upon the rate to Webster, Pa., the first station beyond Monessen and applicable to intermediate points, including Rostraver and Monessen, found applicable and not unreasonable. Carriers maintained a lower rate between certain stations, including Landon, but rate referred to another tariff naming distances between stations to and from which the rate applied, and such tariff did not include distances from Landon. Warner &

Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 73 I. C. C. 523.

(3j) Horses and mules moved by express to Goshen, N. Y., where no attempt was made to preserve their identity. Subsequently a portion thereof was forwarded to Jersey City, N. J., for export, for which carrier assessed rate from Goshen, plus terminal charges. Contention that under the terms of the tariff such terminal charges should have been absorbed. HELD, inbound and outbound movements were wholly independent transactions. Rate assessed for movement from Goshen found applicable and absorption of terminal charges was not authorized in connection therewith. Le Prestre, Miller & Co. v. E. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 621.

(3k) Action of a carrier in forwarding a shipment as company material to a purely interchange point for delivery to a shipper and permitting the reshipment therefrom in contravention of its tariffs which provided that no freight will be received at that point, condemned. Cohen & Son v. N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 73 I. C. C. 747, 748.

(3l) Tariff provided through rates between certain specified points, but exchange bill of lading bore notation. "Through rate not to apply; car moving on combination of locals" HELD: Immaterial at whose instance this notation was made since parties to a transportation transaction can not lawfully stipulate that any other than the applicable tariff rates shall apply. Baker-Reid Lumber Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 489, 491.

(3m) Where a carrier holds itself out to carry traffic to and from a certain point, it must reach that point either over its own facilities or through those of others. Where two carriers join in the publication of joint rates and establish through routes via junctions where their rails do not meet, there is a holding out to the public of intermediate carriage between their respective lines which must be protected. Switching Charges at Peoria, 77 I. C. C. 43, 47.

(3n) Shipment consigned to intrastate destination, order of shipper, notify complainant. Before actual movement complainant sold shipment to another party, who did not take delivery at originally billed destination in another State. Contention that initial movement was intrastate and therefore not within jurisdiction of commission, not sustained. Change of ownership en route did not affect through interstate movement of shipment. Mid-Continent Equip. & Mach. Co. v. M. S. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C., 393, 394, 395, 396.

(3o) Though the rates involved are published as two factors, from both a technical and a practical standpoint they are joint through rates. The arbitraries as such can not be used on local business or on any traffic except in connection with the factors shown in the same schedules on traffic from points of origin therein designated. Under the decision of July 29, 1920, these rates were properly increased by 33 1-3%. Ahern Brokerage Company v. A. C. L. R. R., 89 I. C. C. 278.

(3p) The published interstate rate from a shipping point to M. was the only lawful rate for transportation to M., and could not be defeated by shipping to an intermediate point, taking possession there, and rebilling to M. as an ostensible intrastate shipment, for the purpose of acquiring a lower rate. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Settle, 43 Sup. Ct. 28.

(3q) Through billing, uninterrupted movement, continuous possession by carrier, or unbroken bulk are common incidents of a through shipment, and, when the intention is in issue, the presence, or absence of one or all may be important; but, when it is admitted that the shipment made to the ultimate destination had at all times been intended, they are without legal significance, and none of them is essential to a through interstate shipment. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Settle, 43 Sup. Ct. 28.

(3r) Where an interstate shipper's intention at all times was that cars should be sent to M., and they were billed to O., possession taken there, and the cars rebilled to M., without any intention other than a mere possibility that the interstate journey should end there, the intention as carried out determined as matter of law the essential nature of the movement, and made the entire movement from the original point to M. an interstate shipment. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Settle 43 Sup. Ct. 28.

(3s) A properly concurred in joint rate is the only lawful through rate applicable to through shipments through the point to which it applies. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. United States, 222 Fed. 69, 70.

(3t) A thru freight rate duly filed by the initial carrier with the Interstate Commerce Commission became on its effective date the lawful through joint rate, and the only one which the connecting carrier might lawfully receive or connecting carrier received the new tariff and stamped and filed it, and, without giving any formal notice to the initial carrier of its acceptance, which was not at that time required by the Interstate Commerce Commission, acted upon such tariff, insisting that the new rate was the legal one, although it permitted a shipper to make payments at the old rate. Dayton C. & I. Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., 36 Sup. Ct. 137, 139.

(3u) The rate for through transportation of a party, where the carrier had no through party rate on file, is the individual through rate for each person, not the combination of a party rate, which had been filled, applying to part of the distance, and of the individual rates for the rest of it. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. United States, 41 Sup. Ct. 456.

(3w) If an initial carrier accepts traffic for transportation and issues its bill of lading over a route made up of connecting roads for which no joint through rate has been published and filed with the Commission, the lawful rate to be charged is the sum of the established local rates published and filed by the individual roads, or if there is a local rate over one road and a joint rate over the others for the remainder of the route all published and filed with the Commission, the lawful through rate to be charged is the sum of the local and joint rates. K. C. S. v. Albers Comm. Co., 223 U. S. 573, 597, 32 Sup. Ct. 316, 56 L. ed. 556.

(3x) Where cotton consigned to the shipper's order was shipped over the lines of connecting carriers to B, in the state of origin, where it was compressed by the carrier and re-billed to points outside the state, the through rate from point of shipment was the legal rate, and a rate consisting of the initial carrier's intrastate rate to the junction point and the connecting carrier's interstate rate from that point was not a lawful rate for such shipment, under the Interstate Comerce Act, requiring the filing of through rates when established, such intrastate rate not being filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. McFadden v. Ala. Great So. R. R., 241 Fed. 562.

(3y) A new shipment by a consignee of an interstate shipment is the cars in which received to other points of destination does not necessarily establish continuity of movement or present reshipment to a point within the same state from having an independent and intrastate character. Gulf, Colorado & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Texas. 204 U. S. 403, 27 Sup. Ct. 360, 51 L. Ed. 540—the Texarkana Case; C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Iowa, 233 U. S. 334, 343, 34 Sup. Ct. 592, 58 L. Ed. 988. Settle v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. R., 249 Fed. 913, 917.

See Procedure Before Commission.

(a) Where a complaint is made against the reasonableness of through rates agreed upon by several connecting lines, it is necessary to make all of such connecting lines parties defendant. Citing and affirming the rule laid down on this subject in 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 621, 631, 773, 1 Inters. Com. Com. Rep. 199, 237, 490. Michigan Congress Water Co. v. Chicago & Grand Trunk R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 428.

(b) The total rate for through carriage over two or more lines, whether made by the addition of established locals, or of through and local rates, or upon a less proportionate basis, is the through rate that is subject to scrutiny by the regulating authority; how the rate is made is only material as bearing upon the legality of the aggregate charge, and how any reduction may be accomplished is matter for the carriers to determine among themselves. Trammell v. Clyde Steamship Co., 4 I. C. C. 120, 139.

(c) When a local rate from a given point is alleged unreasonable but it appears from the record that such local rate is also a proportion of through rates from that point, and as such is the real subject of controversy, the complaint should be directed against the aggregate through rate not the share received by any initial carrier, and all the carriers composing the through line are necessary parties. Chamber of Commerce of Minneapolis v. G. N. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 230, 234.

(d) As through traffic from the Atlantic seaboard to Sioux City and Sioux Falls is subjected to the same charges for the haul from Chicago or Duluth as traffic shipped locally from those places to either destination, and as rates from eastern points to Chicago or Duluth do not, in any controlling degree, affect the present controversy, and are not assailed by the complainant, it was unnecessary to make the eastern carriers parties to this proceeding. Daniels v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. et al. 6 I. C. C. 458.

(e) When carriers forming a through line and dividing the through rate also designate a certain rate for performance of a particular service, and it appears in proof that but one of the carriers is responsible for or interested in the latter charge, it is proper on complaint to deal with that particular carrier and that particular rate, irrespective of the othe rates which make up the aggregate charge. Cattle Raisers Asso. of Texas v. Ft. W. & D. C. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 513, 539.

(f) While a railroad company operating its road as part of a through line in connection with other carriers defendants in a case brought to test the legality of a through charge over such line is a proper party, it is not a necessary party to the proceeding. Warren-Ehret Co. v. Central R. R. of New Jersey, 8 I. C. C. 598.

(g) In proceedings to determine the reasonableness of a through rate as augmented by an alleged unlawful terminal charge, all the carriers participating in the through rate are proper parties, but not necessary parties, as the only necessary parties defendant are the carriers who retain the terminal charge for their own use. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 83.

(h) While all carriers participating in the through rate will be proper parties, they are not necessary parties, since the present defendants, the carriers entering Chicago, retain the terminal charge entirely to their own use. Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 10 I. C. C. 83.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(i) Where only a portion of a combination through rate is attacked, all the carriers that are parties to the combination rate need not be made parties defendant. Globe Milling Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 594.

(j) Under the amended Act the burden of proving whether the intermediate rates restored by the cancellation of joint through rates are reasonable, rests upon the carriers and the contention that resulting higher charges are reasonable must necessarily be supported by affirmative evidence that is persuasive. Rates on Plaster and Gypsum Rock, 27 I. C. C. 67, 68.

(k) Through routes cannot be ordered in when complaint does not contain prayer therefor. Paducah Board of Trade v. I. C. R. R. Co., 29 I. C. C. 583, 592.

(l) In a proceeding to secure the establishment of through routes and joint rates, a defendant carrier which unites with the complainant in asking the through route cannot be awarded reparation. E. J. R. R. & Terminal Co. v. C. R. R. Co. of N. J., 36 I. C. C. 146, 150.

(m) Where a small railroad and shippers dependent thereupon petition for through routes and joint rates in connection with a trunk line carrier and no particular destinations or commodities are specified with respect to which the petition is limited, it is fairly and generally understood that the petition seeks an arrangement applicable to all points reached by the trunk line on all commodities that ordinarily move to or from the territory served by the petitioning line. I. & S. W. Ry. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 42 I. C. C. 389, 391.

(n) When a complaint involves charges applicable to a through shipment the through rate or charge must be brought in issue and the participating carriers must be made defendants. When the through rate or charge is made up of separately established rates or charges, applicable to the through business, the through rate or charge must be attacked as violative of the Act, although the violation may be believed to be occasioned by a particular factor or factors thereof; in such case the complainant should be prepared at the hearing to prove the unlawfulness of the through rate itself and that this is due to a particular factor or factors. Stevens Grocer Co. v. St. L., I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 42 I. C. C. 396, 398.

(o) Though a complaint is brought in behalf of a single station, the Commission must take into consideration the fact that through routing arrangements are open to all. Lourie Mfg. Co. v. C. N. R. R., 42 I. C. C. 448, 452.

(p) The Commission could not on the pleadings establish through routes and joint rates that would involve carriers not made parties to the case. Gulf Atlantic S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 309, 313.

(q) Where a rate adjustment is found to result in undue prejudice by reason of separately established factors, the carriers parties to the components of the through rates which are not attacked, and which do not in any way contribute to the undue prejudice found to exist, are proper but not necessary parties. Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce v. C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 547, 556.

(r) The Commission has frequently held a through rate unreasonable because of the unreasonableness of one of the factors, but only where the through rate itself was challenged. Stevens Grocer Co. v. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry., Co., Unrep. Op. 1840.

See Courts.

(a) Whether the difference in rates for transportation for local traffic and through traffic is reasonable or unreasonable, is a question of fact for the jury. United States v. Tozer, 2 I. C. R. 597.

(b) A court of equity has no power under the Interstate Commerce Act to compel a receiving company which has made a contract or agreement with another connecting company to establish the same rate upon through freight in favor of another company with which there is no contract, as no power is conferred by the Act upon any tribunal to provide for the necessary divisions growing out of a through routing and a through rating. Anthony Salt Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 537.

(c) A court of equity has no power under the Interstate Commerce Act to compel a receiving company which has made a contract or agreement with a connecting company to establish the same rate upon through freight in favor of another company with which there is no contract and compel the receiving company to accept that rate, as no power is conferred by the Act upon any tribunal to provide for the necessary divisions growing out of a through routing and a through rating. Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 537.

VI. RIGHT TO WITHDRAW.

See Supra §9; Advanced Rates §7 (6); Through Routes and Joint Rates §14; Water Carriers IV.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The respondent, which is a carrier by railroad running through Connecticut to a point in New York, had had for some time a through billing arrangement and an agreement upon through rates for traffic over its own line destined to New York City, with petitioners road, which connected therewith at its New York terminus. This arrangement respondent broke up, and declined to enter into any new one in its place. HELD, such action held to be in violation of second paragraph of section 3 of the act which requires that every common carrier shall afford all reasonable, proper and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines. New York & Northern Ry. v. N. Y. & N. E. R. Co., 3 I. C. C. 542.

(b) Breaking up a through billing arrangement at through rates with a responsible company, without any reason therefor, and attempting to give all the business that would come under it to a different company, is unlawful. New York & N. R. Co. v. New York & N. E. R. Co. (Com.), 3 I. C. R. 542.

(c) Defendant published a schedule purporting to be a joint tariff of rates on coal from a point on its road to a number of destinations reached by the complainant railroad company, whereby the complainant company received its full local charges to said destinations from junction points with defendants road, and the defendant accepted the remainder, which was in each instance less than its established local rate from the point of shipment to the point of connection. Complainant, which also carried coal to the same destinations by a longer route over its own rails, thereby securing greater compensation than was afforded from coal coming to it by defendants road, refused to unite in the rates named by defendant in said so-called joint tariff, and protested against the use of such rates by a connecting carrier as unauthorized, and unlawful for want of mutual consent. HELD, complaint should be sustained and defendant company be required to cease and desist from publishing or applying through rates to points on complainants lines which are less than the sums of their respective local charges. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Platt, 7 I. C. C. 323.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) Where the cancellation of a joint rate leaves a higher combination in effect, this in an advance which the carrier must justify. In re Advances on Coal, 24 I. C. C. 43.

(e) Carrier permitted to discontinue through route voluntarily maintained for four years which embraced substantially less than the entire length of its railroad. Rates on Cottonseed and Its Products, 28 I. C. C. 219, 221.

(f) Propriety of cancellation of joint through rates to be determined in view of facts and circumstances of each case. Rates on Green Fruits from Idaho, etc., 29 I. C. C. 650, 651.

(g) There is force in the argument that a carrier should not be required to remain party to a through route and joint rate under conditions which would preclude the right to require the establishment of such through route and joint rate if it did not already exist. Grain Rates from Milwaukee, 33 I. C. C. 417, 424.

(h) The commercial needs of shippers would probably not be recognized as estopping carriers from withdrawing from through routes and joint rates which they might not lawfully be required to establish. Grain Rates from Milwaukee, 33 I. C. C. 417, 425.

(i) The long continuance of through routes and joint rates has never been held to be a controlling factor in any case. The Ogden Gateway Case, 35 I. C. C. 131.

(j) The withdrawal of joint fares does not close a through route in the sense that passengers may no longer have a through service. The Ogden Gateway Case, 35 I. C. C. 131, 142.

(k) If a carrier elects to meet competition at a point, the rate so made becomes a lawful factor in making up the aggregate of the intermediate rates. Through Rates from Buffalo-Pittsburg Territory, 36 I. C. C. 325, 327.

(l) Operating conditions are entitled to consideration in determining the relative reasonableness or practicability of two routes. Paducah Board of Trade v. I. C. R. R. Co., 37 I. C. C. 719, 722.

(m) If it is proposed to cancel an existing route, it is proper to consider whether or not Commission could have required the establishment of the route as an original proposition. Ocean-and-Rail Rates to Charlotte, N. C., 38 I. C. C. 405, 410.

(n) No reason appears for requiring the maintenance of an additional thru route where carriers parties thereto desire its discontinuance and shippers directly interested do not protest, and where it appears that the community will be adequately served if the cancellation is allowed to be made effective. Ocean and Rail to Charlotte, N. C., 38 I. C. C. 405, 410.

(o) The Commission has repeatedly held that the cancellation of a through rate may not be justified by a mere showing that one is too low; it must appear affirmatively that the increased through charge is reasonable. Class arbitraries to Sewall's Point, Va. 59 I. C. C. 591, 592.

(p) Each case of attempted cancellation of joint rates must be considered on its own merits. Cement to W. B. & A. Stations, 63 I. C. C. 264, 266.

(q) The Commission has no power to prevent the cancellation of a through route if it could not have required the establishment of the route as an original proposition. Routing on Coal from Western Maryland Ry., 66 I. C. C. 103, 107.

(qa) It is doubtful if a carrier could be compelled to keep open an indirect and illogical route over which it would be required to short haul itself, in view of the provision of section 15 of the act which provides that in establishing joint rates a railroad may not be required to embrace in the through route substantially less than the entire length of its line. Routing on Sheep from K. C. M. & O. Points, 69 I. C. C. 6.

(qb) Use of the words "proper" or "beyond", following the name of a station, is frequent in tariffs to indicate that the rates are intended to apply only to the particular named station or to destination points beyond, as the case may be, but has never been recognized as the only way in which to limit the application of rates to a named station or beyond. Waggoner & Gate Milling Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 69 I. C. C. 85.

(r) Respondents proposed to cancel joint commodity rates on farm wagons, with or without bodies, loose or in packages, and parts thereof, carloads, from Lynchburg, Va., to Monroe, West Monroe, and Shreveport, La., and from Hickory, N. C., and Rock Hill, S. C., to Shreveport, leaving applicable the higher joint class A rates, governed by the western classification, and to increase corresponding commodity rates from Hickory and Rock Hill to Monroe and West Monroe to the basis of the lowest combinations of intermediate rates. Farm wagons are rated sixth class in the southern and class A in the western classification. When originally established Nov. 25, 1917, the joint commodity rates represented the lowest combination of class rates to and beyond the Mississippi River gateways. The proposed rates are intended to restore, as nearly as possible, the lowest combination basis, observing joint class A rates as maxima. HELD, proposed rates not justified. Farm Wagons from the Carolinas and Virginia to Louisiana, 73 I. C. C. 547.

(s) The commission is not disposed to approve retention of the conbination rule, which provides that where no through rates are published and there are in effect separately established rates to and from junctions, the through rate will be computed by deducting specific amounts from each factor and adding a specific amount to the resulting sum of the factors, because there is an indefinite possibility that future shipments may be affected by its cancellation. Cancellation of Combination Rule to the Southwest, 74 I. C. C. 508, 509.

(t) The commission has no power to prevent the cancellation of through routes and joint rates when the circumstances and conditions are such as would not warrant an order to compel such an arrangement if not already in effect. Routing of Fruits and Vegetables from Texas Points to Defined Territories, 74 I. C. C. 575, 578.

(u) If it was defendants purpose to restrict the application of the through rate to any particular route, it should have done so by clear and unequivocal language. The carriers are obligated to receive shipments and to perform the transportation services requested in accordance with its published tariffs. Elk Tanning Co. v. Erie R. R. Co., 78 I. C. C. 452, 453, 554.

VII. DUTY TO FURNISH FACILITIES.

See cars and car Supply.

(a) Connecting carriers which make a through route and establish through rates which apply as single charges for the whole service must be prepared to furnish suitable "instrumentalities of shipment and carriage" as required by the Act to Regulate Commerce, so that the transportation may be conducted without wrong or injustice to those desiring to use the through line. Independent Ref. Asso. v. Western N. Y. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 378.

(b) Where connecting carriers make a through route and establish through rates which apply as single charges for the whole service, they hold themselves out as carriers over such route at such rates, and must be prepared to furnish suitable instrumentalities of shipment and carriage so that the transportation may be conducted without wrong or injustice to those who desire to use the through line. Independent Refiners' Asso. v. W. N. Y. & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 379, 385.

(c) Exactly what the duties and liabilities of the respective carriers which make up the through route may be not altogether clear; but it seems reasonably certain that it is their duty to receive the commodity at the point of origin and to transport it to and deliver it at the point of destination. They must assume the burden of providing the necessary equipment for the through transportation, and if the commodity is in fact transferred at a junction point the shipper is relieved of the burden of arranging for the details of their transfer. American National Live Stock Asso v. T. & P. R. 12 I. C. C. 32, 36.

(d) Carrier over which through route established may apply to Commission for order requiring complainant to indemnify it against any loss it may suffer by reason of complainant's financial irresponsibility. Enterprise Transp. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 12 I. C. C. 326.

(e) Carrier over whose line through route established may apply for order requiring idemnity. Enterprise Transp. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 326.

(f) Complaint in this case involved the question whether defendant carrier could establish a through route and fix a joint rate, and then decline to furnish equipment in which to move such freight; but as it appeared that there was a specific agreement between defendant carrier and another carrier that the latter should furnish the cars, the complainant agreed that under the circumstances it would be in the interest of all parties that the present proceeding be dismissed. Okla. & Ark. Coal Traffic Bu. v. Mid. Val. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 516.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) Each carrier subject to the Act is charged with the duty of furnishing cars to industries located upon its line. In case of through routes, the obligation to furnish cars for shipments to points upon lines of its connections is joint with such connections. Huerfano Coal Co. v. C. & S. E. R. R. Co., 28 I. C. C. 502, 506.

(h) It cannot be presumed that carriers composing a through route would fail in their duty to furnish equipment. Waverly Oil Works Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 28 I. C. C. 621.

(i) The obligation to furnish cars for transportation over through routes composed of two or more carriers is a joint obligation, and rests upon all carriers participating in the route. Lumber Rates Through Ohio River Crossings, 29 I. C. C. 38.

(j) Where through routes exist, obligations to furnish cars is joint upon all carriers therein. Campbell's Creek Coal Co. v. A. A. R. R. Co., 29 I. C. C. 682, 690.

(k) To furnish cars is an obligation that rests on all the carriers parties to joint rates. Pittsburgh & Southwestern Coal Co. v. W. P. T. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 660, 663.

(l) Railroads are under obligation to serve through routes which they have established with other carriers without respect to the fact that in rendering such service their equiment may be carried beyond their own lines, and it is their duty to make reasonable rules and regulations with respect to the exchange, interchange, and return of cars used upon and for the operation of such through routes. Doran & Co. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry., 33 I. C. C. 523, 530.

(m) At common law it was the duty of carriers to transport freight with reasonable dispatch from point of origin to destination. It is doubtful if at common law a carrier was obligated in this regard beyond its own rails. There can be no doubt, however, under the Act to Regulate Commerce that the obligation upon all carriers parties to through routes and joint rates is to move traffic through with promptness. Section 1 of the Act makes it the duty of common carriers to establish through routes, to provide reasonable facilities for operating them, and to make reasonable rules and regulation with respect to the exchange, interchange and return of cars used therein for the operation of the through routes. The language is clear, and the intent of Congress is plain, that the commeree of the country shall flow freely inestablished channels, without hindrance, embarrassment, or delay. Omaha Grain Exch. v. G. N. Ry., 47 I. C. C. 532, 537.

(n) Carriers are obligated to make such arrangements with each other, under joint rates, as will insure prompt exchange of equipment at junction points. The movement of traffic through from point of origin to destination may not be lawfully impeded or interrupted because such arrangements have not been made or because connecting carriers fail to observe what the initial carrier may consider to be its due in the way of car exchange. Under the recent amendment to section 1 of the Act, giving this Commission jurisdiction of car service, that is, the movement, distribution exchange interchange and return of cars used in the transportation of property, the Commission is clothed with ample authority, should the occasion require, to protect the initial carrier against any unfair practices of its connections in the matter of interchange of cars at Sioux City. Omaha Grain Exch, v. G. N. Ry., 47 I. C. C. 532, 538.

(o) No rule or practice may lawfully operate to make nugatory the obligation that rests upon carriers to move traffic promptly over the through route they have established and under the joint rates they publish. Omaha Grain Exch. v. G. N. Ry. 47 I. C. C. 532, 538.

(p) Under through routes established and joint rates published, carriers are obliged to move shipments through promptly from points of origin to destination. Omaha Grain Exchange v. G. N. Ry., 47 I. C. C. 532, 538.

(q) Proposed restricted application of commodity rates on grain and products from points in Kansas, Nebraska, and eastern Colorado to north Pacific coast and California terminals and to intermediate points, the effect of which would be to cancel the joint rates now applicable from points in the origin territory when reshipped from Missouri River or interior markets over lines other than the carrier originating the traffic, leaving in effect over such routes higher combinations to and from the markets, found not justified. Routing on Transcontinental Grain and Grain Products 73 I. C. C., 116.

(r) Without passing on question whether duty of participants in a through movement to supply appropriate shares of equipment necessary for transportation of coal rests upon carriers jointly (compare Huerfano Coal Co., 28 I. C. C., 502) or severally, in the aggregate the duty of providing adequate supply of equipment rests upon railroad carriers. Assigned Cars for Bituminous Coal Mines, 80 I. C. C. 520, 546.

§26. Restriction of Routes.

(a) Shippers are subjected to undue, unjust, and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage by the practice of initial carriers in a joint continuous route, of reserving to themselves exclusive control of the route, and denying to shippers any choice or control in the selection as between different established routes; as under such a practice a route or tariff may be available to one shipper, but not to another, and open one minute to a shipper, but closed the next. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co., 9 I. C. C. 182.

(b) Under the practice of defendants as initial carriers in joint continuous routes of reserving to themselves exclusive control of the routing and denying to shippers any choice or control in a selection as between different established routes, a route or tariff may be available to one shipper but not to another and open one minute to a shipper but closed the next; this to be determined by the carriers' agents according as they may desire to distribute the shipper's business among one another from time to time or for any reason whatsoever. This practice of defendants whereby shippers are denied the use of their transportation facilities by established routes is in violation of the statute, and, in its application by the defendants to the traffic in question, subjects the owners and shippers thereof to undue, unjust and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage and gives to the carriers undue and unreasonable preference and advantage. Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. et al. 9 I. C. C. 182.

(c) Complainant alleged unlawful discrimination in the publication of through rate of 90c per gross ton on soft coal from Norwood, N. Y., to Montpelier, Vt. when intended for railroad supply, that is, for the uses of a connecting carrier known as the Montpelier & Wells River Ry. while the rate on coal for commercial use was the combination of locals of $1.85. In transporting bituminous coal from Norwood to Montpelier at 90c per ton for railroad supply the same service is performed and the circumstances and conditions of carriage are the same in every material respect as in transporting coal at $1.85 per ton for complainant and other consignees. HELD, complainant unlawfully discriminated against. Capital City Gas Company v. C. V. Ry., 11 I. C. C. 104.

(d) The phrase "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions" in section 2 of the Act to Regulate Commerce refers to the matter of carriage, and it is not permissible under that section for two or more carriers to establish a joint through rate, less than the sum of their locals, which is applicable only to a particular shipper or class of shippers, while denying such lower rate to other shippers of like traffic between the same points of origin and destination. Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822, as explained and confirmed in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 166, 42 L. ed. 414, 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45, applied. Capital City Gas Co. v. Central V. R. Co. et al. 11 I. C. C. 104, 106.

(e) The Evansville & Terre Haute R.

Co. does not make through rates with the other defendants from points in Indiana to destinations south of the Ohio River, but has established on hay a local rate of 8 cents per hundred pounds to Evansville and a proportional of 6½ cents to Evansville when the shipment is billed through to a specified destination. The E. & T. R. refused to apply a proportional on shipments billed to Evansville in care of a southern line for points beyond, having discontinued a tariff providing therefor, which was effective from November 10, 1903, to July 19, 1904. The rate from Evansville by the other defendant lines is the same whether shipped locally from or through Evansville. HELD, that it is unreasonable and unjust for the E. & T. R. to insist upon the billing of these shipments to a specific destination in order to secure application of the lower proportional rate, while it declines to assume responsibility for such billing and does not post in its stations the tariffs from which the shipper can himself ascertain the rate at which the shipment should be billed; and that while the proportional rate is kept in force it is reasonable and just that these shipments shall be billed to Evansville in care of the road leading southerly therefrom, as was actually done in 1903 and 1904. HELD, further, that complainants are entitled to reparation on a shipment of one carload of hay carried from Johnstown, Ind., to Charleston, S. C., amounting to $4.36 from the E.& T. R. and $5.97 as admitted overcharge colected by the Georgia R. on the same shipment. T. M. Kehoe & Co. v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. et al 11 I. C. C. 172.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) Proposed increased rates which would result from the elimination of clause providing for application of termini rates at intermediate points, on traffic moving under class rates from Lexington, Ky., to destinations intermediate to western termini of trunk lines and points taking termini rates found not justified. Only justification for proposed restriction of the intermediate clause is that it was published through error, but error in the publication of rates and rules does not in itself justify cancellation of rates or rules so established and maintained. Intermediate Application of Class Rates, 77 I. C. C. 427.

(g) Respondent N. P., proposed to eliminate routing via North Dakota junctions of transcontinental traffic originating in eastern groups and to restrict its receipt from connecting lines to Minnesota Transfer or Minneapolis, Minn. Respondent proposed to restrict to its own lines beyond Aberdeen, S. D., the application of an existing rate of 59c on corn, carloads, from defined territory in South Dakota to destinations in Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. The operation of the suspended schedules would eliminate the Midland Continental as an intermediate carrier and either eliminate the M. & St. L., or deprive it of the long haul on group E traffic originated by it or received from connecting lines. Under the suspended schedules, the M. & St. L., would deliver traffic from Group E points to the N. P., at Twin Cities. It would lose the haul west of the Twin Cities to Aberdeen and the N. P., would gain the haul from the Twin Cities to Jamestown. The Midland Continentals interest is in keeping open the route via Aberdeen and Edgeley and thence over its line to Jamestown. The tariffs applicable on traffic from Group E, to which the Midland Continental is a party, in no way prohibit the routing of such traffic over this road when moving via Aberdeen. It appears that the public interest will be best served by keeping opne the route via Aberdeen. The 59c rate is a concession granted by the G. N., alone to enable it to share in this traffic, it should be permitted to restrict the routing to its own lines. HELD, N. P., has not justified its suspended schedules, but G. N., has justified its amendment. Intermediate routing via North Dakota junctions on transcontinental traffic, 81 I. C. C. 272.

(h) Respondent proposed to restrict the application of joint rates on wheat flour, wheat, corn and articles taking the same rates, in carloads, from St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota Transfer, Minn., and points on respondents lines intermediate between those cities and Kansas City, Mo., to destinations on the Santa Fe in Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado, to shipments originating beyond the Twin Cities. The proposed schedules would have the effect of increasing the rates from intermediate points and on shipments originating at the Twin Cities to the basis of the combination rates on Kansas City. The present rates are constructed on a basis of the local rates beyond Kansas City plus arbitraries of 17.5c on wheat and 16c on corn from the Twin Cities to Kansas City. The present rates apply in both directions and as maxima at intermediate points and have been in effect without substantial changes except for the general increases and reduction since 1912, or prior thereto. HELD, respondents have not justified the proposed schedules. Grain and grain products from St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Minnesota Transfer, Minn., to Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado points. 81 I. C. C. 338.

(i) Respondents proposed to restrict the joint rates on grain and grain products in carloads from Chicago, Joliet, Lockport, and Peoria, Ill. proper, to Texas points, so as not to apply over routes through Iowa, except over the Santa Fe and Rock Island, and to place the rates from intermediate points on such routes on the combination basis. The tariff contains no definition of direct routes, and rates apply via all routes of carriers parties to the tariff. Rates from points in Iowa to Texas via Omaha are the combinations thereon and the application of lower rates from Chicago, etc., through Iowa to Texas has the effect of causing a violation of the fourth section. As a general rule rates on grain through primary markets break into definite inbound and outbound components, and the general basis from points east of the Missouri river to Texas is the lowest combination. HELD, increased rates resulting from restricted routing justified. Routing on grain from Chicago, Peoria, Ill., to Texas, 81 I. C. C. 725.

TIME ZONES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) There is need for a closer connection between the sun and the clock than has obtained in many parts of the country; that there is a relationship between habits and employments and the hours of the day as expressed by time pieces which can not be impaired without great inconvenience; and that public health and prosperity will best be subserved when normal standards of time are observed in every locality where they can be made applicable. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 51 I. C. C. 273, 281.

(b) Governmental requirements for the maintenance of a given standard of time, as expressed in state statutes and municipal ordinances, are to be respected as far as possible. While the power of Congress is paramount as to the regulation of interstate commerce and as to the objects enumerated in the daylight saving act, state and municipal regulations may be controlling as to other matters involving the standards of time to be observed and within the exclusive jurisdiction of local authority. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 51 I. C. C. 273, 283.

(c) Some inconvenience must result at every time-breaking point. In order to minimize that inconvenience, the time-breaking points should not be located in large centers when it is possible to place them in smaller places. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 51 I. C. C. 273, 283.

(d) Congress has prescribed that the order of the Commission defining the limits of the various zones may be modified from time to time. This is equivalent to vesting in the Commission some discretion as to the time when the necessary changes in the zones shall be made. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 51 I. C. C. 273, 284.

(e) The Commission is not empowered to fix standards of time for Hawaiian Islands. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 51 I. C. C. 273, 285.

(f) Congress has not vested any discretion in the Commission as to the standards of time to be observed in Alaska. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 51 I. C. C. 273, 285.

(g) The Commission does not conceive it to be within its discretion to adjust the zone boundaries with the avowed purpose of providing a community with a fast or slow time, particularly as the intent of Congress has been unmistakably evidenced by the repeal of the daylight savings or advanced time section of the act. To change the limits of a time zone to effectuate such purpose would result in seriously distorting the several zone boundaries, which should coincide as nearly as is reasonably practical with the respective median meridians, having regard for the convenience of commerce and the existing junction and division points of interstate common carriers. The desire of banking and mercantile business to have their standard of time the same as that of their principal correspondents is natural; but if carried out without regard to the time meridian, would result in the whole country being placed in one time zone. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 57 I. C. 455, 458.

(h) Upon petition of Detroit, Mich., the Commission reopened the proceedings of Standard Time Zone Investigation. Since May 11, 1915, Detroit has quite generally observed the mean astronomical time of 75 degrees of longitude west from Greenwich, or eastern zone. When throughout the nation on the last Sunday in March, 1918, the standard time of each zone was advanced one hour, Detroit made no such advance locally but remained in central time. The state courts have conformed to the local ordinance and custom; the federal courts observe the central standard as lawfully applicable under the act of Congress; the railroads conform to the central standard. No other business seems to do so. In a social way, the eastern standard is universally applied. The adherence for a period of years of its people, to the time of 75 degrees meridian, indicates that such time results in greater convenience for the commerce of that locality than does central time. HELD, original report modified so as to include Detroit in eastern time zone. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 73 I. C. C. 78.

(i) Upon supplemental report, orders defining limits of United States standard eastern and central time zones, 51 I. C. C., 273, 53, I. C. C., 208, and 66 I. C. C., 566, modified so as to include Detroit, Mich., within the standard eastern time zone. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 73 I. C. C., 78.

(j) Upon petition of Columbus, O., the Commission reopened this proceeding for further hearing on the question whether Columbus and any portions of central Ohio and eastern Kentucky should be included within the United States standard Eastern time zone. Columbus is in the Central time zone about 30 miles west of the zone boundary at Newark, O. Columbus has been using eastern time in the summer months and central time in the winter. On Nov. 25 the city council passed an ordinance adopting eastern time for local use in that city, the change to become effective March 30, 1924. Columbus has its principal business dealings with Cleveland, Toledo, and the territory to the east of it rather than with the communities west. It is situated but two minutes of time west of the meridian midway between those which respectively govern the time of the eastern and central zones. HELD, Columbus and that part of Ohio east of the line of the eastern division of the Ohio Central from Toledo to Fostoria and the line of the Hocking Valley from Fostoria to Gallipolis should be included within the eastern time zone, and that Wayne Country, W. Va., and that portion of the N. & W., north and west of Williamson, W. Va., should be excluded from the eastern and included in the central time zone. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 88 I. C. C. 135.

(k) In 88 I. C. C. 135, the Commission modified previous orders defining the limits of the United States standard Eastern and Central time zones so as to include the city of Columbus and certain other portions of the state of Ohio within, and so as to exclude certain portions of the State of West Virginia from the first or Eastern time zone. Under the adjustment therein prescribed the western division of the N. Y. C., Ohio Central lines, between Toledo and Columbus, including the branch extending west from Peoria to St. Marys, was left in the Central time zone, but all other portions of the Ohio Central lines were included within the Eastern time zone. Subsequently, the N. Y. C., petitioned to include, by exception to the adjustment fixed, all of the Ohio Central lines within the Eastern zone. It is clear that safety of operation and convenience to the carrier and its employees would be considerably aided by allowing operation of the entire system under a single standard of time. HELD, Ohio Central line between Toledo and Columbus, including the St. Marys branch, may be operated under standard Eastern time. Standard Time Zone Investigation, 88 I. C. C. 343.

TOLLS

(a) Complainant attacked as unreasonable the action of defendant in charging and collecting a state toll of 5c per ton as a specific and separately stated part of its transcontinental rate to San Francisco, Calif., when no such toll is paid by said company. The title to the land which constitutes the water front of San Francisco is in the State of California, and the Harbor Commissioners have fixed a schedule of tolls upon merchandise passing over these State premises, ranging proportionately downward from 5c per ton to 1c on 400 pounds or less. This amount is collected regardless of the route used to San Francisco, via the Coast Line or across the harbor from Oakland. The Coast Line does not use any part of the harbor and shipments may arrive at San Francisco via that route and still be subject to the toll under the tariff. HELD, the law does not permit a rate to be made by including charges which the carrier does not in fact meet. Pacific Coast Jobbers and Mfrs. Asso. v. C. P. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 320.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where bills were rendered for towage services at an increased rate, which it had been stated would be charged for such services, remittances made by the debtor at the old rate, after striking out the new rate from the bills and inserting the old rate, were not a payment in full, but a payment on account. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. M. McGirr's Sons Co., 287 Fed. 334.

(b) Where a shipper loaded his goods into cars in New York and placed the cars on his own car floats, which were then towed to a railroad terminal in Jersey City, where the destination was declared and bills of lading issued, and the shipper could have employed any tugboats he chose to tow his floats, but did in fact employ the boats belonging to the railroad company over whose road the cars were subsequently transported, the towage was not a part of the interstate carriage but was accessorial service. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. M. McGirr's Sons Co., 287 Fed. 334.

(c) Where a railroad company operating towboats notified a shipper of an increased charge for towage, and was not induced to change its charge by the shipper's protest, the shipper was liable for the increased rate, if after such announcement he ordered the towage and the services were rendered. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. M. McGirr's Sons Co., 287 Fed. 334.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Since cartage charges may be regarded as a proper subject for national regulation, Federal authority over demurrage and track storage charges in connection with interstate commerce cannot be challenged and is exclusive. Wilson Produce Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 170, 173.

(b) Track storage charges when associated with an interstate movement appertain directly to interstate commerce; they represent the carrier's compensation for services rendered in connection with the transportation; a shipment is not completed until arrival at destination and delivery to the consignee; and the authority vested in Congress by the commerce clause of the Constitution covers everything relating to the delivery of freight transported between the states. Wilson Produce Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 170, 173.

(c) Where, after the Commission has ordered track storage charges to be imposed, shippers are guilty of unnecessary delay in unloading their cars or improperly insist upon using cars for storage purposes, the Commission will, upon application and showing to this effect, modify its order and increase such charges. N. Y. Hay Exchange Assn. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 178, 186.

II. REASONABLENESS AND DISCRIMINATION.

See Discrimination; Reasonableness of Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The value of the service rendered by a railroad in supplying track storage is not conclusive of the reasonableness of the schedule; it must be judged in the light of its general purpose; and the fact that warehousemen in the city in question are content with a lower charge for storage service is not conclusive since the railroad does not hold itself out as a warehouseman with respect to its cars and tracks. Wilson Produce Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 170, 175.

(b) Demurrage charges are imposed as a penalty to influence shippers promptly to unload and release the equipment of the railroad, and track storage charges, in addition to regular demurrage charges, are allowable as are reasonably required to prevent unnecessary delay in the discharge of carload freight. N. Y. Hay Exchange v. Penn. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 178, 185.

(c) Cars are primarily for transportation and not for storage or warehouse purposes, and the public as well as carriers are vitally interested in the prompt release of cars. Turnbull Co. v. Erie R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 123, 125.

(d) The Commission has approved track-storage charges assessed by carriers as a penalty in addition to the demurrage. In re Advances in Demurrage Charges, 25 I. C. C. 314, 315.

(e) Carriers are entitled to have their equipment released and their tracks relieved within a reasonable time, and in a proper case they are justified in imposing charges which will accomplish or further those purposes. Milwaukee Produce & Fruit Exch. v. C. & N. W. Ry., 35 I. C. C. 33, 35.

(f) Complainant attacked assessment by the C. O. & P., of a trackage charge of $1 per car in excess of the published rates applicable on traffic from and to its plant at Marseilles, Ill., as unlawful, unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory and unduly prejudicial. Besides its main line at Marseilles the C. O. & P., owns a branch line track which extends from a connection with the Rock Island to complainants plant and to the plants of two other industries adjacent thereto. It was originally built by the Rock Island for the Marseilles Land & Water Power Co., who sold it to its successor, who in turn transferred it to the C. O. & P. An agreement was entered into by the original owners and complainants predecessor that a charge of $1 was to be paid for every loaded car moved to or from its plant. C. O. & P., is an electric line common carrier, and no traffic is interchanged under joint rates with the Rock Island at Marseilles. On that portion of its track which lies between complainants property and the right of way of the Rock Island the C. O. & P., performs no work, the switching being done by the Rock Island with its own power. In its tariffs the Rock Island shows complainant as a destination on its own line, and there is no provision that any extra switching charge will be assessed for movement from and to the same. There is no provision in any tariff for the assessing of this $1. The evidence does not indicate that the C. O. & P., acquisition of the track resulted in any change in the relationship that previously existed between track owner and shipper. The amount of consideration that complainant pays for the use of this track is a matter of private contract. HELD, collection of charge attacked is not in violation of the act, and the Commission is without jurisdiction to determine the reasonableness of the charge. Complainant dismissed. Certain-Teed Products Corporation v. C. R. I. & P. Ry., 68 I. C. C. 260.

III. TARIFFS AND CONSTRUCTION.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where its track storage tariff applies only to produce yards, a carrier must refund charges for track storage collected for detention of cars in its "metal" yards. Wilson Produce Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 170, 176.

(b) A tariff providing for track-storage charges on freight for delivery from the cars "direct to drays" does not apply to freight delivered upon a platform. Wilson Bros. v. D. L. & W. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 11.

(c) Complainant sought reparation for track-storage charges alleged to have been assessed against it without lawful tariff authority. Complainant leased a warehouse from the D. L. & W. R. R., which adjoined its track. Between the warehouse and the track was a platform of the carrier, on which the shipments were unloaded. This platform and track served other shippers as well as complainant. The charges attacked were assessed under a tariff which provided for track-storage for carload freight detained beyond a certain period, "for delivery from cars direct to drays." HELD, the storage charges were illegally assessed, since delivery was not made direct to drays but to the platform. Reparation awarded. Wilson Bros. v. D. L. & W. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 11.

(d) Consignees are entitled to a reasonable time after delivery of shipment and notice of arrival thereof within which to unload without being subjected to demurrage or track-storage charges, and no reason appears why track-storage charges should begin earlier than demurrage charges on the same car. Murphy Bros. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., 33 I. C. C. 355, 356.

(e) To begin track storage charges earlier than demurrage charges on the same car found to be unjust and unreasonable. Murphy Bros. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C. 355, 356.

(f) Where a tariff provides that demurrage and track storage charges will not be assessed on shipments when the condition of the weather during free time is such as to make it impossible to unload, manifestly the words, "impossible to unload" can not be given a literal interpretation. They must be construed in a reasonable manner. Weather conditions that would ordinarily prevent unloading might not prevent one shipper under stress of unusual circumstances from unloading, regardless of weather conditions. The test should not be whether or not some consignee unloaded cars at the same place during the same period, but whether or not considering the character of the freight, other consignees reasonably could and did unload. When a dispute arises, the United States Weather Bureau reports should be given proper consideration, and these, the claims and records of consignees, and the records kept by the carriers' agents should be considered together in reaching a conclusion as to whether or not the weather conditions were such as to entitle consignees to waiver of track storage charges. Refusal to apply a reasonable interpretation of this rule, thereby depriving complainants of refunds lawfully due, subjects them to unlawful charges just as much as if they were charged more than the lawful rate for transportation. Murphy Bros. v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., 33 I. C. C. 355, 358.

(g) Carriers are entitled to have their equipment released and their tracks relieved within a reasonable time, and in a proper case they are justified in imposing charges which will accomplish or further those purposes. Milwaukee Produce & Fruit Exch. v. C. & N. W. Ry., 35 I. C. C. 33, 35.

(h) Carriers control transportation and elevators, and undertake to make delivery by unloading grain from cars to elevators, and grain is no more available for export, except it is nearer vessels, when in cars at terminal yards than when lying on sidings 300 miles from terminals. The assessment of track-storage charges at terminals would merely change the locus of discrimination alleged to exist. Export Grain Storage Charges, 42 I. C. C. 530, 540.

(i) It is contended that the assessment of track storage charges on export grain at tidewater points in addition to the legal tariff rate is illegal under provision of section 6, as tidewater points are merely the point of transfer from rail to water carrier. Track-storage charges not found justified. Export Grain Storage Charges, 42 I. C. C. 530, 540, 542.

(j) A tariff rule, defining railroad premises to embrace private tracks constructed, maintained, or operated under a written agreement by which carrier reserves the right to use such tracks for itself or others, makes the written agreement the controlling factor rather than the right to use such tracks. Western Petroleum Refiners Asso. v. A. & R. R. R. Co., 66 I. C. C., 58, 60.

(k) Tariff provided track-storage would be applied on shipments of "bulk freight" instead of demurrage. HELD, that crated celery is not "bulk freight" within meaning of tariff. Fish & Solomon v. P. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. A-99.

TRACKAGE AGREEMENTS

(a) The Union Pacific Railway Compaiy entered into a contract with the Rock Island Railway Company by which for a valuable consideration the latter Company acquired the right to run its through trains from and to points on its own road over the road of the Union Pacific Company between Kansas City and Topeka upon the condition that no intermediate business should be done by the Rock Island Company on any part of the line used under the agreement, the Union Pacific Company retaining control of the road and of its operation, and supplying transportation accommodations for the intermediate points between Kansas City and Topeka. Upon complaint made against the Rock Island Company by a resident of Lawrence, one of the intermediate towns, for refusing to perform the ordinary duties of a common carrier in receiving and discharging traffic at his town, HELD, That the duties of the Rock Island Company were limited by its rights and powers under its contract, and that it was not bound to do the local business prohibited by the agreement on the line used by its through trains. Alford v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 771.

(b) The duty of a railroad company operating its own road or a road that it controls to serve the local stations on its line does not apply to a company that has only a running privilege for through trains to reach points on its own line over a part of the road of another company which it does not control. In such a case the company is not required to disregard the conditions of its agreement, and does not violate the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce by not receiving and discharging traffic on the tracks of the proprietary company, the sufficiency of the local service rendered by the latter not being questioned. Alford v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 7771.

(c) In the absence of statutory provision the rights of a railroad company under a lawful agreement for a specified use of the tracks of another railroad company are measured in respect to the track use by the terms of the contract, and the provisions of the act apply to the situation created by the contract and add no authority for a different use of the tracks. Alford v. C. R. I. & P. R. 2 I. C. C. 771, 775.

(d) The trackage charge to be paid by defendants to the stock yards company in Chicago is fairly established at $1 per car. Cattle Raisers' Asso. of Texas v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 277.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(e) It is a well recognized practice among carriers to agree as to trackage rights and privileges for the common use of the part of the line of one so as to make the tracks subject to the agreement a part of both roads. Dixie Cotton Oil Co. v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co., 27 I. C. C. 295, 297.

(f) A provision in a trackage lease that the lessee may not serve private side tracks is not unlawful. Hocking Domestic Coal Co. v. K. & M. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 392, 398.

(g) The interpretation and enforcement of trackage contracts, involving property rights or the use by one railway of the property of another, are questions primarily for the courts and not for the commission. Hocking Domestic Coal Co. v. K. & M. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 392, 398.

(h) The rights of the lessee with respect to a leased line are not the general rights of a common carrier upon its own road, but are limited and qualified by the agreement. They are simple contract rights which the law does not and can not enlarge. Hocking Domestic Coal Co. v. K. & M. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 392, 400.

(i) An owning and operating railroad may give trackage rights to another carrier over a part of its line, where such a grant does not impair the performance of its own duties to the public as a common carrier, and may prohibit the grantee from exercising its functions as a common carrier with respect to traffic upon the line of track so granted. Hocking Domestic Coal Co. v. K. & M. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 392, 400.

(j) A railroad may not render itself incapable of performing its duties to the public or absolve itself from those obligations without the consent of the state, but an owning and operating railroad may give trackage rights to another carrier over a part of its line, where such a grant does not impair the performance of its own duties to the public as a common carrier, and, in the absence of a controlling statute, the owning carrier may, by the terms of the agreement, prohibit the grantee from exercising its functions as a common carrier with respect to traffic upon the line of track so granted. Such provisions do not impair the common carrier obligations of the grantee on its own line, and the grant may indeed enlarge the ability of the grantee carrier to serve patrons on its own line. Hocking Domestic Coal Co. v. K. & M. Ry., 44 I. C. C. 392, 400.

(k) Respondents, Chicago & West Ridge Railroad, proposed to establish a trackage charge of $3 for each car under load set upon and each car under load taken from its tracks. In a tariff previously filed by respondent a trackage charge of $1 was named which it proposed to cancel. Respondent's tracks extend about 2.5 miles from Weber, Ill., a station beyond the city limits of Chicago, Ill., on the C. & N. W., to Peterson Avenue within those limits. Respondent does not own or operate any rolling stock or perform any service of transportation. It allows the Northwestern, its only connection, to use its tracks without charge. The trackage charge is imposed on the shipper. Respondent does not participate in any rates with other railroads, does not issue bills of lading or publish demurrage charges and the only charge collected by it is the trackage charge, which thus constitutes its sole source of revenue. These are the only tariffs filed with the Commission by respondent. HELD, respondent is not a common carrier subject to the interstate commerce act and that the suspended schedules must be stricken from the files of the Commission. The same course will be taken as to its other tariff. Trackage charge on loaded cars, 60 I. C. C. 134.

(l) Where a mine is not actually upon the rails of a carrier and can not be considered as constructively upon the rails of that carrier under the terms of a trackage agreement, the publication of rates from that mine without the concurrence of the carrier upon whose rails it is situated is contrary to the Commission's tariff rules and should be discontinued. Ridge Coal Mining Co. v. M. P. R. R. Co., 62 I. C. C. 259, 263, 264.

(m) The service of mines by a carrier under trackage agreements is, in practical and legal effect, the substantial equivalent of the extension of its rails to them. Ridge Coal Mining Co. v. M. P. R. R. Co., 62 I. C. C. 259, 261; Dering Mines Co. v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 265, 267.

(n) So long as a charge is published for placing shipments at points of unloading on private industry tracks, carriers must, upon demand, perform the service, but it does not necessarily follow that they would be under any common-carrier obligation to do the switching if no charge were published. Carriers perform services voluntarily or under stress of competition which are not within their duty as common carriers, and which they can not be required to perform in the absence of undue prejudice or unjust discrimination. Whitaker-Glessner Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. C. 47, 54, 55.

(o) It can not be held that because a carrier has extended its lines to certain mines it thereby holds itself out to serve all mines in that general territory similarly situated in regard to its own tracks. Benton Coal Mining Co. v. C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. 396, 399.

(p) A joint mine which is accorded a joint status by means of a trackage agreement is in the same category as a junction-point mine, and it extends its service to certain mines, either by extension of its rails or under trackage agreements, thereby giving them the advantages of a joint or junction-point status, while declining to make other extensions or trackage agreements to extend its service to other mines. Benton Coal Mining Co. v. C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. C. 396, 399.

(q) The service of a mine by a carrier under a trackage agreement is, in practical and legal effect, the substantial equivalent of an extension of its rails to the mines. Benton Coal Mining Co. v. C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. C. 396, 399.

TRAINLOAD RATES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant attacked the rate of 3.1c per 100 lbs. charged on numerous carloads of logs shipped from Spur 294, and Peck's Spur, Mich., to Green Bay, Wis., 183 and 182 miles, as unreasonable discriminatory and in violation of the fourth section. The rate from Port, Britton's Spur and Hubbell's Mill. Mich., to which the points of origin in question were intermediate was $3 per 1,000 ft., minimum trainload 20 cars, where the products were to be reshipped from Green Bay via defendant's line. Complainant had requested the establishment of the latter rate before its shipments moved, but complainant did not ship more than 6 cars in any one train, and there was no showing that the products of the logs were reshipped via defendants line. HELD, that the rate attacked was not unreasonable, but was discriminatory against complainant in favor of shippers at the more distant points. Reparation denied. Complaint dismissed. Diamond Lumber Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 43 I. C. C. 65.

(b) The Commission has never approved tariff provision for trainload rates. Diamond Lumber Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 43 I. C. C. 65, 66.

(c) Tariff should be amended at once by cancellation of the item relating to trainload lots, as manipulation of the grossest kind is obviously under such a provision. Portsmouth Asso. of Commerce v. S. A. L. Ry., 55 I. C. C. 377, 390.

TRANSFER

See Allowances §8 (7); Electric Lines IV; Facilities and Privileges §15½; Transfer Companies; Transshipment.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant attacked the charge of $4 per car for transferring citrus fruit from ventilated box cars into refrigerator cars at Potomac Yard, Va., as unjust and unreasonable. The shipments were made from Florida points to destionations north and east of Potomac Yard. The transfer was made at complainant's request, but complainant had requested refrigerator cars prior to shipment. It appeared that the Florida citrus crop moved partly in ventilator cars and partly in refrigerator cars, but that only a small proportion of the latter were iced. Ventilator cars were safe for citrus fruit until the mercury sank to 10 degrees above zero. Shipments had the advantage of reconsignment service without extra cost; and complainant might avoid the necessity of transferring to refrigerator cars at Potomac Yard by selecting shipments to points involving danger of freezing, shipments already loaded into refrigerator cars and standing at Potomac Yard. HELD that the transfer involved was in the nature of an added special service, for which carriers might justly impose a reasonable charge against the shipper. Imposition of the charge assailed justified. Florida Citrus Exch. v. A. C. L. R. R., 39 I. C. C., 325.

(b) Transfer of coal from coal cars to box cars not found to be a service of transportation which defendant was required to perform and for performance of which by owner defendant could lawfully pay an allowance. Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 39 I. C. C. 339, 340.

(c) Carriers entering St. Louis, Mo., provided as set forth in St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C. 453, for the absorption of certain transfer charges to off-track stations of complainant and their St. Louis stations from designated other transfer companies, but not including the station in question. For traffic from this station the defendant refused to compensate complainant, which was accordingly compelled to move it from its off-track station to defendant's station by wagon. HELD, that it did not appear that the defendant had violated any provision of the Act. Complaint dismissed. Columbia Transfer Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 371.

(d) The practice of terminal carriers of requiring complainants, at their own expense, to transfer to other equipment, shipments of hay delivered to team tracks in St. Louis or East St. Louis in bad-order cars, as a precedent to permitting rebilling to points beyond, found an unjust, unreasonable, and unduly prejudical practice. Reparation awarded. Merchants Exchange of St. Louis v. T. R. R. Asso. of St. L., 50 I. C. C. 474.

(e) Transfer charge collected without lawful tariff authority should be refunded. Reliance Mfg. Co. v. I. C. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 607, 608.

(f) Rule 90, providing for charge of $5 per car for transfer of perishable freight into refrigerator or other fully insulated cars to protect against heat or cold, approved with modifications. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 563, 564.

(g) Shipper is entitled to notice of a transfer charge other than one coming to him through the collection of the charge from his consignee, and as he is not obligated to follow his shipment and make the transfer himself he is entitled to the protection afforded by a published definite rate. The defendant can not excuse the collection of this unpublished and unknown drayage and transfer charge by proof that it had a rule which forbade the sending of its cars off its own line during a period of car shortage and congestion of business. William Schuette & Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 709, 711.

(h) Operating rule prohibited movement of grain car equipment to points off defendant's rails, and reconsignment refused. Tariff provided free reconsignment at through rate and did not restrict reconsignment to foreign cars or authorize a charge for transfer to foreign equipment. HELD, complainants were denied a service authorized by the tariff, it being defendant's duty to forward shipment loaded in its cars or after transfer without charge into foreign cars. Conover v. M. & St. L. R. R. Co., 58 I. C. C. 729.

(i) A consignor of goods loaded them into railroad cars on a spur track constructed for the sole benefit of another firm. In order for the carrier to convey the goods to destination, it was necessary for it to transfer the cars to another railroad about a mile away. It appeared that they did such service for the firm for whose benefit the side track had been constructed. HELD, that its refusal so to carry the consignor's goods did not constitute a discrimination against him in favor of the other firm; the situation of the two being different. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Arkadelphia Milling Co. (Ark. 1915) 180 S. W. 200, 201.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) The Commission has no jurisdiction over a common-carrier transfer company. Anacostia Citizens Assn. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 25 I. C. C. 411, 414.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Transportation from a seaport of the United States or an adjacent foreign country to an interior American destination in completion of a through movement of freight from a port of a foreign but not adjacent country, whether upon a joint through rate or upon a separately established or proportional inland rate applicable only to imports moving through, is not a "like service" to that of the transportation independent and complete within itself of traffic starting at such domestic port, though bound for the same destination. (c) When the shipper is willing to accept the risk of weather conditions, carriers should not refuse to accept shipments. Protection of Potato Shipments in Winter, 29 I. C. C. 504, 505.

(d) Failure of carrier's agent at destination to notify consignor that shipment was being held for delivery. HELD, not to constitute a breach of duty under the Act. Central Pennsylvania Lumber Co. v. T. V. Ry., 51 I. C. C. 465.

(e) Whether a particular movement should be treated as a line haul or switching service is not dependent upon manner of publishing charges but rather upon nature of service itself. Absorption of Charges, 81 I. C. C. 181, 183.

St. §8563, sub. 2, declaring, "The term 'transportation' shall include ..... all services in connection with the receipt, delivery," etc., "of property transported," "delivery" connotes either tender to the consignee or a reasonable opportunity afforded him for the removal of the property transported. II. DUTY OF CARRIER TO TRANSPORT.

§2. In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) It is not necessary for a shipper to make a special contract with a common carrier, in order to entitle himself to transportation for his goods. Riddle, Dean & Co. v. N. Y. & L. E. & W. R. R. Co., 1 I. C. R. 787.

(b) Less desirable freight must be accepted upon reasonable terms, as well as that which is more desirable. Riddle v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 1 I. C. R. 787.

(c) A common carrier is under obligation to serve the public equally and justly; it is unlawful for him to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or locality, or any particular description of traffic in any respect whatsoever. He must know no friends and concede no unequal favors. The opportunity for profit of a stranger in a single and unusual transaction should be held as important by the carrier as the traffic of a constant shipper; no preference should be given to either. It is in contravention of the statute for a common carrier to refuse a shipment upon the ground that regular patrons desire to use all the facilities at hand, and to appropriate to the uses of the latter the entire available equipment. Riddle Dean & Co. v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 787, 790.

(d) A common carrier, by virtue of his assuming that position and thereby becoming entitled to the privileges, liens and protections given by statute and at the common law, becomes at the same time bound to carry the merchandise of all, for a reasonable reward, whenever tendered in the usual way. The difference between a common carrier and a private carrier consists largely in that obligation which arises without special agreement. The compensation of a common carrier is assured to him by a lien upon the goods, a right which is not enjoyed by a private carrier; in case the articles are not surely worth the freight money his right to demand payment in advance has long been recognized, his interests are well protected in every direction, and he has no right to refuse to accept for transportation, at a reasonable rate any article of such a nature as he is accustomed to transport for any persons seeking the service. Riddle Dean & Co. v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co., 1 I. C. C. 787, 791.

(e) It is obvious that an unremunerative and undesirable traffic can be put an end to by announcing a prohibitory rate as effectually as by refusing to accept the business. Riddle Dean & Company v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. 787, 792.

(f) Every carrier is held liable for correctness of weight and classification of freight received so far as same can be practically ascertained. Re Unbilling 1 I. C. R. 813.

(g) Common carriers must take all descriptions of all ordinary traffic from all points, and the rates should be known and announced publicly in advance of the offering of traffic. Re Tariffs of Transcontinental Lines (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 203.

(h) A carrier cannot be considered as ratifying the original contract of shipment for goods which it receives from another company and transports, when it is bound by statute to perform such service. Dwyer v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex.) 5 I. C. R. 361.

(i) Under the Act to Regulate Commerce as amended carriers subject to its provisions may not lawfully refuse transportation as therein defined, but they must upon reasonable request afford the same upon established rates filed and kept posted as required by law. J. J. Waxelbaum & Company v. A. C. L. R. R., 12 I. C. C. 178, 183.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(j) The chief function of a common carrier is to carry, at reasonable rates traffic tendered to it. As a general rule, an interstate carrier has no right at least under ordinary circumstances, to choose, or in any way to control, the markets in which its shippers may buy or sell their wares. Its duty is to transport the merchandise of shippers in accordance with their reasonable instructions, and it may demand nothing beyond a reasonable compensation for the services rendered. It cannot force its services upon a shipper or insist upon carrying his shipment to one market when he desires to reach another. It has no right to insist that a shipment shall go to the end of its rails if the shipper desires it to be diverted at an intermediate point to another market off its rails. Nor may a carrier accomplish these results indirectly by any unreasonable adjustment of its rate schedules with that end in view. It cannot lawfully compel the shipping public to contribute to its revenues on any such grounds. Chamber of Commerce of Milwaukee v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 15 I. C. C. 460, 464.

(k) The operation of a rule that inflammable oils will be delivered but one day in a week unduly prefers large shippers with tank stations from which they make deliveries by wagon. National Petroleum Ass'n v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 473, 476.

(l) The question of the use of additional equipment and the expense involved to the carriers are not controlling in determining whether the operation of a railroad limiting shipments to certain days of the week is unjustly discriminatory against any class of shippers. National Petroleum Ass'n. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 473, 477.

(m) It is the duty of a common carrier to receive and carry, upon reasonable terms, all goods tendered in suitable condition, and it can not lawfully discriminate in favor of any person, product or locality. Standard Lime & Stone Co. v. Cumberland Valley R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 620, 622, 623.

(n) A shipper may not use a carrier subject to the Act or its agent as his agent for the purpose of receiving consignments of property and rebilling the same in order to break an interstate journey or make an intrastate one. The Commission's authority is confined to carriers subject to the Act, and until a carrier becomes a subject to the Act voluntarily or as a matter of law, the Commission's rule as to a shipper availing himself of such carrier as his agent does not apply. (Lane, comm'r, concurring opinion.) In Re Transportation by the C. & O. Ry. Co., 21 I. C. C. 207, 209.

(o) It is beyond the lawful right of a carrier to determine what traffic it will take into a city and what traffic it will take out of it. It must perform either service at the request of the shipper and for a reasonable charge. Memphis Hay & Grain Assn. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 609, 615.

(p) And when the rules put upon the shipper the risk of damage from freezing, there is no occasion for a further rule permitting the carrier to refuse a shipment altogether. Protection of Potato shipments in Winter 26 I. C. C. 681, 685.

(q) Neither character, quantity, quality or price of articles can qualify obligation of carrier to accept them for transportation. In re Rates on Plaster and Gypsum Rock, 27 I. C. C. 67, 69.

(r) Railroad service is often of even greater importance than the rate itself. New England Investigation, 27 I. C. C. 560, 616.

(s) Rates may not be predicated upon character of vehicle from which commodities are delivered on freight platforms or in cars, so long as no additional burden is put upon carriers. Trap or Ferry Car Service Charges, 34 I. C. C., 541, 542.

(t) Uncertainty in service is as much to be condemned as uncertainty in rates. Lighterage and Storage Regulations at New York, 35 I. C. C. 47, 58.

(u) Operation of the anti-trust laws, except in respect of consolidations or mergers of parallel and competing lines, as applied to rail-and-water carriers subject to the Act, and of the antipooling provisions of section 5 of the Act, should be suspended during period of war, if unification is to be effected by the carriers. Unification of Railroad Operation, 47 I. C. C. 757, 760.

(v) It is the shipper's duty to provide a barge for the movement of coal beyond the pier, and the practice at tidewater is similar to the constructive placement of cars consigned to line shippers who are unable to accept delivery when tendered. Wholesale Coal Trade Asso. v. Director General, as Agent, 58 I. C. C. 15, 26.

(w) Operating rule prohibited movement of grain car equipment to points off defendant's rails, and reconsignment refused. Tariff provided free reconsignment at through rate and did not restrict reconsignment to foreign cars or authorize a charge for transfer to foreign equipment. HELD, complainants were denied a service authorized by the tariff, it being defendant's duty to forward shipment loaded in its cars or after transfer without charge into foreign cars. Conover v. M. & St. L. R. R. Co., 58 I. C. C. 729.

(x) In absence of undue prejudice whatever service a carrier can be required to perform it may insist upon performing. Riter Conley Mfg. Co. v. Director General, 58 I. C. C. 327, 330.

(y) Railroads must serve the public and handle the freight from its connections accommodating its methods of operation to the business needed to be moved. Routing on Coal from Western Maryland Mines, 66 I. C. C. 103, 106.

(z) The obligation to accept articles tendered for transportation is governed by general principles of law; to reconsign, by rules lawfully on file with the Commission. The right to refuse shipments temporarily for good cause by establishment of embargoes, which are not required to be filed, is recognized. The right to reconsign depends entirely upon the construction of the rules, which are required to be filed in the same manner as rates. If carriers do not restrict such rules to the extent of their capacity to perform the service, the shipper can not be held liable for detention when it is not directly responsible therefor and can not abate the cause thereof, as in the case of an embargo, which is a disability of the carrier. Krauss Bros. Lumber Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C. 637, 639.

(aa) It is necessary that all essential transportation facilities of the country be kept in operation. Division of joint rates and fares of M. & N. A. R. R., 68 I. C. C. 47, 61.

(bb) The issuance of bills of lading and movement of shipments under regular waybills are mere incidents of service which in no wise determine its character as line haul or switching. Western Meat Co. v. Director General, 78 I. C. C. 77, 80.

(cc) Carrier is obliged to receive shipments and to perform transportation services requested in accordance with its published tariffs. Elk Tanning Co. v. E. R. R. Co., 78 I. C. C. 452, 453, 454.

(dd) Under Section 1 of the Act as amended June 29, 1906, providing that "it shall be the duty of every carrier subject to the provisions of the Act to provide and furnish such transportation upon a reasonable request therefor," the term transportation includes all kinds of instrumentalities of shipment and carriage. United States v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 165 Fed. 113, 121.

(ee) A rule of the Interstate Commerce Commission providing that burnt cotton, which is cotton that has been on fire, and which has not been subsequently repicked and rebaled, must not be offered for shipment until it has been reconditioned, or until not less than five days have elapsed since the last evidence of fire therein, does not forbid shipment of cotton which had been part of a larger mass that had been on fire after five days elapsed, merely because there was fire in other cotton about 200 yards distant at the time of the shipment. Southern Ry. Co. v. Pettit, 257 Fed. 666.

§3. Company material.

See Evidence §46.

(a) Carriers buying what would ultimately become company material, contracted with shippers located off their lines and agreed that if the vendor would bill the shipment beyond a designated junction point, at which their own lines and the lines of the initial carriers meet, the purchasing carrier would absorb its own division of the joint through rate, and the shippers assume only that portion of the joint through rate which accrued to the initial carrier as their division of the rate up to the junction point designated in the billing. HELD, this practice results in the application of a portion of joint rate from the point of origin to the junction point for the benefit of a particular shipper, which is not published for the public at large nor filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission under section 6 of the Act. Nor is it material whether the contractor for a carrier, or the purchasing carrier itself, is the consignor. In either case the shipment should be billed and continuously transported from point of origin through the junction point of the purchasing carrier and to the point of final destination on the purchasing carrier's line. The purchasing carrier is then clearly entitled to its division of the joint rate and the charge which it may pay on its shipment of material to the junction point is the division of the rate accruing to the initial carrier and connections, if any, up to the junction point in question. If the shipment is billed or is actually carried only to the junction point of the purchasing carrier, whether the carrier or its contractor or other private party acts as consignor, the division of a joint rate cannot apply unless this division has been lawfully published as applicable to movements to such junction point for shipment beyond. The Act to Regulate Commerce gives no indication that either carriers or contractors who furnish company materials and supplies are to be preferred over other individuals so far as rates are concerned. The public rate is the only lawful rate and is applicable to all alike without distinction. If one shipper is to have the advantage of such a division of a through rate then all other shippers should have the same advantage, and the only way to secure this advantage to one is to publish it available for all. A carrier acting in the capacity of shipper or consignor stands upon a footing of absolute equality with every other shipper with respect to the application of published rates to such shipments except in regard to that part of a joint rate which accrues upon the purchasing carrier's own line. Practice condemned and complainant dismissed. Beekman Lumber Co. v. St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co., 21 I. C. C. 270, 272, 273, 275.

(b) The local haul to a junction point is a different service from that performed to the same point as part of a through haul to a destination beyond, and the fact that fictitious billing may be resorted to, to secure the unlawful application of the division of a joint rate for that service is no reason for condemning the lawful practice of billing bona fide through shipments to ultimate destination at the through rate. False or fictitious billing of company material with intent to defeat the application of the lawful rate for the service actually performed like other fraudulent practices with like intent would subject the guilty party to the penalties of the law for offenses of this sort in general. Beekman Lumber Co. v. L. Ry. & N. Co., 21 I. C. C. 280, 282.

§4. Collection of Charges.

See Freight Charges; Overcharges; Undercharges.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Under the law and the long established custom a carrier has the right to require prepayment of its charges, or to transport the freight and collect all of such charges on delivery thereof, or to accept part of the charges in prepayment and collect the remainder upon delivery. In re Transportation of Company Material, 22 I. C. C. 439, 440.

(b) The Commission reopened 57 I. C. C. 591 prescribing rules and regulations for the prompt payment of transportation rates and charges with particular reference to its application on freight moving wholly or partly by water. A considerable volume of traffic in this country moves partly by rail and partly by water in competition with all rail routes. Apparently there is no good reason for a difference in practice with respect to the extension of credit where the transportation is by railroad and where partly by railroad and partly by water when both are under a common control, management or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment. Petition was filed to modify the order with regard to export traffic. The delay incident to presentation of expense bills on export traffic is usually not more than two days. HELD, on export traffic the 96 hours for payment of charges should be computed from the first 4 p. m. following the time when the vessel is completely loaded freight bills to be presented on that day. Ex Parte 73, 63 I. C. C. 375.

§5. Delivery or Receipt.

See Drayage; Express Companies §2; Side Tracks; Spotting; Stock Yard Companies; Switch Tracks and Switching §5.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) While carefully guarding their rights in all matters to which it relates, the Act does not proceed upon the theory that shippers are absolved from all duty in looking after the delivery of their freight to railroads for carriage. Riddle Dean & Co. v. B. & O. R. R., 1 I. C. C. 779, 784.

(b) Collection and delivery are not required by the Interstate Commerce Act to be alike at places grouped under the same rate. Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee Ry. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 7 I. C. C. App. LXXIV.

(c) Transportation by rail undoubtedly involves a suitable delivery. Discrimination may rise in the delivery as well as in the receipt or the transportation. Authority over the transportation must carry with it authority over the delivery. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 11 I. C. C. 82, 87.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) A confectionery merchant, at 3142 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C., alleged unjust discrimination in that defendants extended to other parts of the city including that one known as Georgetown, free collection and delivery service from and to the shipper's door, while denying same to complainant. Defendants made free deliveries to 14th Street N. only as far as Florida Ave., while they made deliveries as far west as 37th and U. Sts., in Georgetown. From the stations of two of the defendants to 37th and U Sts., the distance is 576 blocks greater than to complainant's place of business. From the station of another of the defendant's the distance is very much greater to 37th and U than to complainant's store. It appeared that on account of the increased growth on Washington, north of Florida Ave. on 14th St., there were in complainant's vicinity some 70 stores in operation; also a general market and ice factory, and other industries. The cost of delivery beyond the free delivery zone was 2c per 100 lbs. with a minimum charge of 10c per package. HELD, that complainant was unduly prejudiced by this discrimination and defendants should desist from such preferences. Cassassa v. P. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 629.

(e) And delivering lines owe to shippers under joint rates the obligation to do what they reasonably can to avoid delays in the delivery of their traffic. Detroit Reconsigning Case, 25 I. C. C. 392, 395.

(f) It is the duty of a carrier to give a receipt to conform to the markings on the shipment. Parlin & Oredorff Plow Co. of St. Louis v. U. S. Express Co., 26 I. C. C. 561, 562.

(g) It is the general custom for carriers to haul freight from points on their respective lines to industries located on their own sidings without switching charges. Dixie Cotton Oil Company v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co. 27 I. C. C. 295, 297.

(h) Railroads attempted to withdraw a free store door delivery service accorded by them to merchants at Washington, D. C., on articles falling within the first four classes moving to Washington from New England territory, greater New York and Philadelphia. This free service did not apply to shipments in the other classes or to any shipments coming to Washington from other points of origin than those above specified. Defendants sought to justify the withdrawal on the ground that free service was instituted to prevent the congestion of terminals at Washington, and that this congestion has been relieved recently by the building of new terminal facilities. It appeared that a similar free service was extended to the merchants at Baltimore on the first three classes, but not on the fourth class, and that these merchants, as jobbers and retailers, were in competition with Washington merchants. HELD, that the free service should not be withdrawn with respect to the first three classes so long as it was extended to Baltimore since to permit such withdrawal would result in unjust discrimination against Washing to merchants. Washington, D. C. Store-Door Delivery, 27 I. C. C. 347.

(i) In the absence of tariff provision to the contrary, rates to a given point include delivery only on a carrier's own rails. Ohio Iron & Metal Co. v. C. M. & St. P. R. R. Co., 28 I. C. C. 703, 705.

(j) If a service offered and for a long time performed in consideration of a rate includes taking property from a given point and delivering at a given point, the delivery at the point is in no sense a "free service." Rates in Chicago Switching District, 34 I. C. C., 234, 242.

(k) Unjust discrimination resulting from limitations upon certain shippers in connection with receipt and delivery of freight at undefined points on west bank of Mississippi River must be corrected. St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C., 453, 466.

(l) The fact that inanimate or dead freight may be required to be delivered to customers on the spur tracks at their plants is no sufficient reason for a like rule being applied to live stock. Nashville Abattoir, Hide & Melting Asso. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 40 I. C. C. 134, 139.

(m) A reasonable tender of freight at an accessible point must be made by carriers to consignees under the law. Ordinarily such a delivery is affected by setting the car on a team track or private siding. But the usual method is not the exclusive method. It is followed because it is the most convenient and practicable under ordinary conditions. The underlying requirement in all cases is that the carrier shall make a practical loading. St. Louis, Mo. (Cupples Station) Terminal Regulation, 40 I. C. C., 425, 432.

(n) The duties of the carrier and the shipper in respect to the delivery of goods are reciprocal. The circumstances and conditions attending the delivery of freight at terminals in the large cities, and even from the depots of carriers in the smaller communities, are such that it is not only impossible for the shipper to anticipate the arrival of his goods and be there to receive them, but also it would be equally disadvantageous to the carriers, whose facilities for the receiving and handling of freight are so congested and inadequate in many communities that much time and thought on the part of transportation companies, public commissions, and regulatory bodies are being devoted to the solution or amelioration of such conditions. Bills of Lading, 52 I. C. C. 671, 700.

(o) Whether customary and reasonable delivery is made on an ordinary team track, switch track or plant track of an industry, it is a public transportation service. Wharton Steel Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 11, 21.

(p) It is the duty of carriers under line-haul rates to deliver or receive c. l. freight at usual points of unloading or loading unless such points are so located that the request for the receipt and delivery at such spots could not, in view of general usage, be regarded as reasonable. Wharton Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 59 I. C. C. 11, 21.

(q) A service that is of such a nature that an engine crew, admittedly performing its work with marked efficiency and dispatch, can interchange but two cars an hour, can not fairly be regarded as merely a service of delivery substituted for team track, industrial spur or private siding delivery. Carey Mfg. Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 59 I. C. C. 640, 644.

(r) There are certain fundamental differences in the carriers legal rights and liabilities which they can not be required to disregard to the extent of making deliveries on private tracks without requiring surrender of the order bill of lading or other adequate protection against losses for which such deliveries render them liable. These differences necessitate a different manner of handling such shipments when destined for delivery on private sidings from that employed on shipments for team track delivery, Diversion and reconsignment rule, 61 I. C. C. 385, 391.

(s) And carriers are required to deliver or receive c. l. freight at the usual points of loading or unloading unless such points are so located that the request for receipt and delivery at such spots could not, in view of general usage be regarded as reasonable. Edge Moor Iron Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 61 I. C. C. 537, 540.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(t) The refusal of a carrier to accept certain shipments when tendered for transportation after close of business on day preceding effective date of increased rates found not to have resulted in unreasonable or unlawful charges, and the acceptance of an occasional shipment from complainant after the closing hour found not to establish the existence of such a practice. Transcontinental Freight Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 62 I. C. C. 127.

(u) In testing the extent of the carrier's legal obligation as to the delivery of carload freight, two circumstances are entitled to primary consideration. One is the extent of the service involved in a typical team track delivery; the other, the extent of the service rendered in the typical shunting of a car upon a siding of a shipper clear of the main track, the substitute for team track delivery. Wherever a particular delivery service-spotting at some place of unloading within a plant, properly may be construed as the equivalent of either of these two services, and the rendition of such service practical, the Commission may require a carrier to perform such service with its own equipment as part of its legal obligation as to delivery of carload traffic. Lehigh Portland Cement Co. v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 231, 236.

(v) Under the law a reasonable tender of freight at an accessible point must be made by carriers to consignees. Ordinarily delivery by the carrier to the consignee or by the shipper to the carrier is effected by settling the car on the team track or private siding, or in the car of less carload traffic, at the carrier's freight station. The underlying requirement in all cases is that the carrier shall make a practical delivery or afford facility for practical loading. Carriers must maintain reasonable facilities for the receipt of freight from shippers. National Wholesale Grocers Asso. v. Director General, 62 I. C. C. 375, 402.

(w) Placing cars within complainant's plant upon the interchange tracks of its railway, a plant facility, found to constitute delivery at such industry under the line-haul rates. Whitaker-Glessner Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 63 I. C. C. 47.

(x) The obligation as common carriers involves only a delivery and acceptance of carload shipments at some reasonably convenient point of interchange. Gulf States Steel Co. v. Director General, 66 I. C. C. 255, 258.

(y) The receipt and delivery of property are a part of a carrier's transportation services. Elevation and transfer in transit have frequently been found by the commission and the courts to constitute necessary steps in the transportation of various kinds of property. Guaranty Claim of Central Elevator Co., 72 I. C. C., 175, 176.

(z) Defendant track lines unable to make delivery to plant of complainant without using tracks of Pittsburgh & Ohio Valley Ry. Co., but since that road is found to be a common carrier subject to the act delivery by connecting lines to the Valley upon its interchange tracks does not constitute delivery to complainant and is not a completed service at line-haul rates. Carnegie Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 269, 275, 276.

(aa) Cars were switched from dock to carrier's scale, for weighing, and returned to dock. Switching tariff provided rates for "intra-plant" and "intra-terminal" switching. HELD, movement was not "intra-plant," switching within definition of tariff, and was not "from one track to another," within definition of "intra-terminal" switching, which contemplates movement from one plant or industry to a different plant or industry. Scale track was not point of actual or constructive delivery, and mere fact that cars were stopped at scale for weighing makes that point no more a destination or "another track" than would be any point along route at which for operating reasons, cars might be momentarily stopped. Movement herein involved was not covered by tariff. Mitsui & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 489.

(bb) Shipment of coal to Drew, Miss., placed on public delivery track for unloading, was subsequently reconsigned to another point at complainant's request after original consignee's rejection. Combination rates to and from Drew assessed. Rule claimed applicable by complainant provided for assessment of through rate plus reconsignment charge if reconsignment order given after arrival at original destination "but before placement for unloading." HELD, original consignee having no private track, car was properly placed for unloading on public delivery track; rule relied upon being therefore inapplicable. Memphis Freight Bureau v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 589.

(cc) In absence of instructions to contrary, it is right of carrier, and ordinarily would be appropriate course, to place car for unloading promptly upon arrival at destination. Memphis Freight Bureau v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C., 589, 590.

(dd) Where the facilities of an industry are so constructed that delivery at its plant is rendered impracticable, the duty of the carrier is fulfilled if it holds itself out to receive and deliver on a convenient interchange track. Divisions received by Brimstone R. R. and Canal Co., 88 I. C. C. 62, 69.

(ee) The delivery and receipt of carload freight on industrial spur tracks within a carrier's switching limits in a city, is not an added service for which the carrier is entitled to make, or should make, a charge additional to the line-haul rate to or from the city, where the line-haul rate embraces a receiving and delivery service at team tracks or freight sheds for which the spur track service is a substitute. Interstate Com. Com. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 814, 818; 234 U. S.—, 58 L. ed.—, reversing 188 Fed. 229, 929, and affirming the decision of the Commission in 18 I. C. C. 317, 318.

(ff) Though shippers, in contracting with a carrier for the construction of industrial spur tracks to their establishments, consent to a special charge for the receipt and delivery thereon of freight by the carrier, such service is performed subject to the law of the land requiring that the carrier's charge shall not be unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory, and if it become apparent that the shippers are subjected to arbitrary and unwarranted exaction, they are not estopped from bringing the matter before the Commission, nor from securing its order directing the carrier to stop the objectionable practice. Interstate Com. Com. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 34 Sup. Ct. 814, 819; 58 L. ed.—234 U. S.

(gg) In the absence of special contract or usage to the contrary, under the common law, carriers by land are bound to deliver or tender goods to consignee at his residence or place of business, and until this is done they are not relieved from responsibility as carriers. This rule, however, never has applied to railroads. They are exempt from personal delivery and bound only to carry the goods to the depot or station to which they were consigned and there haul or place them in a warehouse ready for delivery whenever the consignee or owner calls for them, after notifying the consignee or owner of their readiness to deliver. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. I. C. C., 188 Fed. 229, 237; S. P. Co. v. I. C. C., 188 Fed. 241.

(hh) It is not the duty of a carrier to completely fill the sidetrack of a shipper with cars, even though the cars sufficient to fill such side-track are held by it at a junction just short of such destination. Menasha Paper Co. v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 36 Sup. Ct., 501.

(ii) The Act, as it now is, provides that transportation which must be furnished to all upon equal terms includes the delivery of freight as part of its transportation. While §3 remains part of the act in its original form, it must be given a reasonable construction with a view to carrying out all the provisions of the act and to make every part of it effective, in accordance with the intention of Congress. Pennsylvania Co. v. United States, 35 Sup. Ct. 370, 375; 236 U. S. 351, 59 L. ed. 616.

(jj) The provisions of §3 of the Act must be read in connection with the amendments and subsequent provisions, which show that transportation as used in the act covers the entire carriage and services in connection with the receipt and delivery of property transported. So there can be no question that when a carrier uses terminal facilities in connection with the receipt and delivery of carload freight transported in interstate traffic, it is subject to the provisions of the act, and is obliged as a common carrier in that capacity to afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic with connecting lines, and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivery of property to and from its own lines and such connecting lines, and is obliged not to discriminate in rates and charges between such connecting lines. By the amendments to the act, the facilities for delivering freight of a terminal character are brought within the terms of the transportation to be regulated. Pennsylvania Co. v. United States 35 Sup. Ct. 370, 374; 236 U. S. 351, 59 L. ed. 616.

(kk) A contract for transportation of a carload obliges the carrier, if required, to place the car on a private siding for unloading. Lee v. Erie R. Co., 158 N. Y. 730.

(ll) A railroad furnishing sufficient facilities for the receipt and delivery of freight cannot be requested to receive freight on a private switch. Fairview Coal Co v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co. (Arkansas, 1923), 252 S. W. 920.

§6. Notifying consignor or consignee. See Notice.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission said in the Bill of Lading case (52 I. C. C. 671, 719, 720) that at Common Law the duty of a carrier to give notice to the shipper when a shipment is refused can only arise when the carrier is required to make personal delivery, and has no application to railroads when goods are to be deposited in a warehouse to await call, and failure as warehouseman to give such notice is not such negligence as to make the carrier liable for any loss caused thereby. The Commission, however pointed out that this was not the uniform law by any means in all the states. In many the carriers are required to give notice to the consignor if the consignee fails or refuses to accept the shipment. The Commission in this case was asked to incorporate in the bill of lading a provision requiring the carriers to give such notice. The Commission declined to do this, not because it disapproved of such practice, but evidently looked upon it more as an operating detail, which it was averse to giving a "bill of lading Status." That the Commission desired the carriers to give such notice is shown by the following language in the decision (p720): "It is undoubtedly to the mutual interest of the carrier and shipper that such notices should be given, but we have no reason to believe that the carriers fail, in the general conduct of their business, to exercise due diligence and observe good business methods in respect to the giving of such notices."

(b) Altho at one time the Commission said that it is to the interest of the public that the consignor should be promptly notified when a shipment is not delivered. Kehoe & Co. v. N. C. & St. L. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 555, 556.

(c) A carrier's agent at destination is under no duty to notify a consignor by wire that a shipment was not promptly delivered. His duty goes no further than to give intended purchaser notice of arrival. Famechon Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 45 I. C. C. 598, 600.

(d) The failure of a carrier to notify complainant of arrival of a shipment, consigned to itself in care of a warehouse company, in time to comply with tariff requirements necessary to secure the application of joint rates from origin to ultimate destination, resulted in the loss of that privilege. HELD: As complainant made arrangement with warehouse company for receipt and storage of the shipment, he recognized that company as his agent and delivery to complaint. Scattergood & Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 60 I. C. C. 155.

(b) Rail carriers may lawfully operate "off-track" stations, either through the instrumentality of transfer companies, or through their own employees, and may operate the same both as a convenience for shippers and as a means of securing traffic that otherwise might be lost to them. St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C. 453, 460.

(c) Among the various privileges included in rates are direct delivery from package boats to private docks, storage, reconsignment, and "split' deliveries of carload lots, which should be paid for; but there may be no justification for a horizontal increase on all commodities. Rates via Rail-and-Lake Routes, 37 I. C. C. 302, 312.

(d) Transportation has never been considered to include the use of a carrier's equipment and station property as a salesroom; and the mere toleration by the carriers through a period of years of such a use of their property affords no basis for a ruling that the practice has now grown into a shipper's right and a carrier's duty and is a transportation service. The Car Peddling Case, 45 I. C. C. 494, 500.

(e) The service of mines by a carrier under trackage agreements is, in practical and legal effect, the substantial equivalent of the extension of its rails to them. Ridge Coal Mining Co. v. M. P. R. R. Co., 62 I. C. C. 259, 261.

(b) The Statute of Alabama, declaring all persons afflicted with color blindness disqualified from serving on railroad lines within the State in certain capacities, and providing for an examination and imposing a fine for any railroad company to employ a person in any of such capacities who has not a certificate of fitness from the examiners, is not repugnant to the power vested in Congress to regulate commerce among the States, and does not violate the clause of the Fifth Amendment which declares that no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law. CASES 1887-1908

v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 8 I. C. C. 531.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Shippers should be allowed to handle their own freight to and from cars wherever practicable. Lighterage and Storage Regulations at New York, 35 I. C. C. 47, 60.

(c) Carriers are justified in requiring that shippers load and unload their freight to and from cars on car floats when ordered and placed at vessels or outside piers. The reason for such a rule as to carload freight on team tracks apply to make transfer with nearly equal force. The freight is switched between rails and car float in unbroken carloads, and is not ordinarily handled by the railway company's employees. Lighterage and Storage Regulations at New York, 35 I. C. C. 47, 62.

(d) The voluntary assumption by defendant of the obligation to perform the loading service in connection with nonperishable freight raises no presumption that its refusal to perform a similar service with respect to perishable freight is unreasonable. Swift & Co. v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., 44 I. C. C. 481, 486.

(e) Ever since the inception of railroad transportation shippers have, generally speaking loaded and their consignees have unloaded carload freight. This practice or custom arose naturally because it was the easiest, most economical and satisfactory way of doing business. It is practically out of the question for railroads to provide men to load and unload carload freight at all points in the country. The shipper can load more satisfactorily and economically than anyone else. He is able to possess himself of effective appliances, where they can be used, to employ skilled men to properly load all carload traffic whether shipped in closed or on open cars. For the same reasons consignees are the best fitted to unload shipments. For more than fifty years the loading by consignor and unloading by consignee has been a recognized rule of carload transportation, and this rule extends to and includes commodities which yield to carriers the largest part of their income. Quoting from opinion in National Lumber Dealer's Asso. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 154 Chicago Live Stock Exchange v. A. T. & S. F. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 209, 216.

(f) The soundness of the view that ordinarily it is the duty of the shipper to load and unload carload freight can not be questioned. Chicago Live Stock Exchange v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 52 I. C. C. 209, 216.

(q) The duty of unloading freight or of furnishing orders for other disposition thereof after notice of arrival rests primarily upon the consignee. Kidston & Co. v. D., L. & W. R. R. Co., 74 I. C. C. 135, 138.

(h) Tariff provided that carriers would load bulky freight. Shipments were made by complainants; and carriers, being unable to perform loading, permitted complainants to perform this service. Allegation that charges paid to persons hired to perform loading constitute overcharges, not sustained. No tariff provided allowance to complainants for performing loading service. Since nothing in excess of applicable rates was received by carriers, complainants were not overcharged. Ragone & Son v. Director General, as Agent, 80 I. C. C. 491.

III. OPERATION OF RAILROAD

§11½. In general.

(a) Unless the contrary is imposed as conditions in the grant of its charter, the right to construct and operate a railroad is a franchise in its nature exclusive, not held in common with the public, though the grant of the franchise is for the public use; and the tracks of a railroad are not a common highway upon which anyone can enter and use his own cars for transportation purposes against the objection of the company owning the tracks. Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 2 I. C. R. 792.

(b) Railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce shall, unless prevented by circumstances beyond their control, run their trains in a reasonable manner and as often as the ordinary business of commerce requires, but are entitled to determine how many and what cars and engines shall constitute their trains, and are not required to divide the train and run a less number of cars upon refusal of their employees to move the usual and customary trains. (a) The exhibition of the bill of lading at the time of the tender of the charges and demand of the goods is not a condition precedent to the recovery of a penalty under the statute for refusal to deliver the goods, although such penalty should be inflicted only for a willful disregard of the law. Dwyer v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 361.

(b) Where carload shipments of fruits and vegetables are made to a consignee in Chicago, who is the owner of the entire contents of the car, and where delivery is made upon the team tracks of the defendant carriers, defendants must furnish the necessary help to bring the packages making up said carloads to the car door and there make delivery to the consignee, and the rule of defendants requiring consignees to take these packages inside the car is unjust and unreasonable. Wholesale Fruit & Produce Ass'n v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 14 I. C. C. 410, 420.

(c) More or less contamination results where shipments of petroleum and its products are transported with miscellaneous freight, especially to food products. Despite precautions, leakage results and gives rise to damage claims to food and other commodities injured by odor or contamination. The Commission HELD, that reasonable regulations may be made by the carriers for the transportation of said commodity, including a reasonable limitation of the time when such shipments will be received. National Petroleum Ass'n v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 473, 476.

(d) Carriers have the right to transport certain commodities under reasonable rules and regulations respecting their receipt, carriage and delivery. National Petroleum Ass'n v. L. & N. R. R. Co. 15 I. C. C. 473, 476.

(e) The rule enforced by a carrier restricting the receipt and shipment of L. C. L. lots of coal oil and products of petroleum to one day in each week subjects shipper to unreasonable prejudice. Any rule which restricts such shipments to less than two days in any week is unreasonable, and the days selected should be separated by at least two intervening days. National Petroleum Ass'n v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 473, 477.

(f) Carriers have the right to make reasonable and appropriate rules respecting the acceptance and transportation of traffic. Longo Fruit Co. v. I. T. System, 38 I. C. C. 487, 489.

(g) Carriers may adapt their rates and practices to the needs of the localities and industries which they serve as to promote the welfare of shippers and carrier alike, where that can be done within the limits of reasonableness and without the undue prejudice and unjust discrimination which the law prohibits. National Livestock Shippers League v. A. T. & S. F. 63 I. C. C. 107, 117.

(h) If a shipper habitually delays cars for unloading at destination the carriers may place an embargo against freight consigned to him and thus prevent further detention of equipment if the shipper habitually delays loading cars the carrier may refuse further supply and thus prevent detention and accumulation of cars at the loading point. §13. Economy of management.

See Reasonableness of Rates §12.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) It is a false theory of transportation which seeks to force a shipper to avail himself of a less-than-carload service, which is more expensive for the purpose of increasing the gross revenues of the carrier. The true object should be to perform the service in the most economical manner and to charge for the service a reasonable compensation. Florida Fruit & Vegetable Ass'n v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 17 I. C. C. 552, 564.

(b) It is not apparent that the public should stand responsible for mistakes made in the management of railroads. In re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 267; Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange v. S. P. Co., 20 I. C. C. 106, 122.

(c) It is for the public interest that every transportation service should be performed by the most economical method since that must ultimately result in the lowest transportation charge. Albree v. B. & M. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 303 316.

§14. What are operating expenses.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Interest upon funded debt is a fixed charge in nature of operating expense. In re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 251.

(b) Permanent improvements are not part of the operating expenses. In re Advances in Rates—Eastern Case, 20 I. C. C. 243, 266.

See Origin of Traffic.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Carriers have right to hold traffic to their own lines so long, but only so long, as in so doing they do not encrouch upon the rights of the public. Aransas Pass Channel & Dock Co. v. G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 403, 414.

§16. Eminent Domain.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) While a local railroad company may lawfully exercise the right of eminent domain to enforce a junction or connection or a crossing of another railroad, such power must be reasonably exercised with due regard to existing conditions, and must select a point of connection or crossing with due and reasonable care. Such power and right are subject to judicial review, and the chancery court in this state has jurisdiction to decide all questions involved in the exercise of the right, except the amount of the damages, which is for the eminent domain court. TRANSPORTATION ACT

See Act to Regulate Commerce VI; Claims §1½; Statute of Limitations.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Though the Transportation Act, in the portion establishing the Labor Board, does not expressly mention receivers, its definition of carriers dealt with as including any carrier by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, with certain exceptions, is sufficiently broad to cover a receiver operating an interstate railroad. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., 271 Fed. 731.

TRAP CARS

See Demurrage §10; Ferry Car Charges.

(a) It is not to be inferred that a contract between a carrier and a shipper for a trap-car service is controlling in a consideration of what would be just and reasonable charges or rules governing the service. Trap or Ferry Car Service Charges, 34 I. C. C. 516, 526.

(b) The trap-car service has developed until the movement of less-than-car load shipments by this means is of great magnitude, and with respect to which commercial and transportation interests of country are vitally interested. Trap or Ferry Car Service Charges, 34 I. C. C., 516, 527.

(c) Trap-car service has come to be an organized and definite part of the railroad transportation system of the country. Station facilities have been located, built, and operated with a view to the maintenance of the service. With the same view industrial concerns and commercial houses have located factories and warehouses and have expended large sums of money. The service has measurably assisted industrial development generally. By cooperation carriers and shippers have made the trap car an efficient and important instrument for the expansion of both transportation and commercial business of the country. It is not desirable that anything should be done that will seriously impair its efficiency. Trap or Ferry Service Charges, 34 I. C. C. 516, 546.

(d) While conditions may properly warrant a reasonable difference in the charges dependent on the amount of the service rendered, there should be no difference with respect to what trap car service to which charges are applicable shall consist of. If a trap car is defined so as to include every movment from or to an industry sidetrack loaded with less than carload shipments in one schedule, and in another to include only cars that move between the industry and local freight or tansfer stations unjustifiable discriminations can but be the inevitable result. Trap or Ferry Service Charges, 34 I. C. C. 516, 546.

(e) A carrier performs trap-car service within its terminal. It consists largely of switching cars to and from industry sidetracks from and to freight or transfer stations located within the terminal district. Charges for terminal switch movements are generally made upon a per car basis, and they are usually made with some reference to the amount of the service. There does not seem to be any good reason why trap cars should be excepted from the general rule. If charges are made on a per car basis, they may be graded in accordance with the amount of service required and rendered and need not, therefore, be uniform at all points. Trap or Ferry Car Service Charges, 34 I. C. C. 516, 547.

(f) The statute casts the burden upon the carrier to show that proposed trap-car charges are just and reasonable. Trap or Ferry Car Service Charges, 34 I. C. C. 516, 548.

(g) The rule of the carriers apparently does not contemplate that trap-car charges shall wholly meet the cost of service, but charge is dependent upon revenue derived from line-haul service. Principle being the smaller the revenue from line-haul service the greater the trap-car charge. Macey Co. v. P. M. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 593, 598.

(h) The charge for switching trap cars should be commensurate with the service performed. Macey Co. v. Pere Marquette R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 593, 598.

TUNNEL CHARGES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Imperative need of the tunnel company for additional operating revenue, a terminal charge of 2 cents per 100 pounds to apply on interstate traffic between points beyond Chicago and industries and universal freight stations located on the C. W. & T. Co., granted. Chicago Warehouse & Terminal Co. Terminal Charges, 55 I. C. C. 363, 371.

(b) Authority to establish at Chicago, Ill., terminal charge of 2 cents per 100 pounds to apply on interstate l. c. l. traffic between points beyond Chicago and industries and universal freight stations located on the C. W. & T. Co., granted, Chicago Warehouse & Terminal Co. Terminal Charges, 55 I. C. C. 363, 371.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION.

See Interstate Commerce Commission §12; Jurisdiction of Commission.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A complainant alleged that the carriers' demand upon him for the payment of undercharges due at the legally published rate on a carload of peaches shipped from Ridge Springs, S. C., to Philadelphia, Pa., after he had sold the peaches on commission and remitted the proceeds to the consignor was discriminatory in favor of other commission merchants who received correct freight bills before remitting. HELD that the issue was neither within the jurisdiction of the Commission nor within the scope of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Complaint dismissed. Wilson v. Penn. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 571.

(b) On complaint seeking cancellation of unpaid charges accrued during Federal control and alleged to have been unreasonable, contention by complainant that its causes of action did not arise until after charges were actually paid and that therefore claim is not barred by section 206 (c) of transportation act, 1920, HELD, jurisdiction of commission under this section does not depend upon time when action accrued, but depends instead upon whether complaint covering claim was filed with commission within one year after termination of Federal control. Pacific Grain Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 679, 682.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Undercharges may be taken into account in settlement of charges in excess of the unlawful rates that were collected on certain shipments. McCaull-Dinsmore Co. v. M. P. Ry., 35 I. C. C. 69, 72.

(b) The obligation, under penalties of the law, is upon a carrier to collect its established charges from all by such lawful methods as may be suitable and necessary for the purpose. American Coal & Coke Co. v. M. C. R. R., 36 I. C. C. 195, 197.

(c) Where strawberries were consigned from Troy, Kans., to Boston, Mass., and due to an error of the agent of the express company consignee paid less than the legal rate between these two points, the express company was entitled to recover the balance of the legal rate between these two points. §3. Defenses.

See Courts §2.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where a carrier delivers an interstate shipment to the consignee without collecting the charges and later brings suit to recover the same according to the published schedule, nothing in the amendment of June 29, 1906, to the Act, providing that the carriers shall not collect a greater or less compensation from one shipper than from another, prevents the consignee from recouping in the suit for damages suffered by the goods in transit through the carrier's negligence. Battle v. Atkinson, 9 Ga. App. 488, 492, 71 S. E. 775.

(b) In an action by an interstate carrier of shipments of pieplant and peaches against the consignee to recover an undercharge on the lawful rates established pursuant to the Interstate Commerce Act, whether the consignee impliedly agreed to pay the lawful rate held a question of fact. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. York & Whitney Co., (Mass., 1918), 119 N. E. 855.

(c) Where carloads of fruit were shipped in interstate commerce to a commission merchant, which, as to some, told the terminal carrier that it was acting as a commission merchant, and was not the owner, and, as to others, made no such statement to the carrier, the carrier was not stopped as a matter of law to claim from the consignee undercharges, on the shipments as to which the consignee did not state it was owner, from the lawful rates established under the Interstate Commerce Act; it having misstated the rates. New York Cent. & Whitney Co., (Mass., 1918), 119 N. E. 855.

(d) Since the aim of the Interstate Commerce Act is to secure for each and every shipper engaged in interstate commerce absolute equality of reasonable rates, uniform in application, without discrimination or preference, the railroad and the shipper are bound inexorably to follow the rate published; no excuse which operates as an evasion of that rate has any standing as matter of law in defense of a proved violation of such rate, whether arising from mistake, inadvertence or honest agreement, and where the carrier has collected less than the published rate, it may bring an action to recover the balance due. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. Co. v. York & Whitney Co. (Mass., 1913), 102 N. E. 366, 368.

(e) In an action by a railroad company to recover a balance of the legal freight upon an interstate shipment from the consignee who had accepted the shipment, paid the amount of the freight erroneously understated in the bill of lading, and settled with the consignor upon that basis, the defense of estoppel is not available, for the consignee is conclusively presumed to have had knowledge of the published legal rate. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Greenberg, (Minn. 1918), 166 N. W. 1073.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In an action to recover the difference between the interstate through rate and the sum of the interstate and intrastate rates on lumber consigned to O., and reshipped on intrastate bills of lading to M., the court properly charged that the jury might consider demurrage charges and trackage charges paid at O., in determining the question whether there was an actual good-faith delivery to the consignees at O. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. R. v. Settle et al., 272 Fed. 675.

§4. Admissibility of tariff copies.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In an action in a state court by a carrier to recover the published rate, plaintiff offered copies of portions of the schedules filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission for the purpose of proving the lawful rate. The secretary of the commission, in addition to reciting his custody of the schedules and tariffs, stated that the copies had been compared by him with the originals in his custody and were correct transcript. HELD, the copies were properly admitted in evidence under a state statute governing the admission of certified copies. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Coolidge (Oreg., 1911), 116 P. 93, 94.

(b) The published classification and rates on file with a Railroad Commission are admissible in evidence as showing the classification and rate for a shipment in an action for an undercharge of freight. Emerson v. Central of Ga. Ry. Co., 72 So. R. (Ala. 1916) 120.

§5. Burden of proof.

See Evidence I.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Where a carrier sues to collect of a shipper charges based on an alleged agreement to pay the freight at the legal rate established in pursuance of the Interstate Commerce Act, and defendant denies both the agreement and the rate, it is incumbent on plaintiff to prove them. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Coolidge (Oreg. 1911), 116 P. 93, 94.

(b) In a suit by a carrier to collect its published interstate rate, an expert witness is properly refused permission to declare from the tariff sheets the legal rate in effect, such construction being for the court. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Coolidge (Oreg. 1911), 116 P. 93, 94.

(c) In a suit by a carrier to recover from a consignee the unpaid balance due for freight charges, where it is admitted that a schedule of rates has been duly filed with and approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the presumption, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, is that the rates were duly published, and not that the carrier has violated the provisions of the Elkins Act, subjecting him to severe fines and penalties for failure to publish the same. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. v. Wagner, (Kans. 1918), 172 Pac. 519.

(d) A carrier claiming remaining unpaid charges because of its agent's undercharge for a shipment has the burden of showing by a preponderance of evidence that the shipment was erroneously classified by its agent as was claimed by it. IV. LIABILITY TO PAY

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A consignee of interstate shipments who received the shipments and paid all charges claimed, which were less than the lawful rates established under the Interstate Commerce Act, as a matter of law assumed liability for the only lawful rate which it had a right to pay or the carrier a right to charge, and could not escape liability therefor through any contract with the carrier, and its liability was not a question of fact to be determined from circumstances tending to show an implied agreement. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. York & Whitney, 41 Sup. Ct. 509.

(b) Where the consignee of a shipment of coke, purchased f. o. b. at point of shipment and contracted to pay the freight, and the carrier delivered and collected from it the freight then considered due, though by error an undercharge, it elected to look to the consignee and cannot collect the deficiency from the consignor. §9. Pleading.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A shipper's charges against the railroad for lumber furnished for sideboards in transporting the shipment did not constitute a proper counterclaim in favor of the shipper, when sued for an unpaid balance of freight, because it was not specified in the schedule of rates which the railroad had filed. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. v. Cascade Contract Co. (Ore. 1921), 197 Pac. 1085.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Classification description of scrap iron did not cover rails of the character shipped by complainant, nor was any class or commodity rate applicable. It becomes necessary, therefore, to determine what would have been a reasonable charge for the service rendered. Cohen-Schwartz Rail & Steel Co. v. M. L. & T., 57 I. C. C. 479-480.

(b) If a transportation service has been rendered without tariff authority and the shipper paid a sum claimed by the carrier for that service, the Commission can, upon a proper record, determine a reasonable charge therefor and order refund of whatever the carrier has collected in excess of a reasonable charge. Wharton Steel Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 59 I. C. C. 11, 22.

(c) In the absence of specific ratings or rates on the article shipped it becomes necessary to determine whether or not the charges collected were reasonable. Refinite Co. v. Director General, 68 I. C. C. 545, 546.

(d) Complainant attacked rate charged for transporting over the Bangor & Aroostock Ry., from St. Leonard, New Brunswick, to Griswold, Me., three carloads of soft coal shipped during September, 1918, from St. John, New Brunswick to Griswold as unreasonable and without tariff authority. Shipments were routed by shipper via St. Leonard and the bridge. They moved over the C. P. from St. John to St. Leonard at a rate of $2.30 plus a switching charge of 20c for transfer from the rails of the C. P. to those of defendant. For the haul from St. Leonard to destination defendants sixth class rate of 19c was charged. The movement from St. Leonard to Griswold was entirely over the rails of defendant, but the transportation in this country commenced at the international boundary line between St. Leonard and Van Bureau, Me., in the St. John River, which separates those two localities and is crossed by an international bridge. The rate of the 19c from St. Leonard covers an unpublished charge paid by defendant for use of that bridge. No rates on soft coal to Griswold from either St. Leonard or Van Buren were in effect and the rate applied was that on cannel coal which is rated sixth class carloads. The route via Brownville Junction is said by defendant to constitute the proper and usual route of movement. The record shows that complainants made one shipment to Griswold, subsequent to those at issue, which was so routed and moved. No evidence was offered in support of the reasonableness of the rate charged. HELD, rate charged unreasonable to extent it exceeded 11c, reparation awarded. Stetson Cutler & Co. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 24.

(e) The Interstate Comerce Act, §6, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, §2 providing that the carrier shall not collect a greater or less or different compensation than the rates, freights, and charges which are specified in the tariff filed, does not forbid the collection of a rate not published in the filed tariffs for a service not mentioned therein. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. M. McGirr's Sons Co., 287 Fed. 334.

(f) In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. M. McGirr's Sons Co., 287 Fed. 334, the court said p. 338: "Section 6 does not forbid the collection of an unpublished rate. It provides that the common carrier shall not collect a greater or less or different compensation for such transportation of passengers or property or of any service in connection therewith than the rates, freights, and charges which are specified in the tariff filed. This relates to a common carrier and service in connection therewith. But it has no application to services rendered in advance of the carriage. In the absence of a published tariff rate the carrier can recover for services such as towage."

VENTILATION

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Rule 120, providing when shipments of vegetables or fruit, in stock or box cars, with side doors open, that transportation will be at owner's risk of loss or damage by heat or cold, not the result of carriers' negligence, should be eliminated. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 559, 561.

(b) Rule 75, providing for substitution of artificial heat for refrigeration, or vice versa, on shipments while in transit, should be revised to permit a change from service under ventilation to heater service, under reasonable restrictions. Charge in connection with such changes should not exceed $7.50 per car. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 562, 563.

(c) If shipper specifies service "under refrigeration," carrier must furnish refrigeration and fact that shipper may place ice in package is no reason why carrier should abate the charge, but if shipper specifies service under "standard" or other form of ventilation, carrier is under no obligation to furnish refrigeration and can not justly charge for what it is not required to do. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 575.

(d) Rule 230, governing opening of ventilators of cars under refrigeration, approved as modified. Perishable Freight Investigation, 56 I. C. C. 449, 580.

(a) The diminished opportunity to earn wages, induced by the same conditions which forced the railroad into the hands of a receiver, should be considered when deciding the question of reduction or maintenance of the old wage schedule. Ames Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(b) Receivers must give employes an opportunity to be heard before fixing wage schedules. Ames Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(c) Receivers in possession of a railroad will not be permitted to reduce the wages of employes without giving them notice and an opportunity to be heard, as required by the contract between the men and the company, although an opportunity is given to protest against the new schedules after they are prepared. Ames Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.) 4 I. C. R. 619.

(d) Wages of the employes of a railroad in the hands of a receiver will not be reduced below what is reasonable and just in order to pay dividends on stock for which practically no value was paid, and interest on bonds which represent profit in construction. Ames Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(e) Wage schedules are not within the class of executory contracts which receivers can renounce while relying on the power of the court to compel the employes to continue in service. Ames Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(f) The recommendation of the majority of the receivers of a railroad will not be accepted by the court as conclusive upon the question of wage schedules, when such majority is not composed of practical railroad men. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 619.

(g) Wage schedules recommended by receivers will not be adopted when the only practical railroad man among the receivers says they should not be put in force without modifications. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(ga) When the schedule of wages in force at the time a court assumes the management of a railroad is the result of mutual agreement between the company and its employes, which has been in force for years, the court will presume the schedule to be reasonable and just, and any one disputing that presumption must overthrow it by satisfactory proof. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.) 4 I. C. R. 619.

(gb) A contract to render personal service cannot be specifically enforced. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(gc) It is not unlawful for employes to associate, consult or confer together with a view to maintain or increase their wages by lawful and peaceful means. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(gd) A court will not approve the action of its receiver in reducing the wages of employes or discharging them in a body without giving them an opportunity to be heard. Ames v. Union Pacific Co., 4 I. C. R. 619.

(h) An order relative to wages of employes of a receiver should be for the benefit of all parties similarly situated, whether belonging to any of the labor organizations applying for it, or not. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 625.

(i) If employes of receivers do not receive enough compensation for the work they do they have the right to apply to the receivers or to the court to have their wages increased; and on a proper showing made, justice will be done. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.), 4 I. C. R. 625.

(j) The rate of wages to be paid to employes of receivers must be left mainly to the receivers to manage. Ames v. Union P. R. Co. (C. C. D. Neb.) 4 I. C. R. 625.

(k) Employes of a receiver of a railroad may be enjoined from disabling rolling stock or other property in the receiver's possession, from interfering with its possession or obstructing its management, and from using force, intimidation, threats, or other wrongful methods against the receiver, his agents, or employes, or persons seeking employment. Arthur v. Oaks, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(l) Illegal combinations are not sanctioned in any degree by the Act of Congress of June 29, 1886 legalizing the incorporation of national trades unions. Arthur v. Oakes, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(m) Trade unions are not prohibited in injunction against illegal combinations of working men. Arthur v. Oakes 4 I. C. R. 744.

(n) Employes of the receiver of a railroad may be enjoined from combining and conspiring to quit his service with the object and intent of crippling the property in his custody, or embarrassing the operation of the railroad. Arthur v. Oakes, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(o) A strike is not unlawful if it is merely a combination among employes having for its object their orderly withdrawal in large numbers or in a body from their employer's service, to accomplish some lawful purpose. Arthur v. Oakes, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(p) Injunction is a proper remedy to restrain threatened acts of employes of a railroad receiver which would inflict irreparable loss upon the property, and seriously prejudice the interests of the public involved in the regular continuous operation of the road. Arthur v. Oakes, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(q) Employes of the receiver of a railroad may lawfully confer together upon the subject of a proposed reduction of wages, and, if not restrained by their contract, may withdraw in a body from the receiver's service because of such reduction, although they expect that such action will inconvenience the receiver and the public. Arthur v. Oakes I. C. C. App. 7th C.), 4 I. C. R. 744.

(r) Equity will enjoin any combination or conspiracy among the employes of the receiver of a railroad which has for its object and intent the physical injury of the property in the receiver's possession, or actual interference with the regular continuous operation by him of the railroad. Arthur v. Oakes, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(s) Equity will not enjoin employes of a receiver of a railroad from quitting his service, although the effect of such action will be to cripple the property, or prevent or hinder the operation of the road. Arthur v. Oakes, 4 I. C. R. 744.

(t) While every man has ordinarily the legal right to stop work and quit his employment whenever he chooses to do so, in the absence of a contract obliging him to continue for a definite time, no man has a legal or moral right while continuing in the employment of another to refuse to do the work he is employed and engaged to do. Re charge to Grand Jury, 4 I. C. R. 777.

(u) Employees of a railroad company assume upon entering the service an implied obligation to perform their duties in such a manner as will enable it to discharge its obligations to the public faithfully, and protect it against irreparable losses, injuries, and excessive damages by any acts of omission on their part. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. (C. C. N. D. Ohio), 5 I. C. R. 545.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Carriers under federal control must be treated as a single line. Portsmouth Asso. of Commerce v. S. A. L. Ry., 55 I. C. C. 377, 387.

(b) The Commission must take into consideration the finding and certificate of the President and is bound to give due consideration to the fact that the transportation systems are being operated under a unified and coordinated national control and not in competition. National Council, Farmers' Asso. v. Director General, 56 I. C. C. 339, 409.

(c) The primary purpose of congress was to return the roads to private ownership surrounded by such safeguards as would assure the people of the whole country adequate service, and to rehabilitate the railroads so that they might perform the duties necessary to the very life of the nation. Rates, Fares and Charges of N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 59 I. C. C. 290, 363.

(d) The power of the Commission under the federal control act to make a finding for the future ceased with the termination of federal control. Chero-Cola Bottlings Co. v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 547.

(e) Contentions that act of August 29, 1916, under which the President took possession and control of railroads, did not confer upon him power to initiate or change rates; that he in turn could not invest director general with such power; that, therefore, any attempted increases in rates prior to Presidential proclamation of March 29, 1918, on lines under Federal control prior to Federal control act were void; and that, even if director general himself had rate-making power, his employees or agents engaged in preparation of tariffs could not promulgate legal increases without authority was given, not sustained. Van Dusen Harrington Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 78 I. C. C. 729, 730.

(f) Carriers while under Federal control remained subject to Federal laws, including the interstate commerce act, in so far as those laws were not inconsistent with provisions of the Federal control act or with orders of the President made thereunder. Acme Cement Plaster Co. v. Director General, as Agent 81 I. C. C. 298, 301.

(g) Under section 10 of Federal control act the President, who acted through the director general, had right to initiate rates by filing them with commission. Acme Cement Plaster Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 81 I. C. C. 298, 301.

(h) The Director General was authorized by the act of Congress and proclamation of the President to promulgate general and special orders for the control and management of the railroads, which have the force and effect of law and are of paramount authority. Compagnie Auxiliare v. D. L. & W. R. Co., 87 I. C. C. 443, 446.

(i) The war powers of the United States, which are not limited by any rules of law, are similar to the police power raised to the highest degree to preserve the nation, and when requisite to this end the liberty of the citizen and the protection of private property, the peace-time rights of the states, must yield to the necessity. Public Service Comm., Second Dist. v. New York Cent. R. Co. (N. Y. 1920), 129 N. E. 455.

(j) The Federal Control Act was a proper exercise of the war powers of the United States, and as incident to the control of the railroads the question of fares intra- as well as inter-state was lodged exclusively in the President, but such control merely suspended the rights of the owners and the authority of the states over intrastate rates and traffic. Public Service Comm., Second Dist. v. New York Cent. R. Co. (N. Y. 1920) 129 N. E. 455.

(k) The Act of March 21, 1918, providing for federal control of railroads during the war and authorizing the President to make regulations, therefor, assuming that it authorizes the fixing of such regulations of the venue of actions in federal courts against railroad companies, is within the war powers of Congress, and constitutional. Wainwright v. Pennsylvania R. R., 253 Fed. 459.

WAR POWER

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The country does not cease to be a constitutional government because engaged in war, and the rights of the citizens are to be determined by the courts, and not by military tribunals, so long as the courts can function. Rose Mfg. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Tex. 1923.) 251 S. W. 337.

(b) Martial law can only exist, and military power can only be exercised over the property of the citizens, when the civil arm of the government is powerless because of invasion, insurrection, or anarchy, and when the necessity ceases the military power must end. Rose Mfg. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Texas 1923) 251 S. W. 337.

WAR TAXES

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) War tax, or any part thereof, can not lawfully be considered a part of the damage for which the Commission may award reparation. Zelnicker Supply Co. v. S. Ry. Co. 53 I. C. C. 308, 309.

WAREHOUSING

See Facilities and Privileges §16½ Storage.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The function of a carrier is to receive, transport and deliver. As a rule, it can only be forced into the position of warehousemen through lack of diligence on the part of the consignee in the removal of his property. With no general duty to act as a warehouseman for indefinite periods in connection with its primary obligation as a common carrier, it can not assume to provide shippers with valuable warehouse facilities which are not essential to its business as a carrier, without furnishing them for all shippers at all times and upon the same terms and notifying the public thereof in the manner provided by law. American Warehousemens Asso. v. I. C. R. Co., 7 I. C. C. 556, 589.

(aa) When goods have been so placed in the warehouse of the carrier at point of destination as to be reasonably accessible to consignee, open to his inspection and permitting of safe and convenient removal by consignee, common carrier liability ceases, and responsibility thereafter is that of a warehouseman only. However, goods are not considered as being ready for delivery if they are so placed as not to be obtainable by consignee, or if they are so mingled with or covered by other goods that consignee cannot inspect or remove them without himself undertaking their selection and separation from the heap. Phila. Team Owners' Pro. Assn. v. Ry. Co., 32 I. C. C. 387, 391.

(b) A warehouseman, as such, has no special rights under the Act. But when a warehouseman acts as a consignee or consignor he becomes a shipper and has all the rights of a shipper under the Act. He stands, in fact, in the shoes of a shipper and may make any complaint either of rates or practices that his principal, the real shipper, might himself make. St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C. 453, 460.

(c) As a consignor or consignee of merchandise committed to his custody for forwarding or for storage, a warehouseman is a shipper, and in that capacity may bring any grievance to the attention of the Commission that grows out of the rates and practices of the carriers. St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C. 453, 462.

(d) The advantage enjoyed, in their private capacity, by warehousemen conducting off-track stations for carriers, is incidental and not undue. St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C. 453, 462.

(e) The opportunity to use the warehouse above an off-track station being open alike to all carload shippers, while the use thereof is attended by pecuniary advantages which the exigencies of business will not permit all shippers to enjoy, is not undue. St. Louis Terminal Case, 34 I. C. C. 453, 463.

(f) A consignee of freight has no legal right to use a car as a warehouse or storage plant. Milwaukee Produce & Fruit Exchange v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co. 35 I. C. C. 33, 35.

(g) A warehouse owner, a landlord seeking to rent his property as such, has no relation with a common carrier which could result in a discrimination against him in violation of the Act to regulate commerce. Pittwood v. N. P. Ry., 51 I. C. C. 535.

(h) A warehouse owner is not entitled to recover damages for depreciation in the rental value of his property as a result of leases by a railroad company of similar properties at nominal rentals to shippers. Pittwood v. N. P. Ry., 51 I. C. C. 535.

(i) The case of the Southern Ry. v. Prescott, 240 U. S. 632 involved the liability of the carrier of an interstate shipment as warehouseman of the goods after their arrival at destination. One of the stipulations of the bill of lading substantially the same as that which we are here considering, was that "property not removed by the party entitled to receive it within 48 hours (exclusive of legal holidays) after notice of arrival" might be kept in car, depot, or warehouse, "subject to reasonable charge for storage and carrier's liability as warehouseman only." After arrival of the goods the consignee paid the entire freight charges and took away 4 of the 13 packages constituting the shipment. The company's agent consented that 9 packages might remain to meet the consignee's convenience in removal. Before they were called for the carrier's warehouse with its contents, including the 9 undelivered packages, was destroyed by fire. The Supreme Court held that "transportation" as defined in the Act includes the service of the carrier as warehouseman and that the retention of the part of the shipment in question was a terminal service forming part of the transportation service in the sense of and governed by, the Act to regulate commerce and that the carrier was liable for negligence only. Bills of Lading, 52 I. C. C. 671, 700.

(j) After a shipment has reached destination and a reasonable opportunity has been afforded to remove it, the duty of the carrier is fully performed. Horton v. Tonopah & Goldfield R. Co., 225 Fed. 406, 410.

(k) From provisions of the Hepburn Act it is evident that Congress recognized that the duty of carriers to the public included the performance of a variety of services that, according to the theory of the common law, were separable from the carrier's service as carrier, and, in order to prevent overcharges and discriminations from being made under the pretext of performing such additional services, it enacted that, so far as interstate carriers by rail were concerned, the entire body of such services should be included together under the single term "transportation," and subjected to the provisions of the act respecting reasonable rates and the like. The recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission for the adoption of the uniform bill of lading was of course made in view of this legislation, and while not intended to be and not in law binding upon the carriers it is entitled to some weight. It recognizes—whether correctly or not is a question not now presented—the right of the carrier to make a charge, the amount of which has not been definitely fixed in advance, for storage as warehouseman in addition to the charge for transportation; but at the same time it recognizes that a valuation lower than the actual value may be agreed upon between the shipper and the carrier, or determined by the classification or tariffs upon which the rate is based and it is a necessary corollary that what should be a reasonable charge for storage would be determined in the light of all the circumstances, including the valuation placed upon the goods. We conclude that, under the provisions of the Hepburn act and the terms of the bill of lading, the valuation placed upon the property here in question must be held to apply to defendant's responsibility as warehouseman. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Dettlebach, 36 Sup. Ct. 177, 180; 239 U. S. 588, 60 L. ed. 453.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION.

See Control and Regulation.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Act does not apply to railroad wholly within State, joining with connecting steamers in independent although concurrent reduction of rates, unless goods are going to or from a foreign country. Ex parte Koehler (U. S. C. Ct. Or.) 1 I. C. R. 28.

(b) A State may regulate the charges of public warehouses. Cited in Dis. Op. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. People (U. S. Sup. Ct.) 1 I. C. R. 44.

(c) The control of navigable waters constituting channels of communication between States and foreign countries is within commercial power of Congress. Cited in Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania (U. S. Sup. Ct.) 1 I. C. R. 388; S. P. cited in Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (U. S. Sup. Ct.) 1 I. C. R. 840.

(d) The power to regulate commerce among the several States comprehends the power to regulate the navigable waters of the United States on which such commerce may be or is carried; and to this end Congress may make any regulation concerning such navigation, in cluding the vessels engaged therein, as may be necessary and proper to secure and maintain the safety and convenience of the waterway; which regulations are so far applicable to vessels engaged only in intrastate commerce thereon as to those engaged in interstate commerce. The City of Salem. 2 I. C. R. 418.

(e) The regulation contained in U. S. Rev. Stat. §4465, forbidding a steamboat to carry more passengers than allowed in her certificate of inspection, applies to such boats engaged in carrying passengers on a navigable water of the United States, between ports of the same State only. The City of Salem (D. C. D. Or.) 2 I. C. R. 418.

(f) A statute forbidding common carriers within the state, on land or in boats or vessels on the waters entirely within the body of the state, to limit or restrict their liability as it exists at common law, applies to shipments purely domestic beginning and ending in the state. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Sherwood Thompson & Co. 4 I. C. R. 240.

(g) Section 3 of the Act of Congress of February 13, 1893, which provides that if the owner of any vessel transporting merchandise or property to or from any port of the United States shall exercise due diligence to make the vessel in all respects seaworthy, and properly manned, equipped, and supplied neither vessel, owner, agent, nor charterer shall be held responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults in navigation, errors in management, or dangers of the sea,—applies to shipments on the Great Lakes, notwithstanding §§1, 2 and 4 of the Act relate to shipments between the United States and foreign countires. The E. A. Shores, Jr. 7 I. C. C. App. LXVII.

(h) A water carrier would not be subject to the Act and would rest under no obligation to publish or observe its tariff rates, whether its transportation were state or interstate, until it entered into some arrangement with a rail carrier for the interstate transportation of passengers or property. By that act, however, it would become subject to the jurisdiction of the Act and would make itself liable for the posting and observing of the schedules under which that transportation was conducted. Enterprise Transportation Company v. Pennsylvania R. R. 12 I. C. C. 326, 335.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(i) The rule has been well stated as follows: Interstate commerce wholly by water not subject; partly by water and partly by railroad, under a common control, management or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment, is subject to the Act. In re Jurisdiction Over Water Carriers, 15 I. C. C. 205, 207.

(j) Water lines on great lakes required to transport dairy products and furnish reasonable equipment therefor, including refrigeration; refusal to do so held to constitute an undue prejudice to such traffic. Lake-and-rail Butter and Egg Rates, 29 I. C. C. 45, 51.

(k) It would be improper for the Commission to approve an arrangement whereby a steamboat company might operate its line during the busy season only, while leaving the service in the period of unremunerative operation for its competitor to perform. Gulf Atl. S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R. 46 I. C. C. 309, 312.

(l) Water carriers of both passenger and freight are included in the Act. Colonial Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. 50 I. C. C. 625, 628.

(m) Section 1 of the Interstate Act specifies: "that the provisions of this Act shall apply ..... to any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad (or partly by railroad and partly by water when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment) from one state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, to any other state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or from one place in a territory to another place in the same territory, or from any place in the United States to an adjacent foreign country, etc." By section 5 of the Act, where the Commission has found that the operation by railroad, or other common carrier subject to the Act, of any carrier by water not operating through the Panama Canal, as in the public interest and may be extended or continued beyond July 1, 1914, it is provided that: "In every case of such extension the rates, schedules, and practices of such water carrier shall be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and shall be subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce and all amendments thereto in the same manner and to the same extent as is the railroad or other common carrier controlling such water carrier or interested in any manner in its operation." By section 6 of the Act it is further provided that: "When property may be or is transported from point to point in the United States by rail and water through the Panama Canal or otherwise, the transportation being by a common carrier or carriers, and not entirely within the limits of a single state, the Interstate Commerce Commission shall have jurisdiction of such transportation and of the carriers, both by rail and by water, which may or do engage in the same, in the following particulars, in addition to the jurisdiction given by the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended June eighteenth, nineteen hundred and ten: ..... (b) To establish through routes and maximum joint rates between and over such rail and water lines...." These provisions of the Act clearly bring water carriers within its operation and control when, and if, they participate in arrangements for continuous shipment and carriage. Bills of Lading, 52 I. C. C. 671, 724.

(n) Carriers by water that are subject to the Act, or that are willing to subject themselves to the Act, by participating in the transportation of interstate traffic under arrangements with a railroad for through and continuous carriage and shipment of goods, must accept and be bound by the provisions of the Act, including the provisions of the Cummins amendment, in respect to liabilities of carriers. Bills of Lading 52 I. C. C. 671, 725.

(o) The rates and practices of a water carrier are subject to the provisions of the act in the same manner and to the same extent as are those of the railroad controlling it. Rail-and-Water Rates from Atlantic Seaboard, 63 I. C. C. 267, 275.

(p) But the act does not confer upon the Commission the power to prescribe minimum rates over a through route where one of the carriers is a water line. Rail-and-Water Rates from Atlantic Seaboard, 63 I. C. C. 267, 275.

(q) The extension of credit on freight moving partly by water and partly by railroad when both are under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment, and when delivery or relinquishment of possession of the freight at destination is effected by or through the water line, found to be a practice subject to the provisions of section 1, paragraph (6); section 2; section 3, paragraph (1); and section 15, paragraph (1) of the act. Regulations for Payment of Rates and Charges, 63 I. C. C. 375, 377.

(r) A natural waterway, improved by the expenditure of public funds, should be thrown open as far as possible to the free and unrestricted use of all those who desire to avail themselves of it. It differs materially from a privately constructed and privately owned roadbed, which, though quasi-public in nature, is built by individuals or corporate interests primarily for their own gain. A navigable river is a public highway, a natural avenue of commerce and the public interests demand that its advantages be utilized to the fullest extent. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 317, 353.

(s) The usefulness of water routes to interior points ought not to be dependent upon the extent to which rail lines are consolidated, and Congress has wisely recognized this in the law. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317, 355.

(t) Contention that independent steamship lines can not survive in competition with a steamship line "subsidized" by an industry. HELD: Whether or not an industry should be permitted to operate a steamship line is a question of public policy to be determined by the lawmaking body. Application of

United States Steel Products Co., 77 I. C. C. 685, 687, 688.

(u) Section 28 of the merchant marine act, 1920, provides a method by which the Commission, may, as to the rates, fares and charges of common carriers for the transportation of persons or property subject to the act, suspend the prohibition of application of lower charges than for similar transportation wholly within the United States, when the charge is based in whole or in part on the fact that the person or property affected thereby is to be transported to, or has been transported from, any port in a possession or dependency of the United States, or in a foreign country, by a carrier by water in foreign commerce, unless the transporting vessel is, or was at the time of such transportation by water documented under the laws of the United States. The section provides that the commission may suspend the provisions of the section for such length of time and under such terms and conditions as it may prescribe upon certificates from the United States Shipping Board that adequate shipping facilities in vessels documented under the laws of the United States are available. The section also provides that such suspension of operation of its provisions may be terminated by order of the Commission whenever the Shipping Board is of the opinion that adequate shipping facilities by such vessels to the ports designated in the section are afforded and shall so certify to the Commission. Upon appropriate certification of the Shipping Board, by order of the Commission June 14, 1920, supplemented July 27, 1920, and Dec. 11, 1920, the Commission suspended the provisions of said section 28 until further order. By third supplemental order entered Feb. 7, 1921, the Commission prescribed certain conditions as supplemental to the orders of suspension, with respect to the application of rate for the transportation of export and import shipments in transit to or from the ports of export or import at the time the provisions of section 28 might become effective. Upon consideration of the certification of the Shipping Board dated March 1, 1924, the Commission, by supplemental order of March 11, 1924, prescribed, in effect, that its suspension order of June 14, 1920, as modified, was thereby terminated, effective May 20, 1924, as to the transportation of export and import traffic, and ordered that tariffs, published, and filed with the Commission by common carriers subject to the act, as a result of such order, should be so published and filed upon not less than 15 days notice to the Commission and the general public. HELD, section 28 does not confer upon the Commission any power to review the certificates made to it by the board, or to determine the facts as to adequacy of shipping facilities independently, or otherwise than as certified to it by the board. Further HELD, the present effective date of the order of March 11, 1924, should be extended from the present date, May 20, to June 20, 1924, Section 28 of Merchant Marine Act, 88 I. C. C. 646.

(v) There is no congressional enactment applicable to the conditional sales of vessels. Rivara v. James Stewart & Co., 195 N. Y. S. 841.

(w) Transportation by ocean carriers between the United States and nonadjacent foreign countires is not included in or affected by the Act to Regulate Commerce and the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the classification and schedule of rates and charges pursuant to the act, cannot extend to carriers engaged in that transportation. Burke v. Union. Pac. R. R. Co. (N. Y. 1919) 124 N. E. 119.

§2. Jurisdiction of Commission.

See Interstate Commerce Commission I; Jurisdiction of Commission.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Interstate Commerce Commission cannot compel a rail carrier to receive freight from or deliver it to a steamboat line with which it has refused to make a through rate and to do through billing, upon the prepayment of charges for an estimated proportion of a through rate equal in amount to that which the rail carrier receives from another steamboat line with which it has an arrangement for through rates and through billing. Capehart v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 278.

(b) The defendants, the Clyde Steamship Company, the New York & Texas Steamship Company, and the Florida Central & Peninsular Railroad Company are common carriers engaged in interstate commerce by arrangement as alleged in the complaint, and as such are subject to the jurisdiction of this Commission in respect thereto. Railroad Comm. of Fla. v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 688.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) The Commission has no direct authority to require the issuing of through export bills of lading, since it has no jurisdiction over the water carriers. Galveston Commercial Assn. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 216, 225.

(d) While the Commission has no direct authority to require the issuing of through export bills of lading, this does not mean that the Commission may not act upon the rail carrier which is subject to its jurisdiction in a proper case where the ocean carrier stands ready to enter into these through arrangements upon reasonable terms. Galveston Commercial Assn. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 25 I. C. C. 216, 226.

(e) Under section 15, coupled with section 6 as amended by the Panama Canal Act, the Commission is authorized to prescribe through routes and joint rates with water lines. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C. 384, 387.

(f) The Commission has power under section 15 to require rail carriers to join water carriers in establishing through routes and joint rates. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 33 I. C. C. 384, 392.

(g) But the Commission has no power to require establishment of a through route between railroad-owned lakes lines and barge lines operating on the Erie Canal. Lake Line Applications Under Panama Canal Act, 33 I. C. C. 699, 716.

(h) Port-to-port rates are not within the jurisdiction of Commission. Fish from Virginia, 42 I. C. C. 415.

(i) The Commission is without jurisdiction to determine whether boat lines or rail lines should bear cost of printing and publishing joint rail-and-lake rates. Lake and Rail Rate Cancellations (No. 2), 42 I. C. C. 513, 522.

(j) The Commission has never exercised jurisdiction over the individuals or companies performing the intermediate services on lake cargo coal between the lower and upper lake ports, for interior points. Lake Cargo Coal Rates, 46 I. C. C. 159, 185

(k) Under section 15 the Commission already possessed the power to establish through routes and joint rates between rail and water carriers. Unless paragraph (b), added somthing to existing jurisdiction it would seem superfluous. That it did add something seems clear from the statement that the powers enumerated are "in addition to the jurisdiction given by the Act to regulate commerce." The congress was here dealing specifically with rail and water carriers and must be presumed to have expressed its intent. It gave no indication of intent to limit the Commission power to instances where the rail carriers would not be short hauled. This interpretation best comports with the manifest intent to encourage transportation by water, and under any other construction a port could be closed to through transportation by water and rail because it was not the terminus of the rail carrier. Baltimore & Carolina S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 176, 183.

(l) The limitation in section 15 refers specifically to railroads and apparently was intended to insure to the originating rail line as large a share as possible of the movement of freight by rail. That the limitation should be projected into section 6 so as to force a shipper to move his property by rail when he wishes to send it a portion of the way by water is utterly inconsistent with the policy of the Congress manifested in the passage of the Panama Canal Act, the Federal Shipping Act, and the Improvement of Rivers and Harbors. Baltimore & Carolina S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 176, 184.

(m) It was argued that because of the passage in paragraph (a) which refers to "the dock of the water carrier" the Commission's jurisdiction was limited to instances where the water carrier has a dock, and that, where a steamship company had no dock the Commission was without power in the premises. The argument was not persuasive. The lettered paragraphs are coordinate and deal with different matters. They relate back to the general grant of additonal powers and do not modify one another. Where the rail carriers have docks and physical connection therewith it would clearly be a wasteful requirement to insist that the water carrier secure a dock and that the rail carriers then extend spurs to that dock. We can not impute such an intent to the Congress. Where either the rail or water carrier has suitable dock facilities the ownership or control by the one or the other is immaterial, at least in so far as the exercise of power under paragraphs (b) or (c) is concerned, and except as bearing upon the reasonable compensation for the use of such facilities. Baltimore & Carolina S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 176, 184.

(n) Manifestly the purpose of the new legislation was to cover the entire subject of the regulation and control of interstate transportation over a rail line and a water carrier, at least as to their traffic, and to confer upon the Commission jurisdiction of such transportation without limitation, except as prescribed in the Act itself. With the authority to establish through routes and joint rates is given authority to determine all the terms and conditions under which the rail-and-water lines shall be operated, to establish proportional rates by rail to and from the ports, and to determine what traffic may move thereunder. Colonial Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 625, 629.

(o) The Commission has jurisdiction of carriers both by rail and by water; is empowered to establish through routes and joint rates between and over rail-and-water lines, and is authorized to determine all the terms and conditions under which such lines shall be operated Colonial Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 625, 631.

(p) The question whether or not a railroad company can be guilty of discrimination when the preferential treatment which produces the discrimination is accorded a steamship company which is owns by stock control, must be answered in the affirmative and the idea that jurisdiction of the Commission is defeated by reason of such common ownership must be untenable. Colonial Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., 50 I. C. 625, 633.

(q) Boat lines which bring logs to the ports are not subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce and have no tariffs on file with the Commission, and rates shown from the ports are not, properly speaking, proportional rates Pacific Lumber Co. v. N. W. P. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 738, 746.

(r) The movement from the Lake Erie ports to the western docks constitutes a new and independent transaction under an agreement or arrangement between the owner of the coal and the owner of the vessel. It is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission and the rates are not filed with the Commission. Coal Rates to the northwest, 53 I. C. C. 590, 592.

(s) In paragraph 3 of section 15 it is definitely provided that the Commission shall not have the right to establish any route, classification, or practice or any rate, fare or charge when the transportation is wholly by water, and any transportation by water affected by this act shall be subject to the laws and regulations applicable to transportation by water. Corona Coal Co. v. Secretary of War, 69 I. C. C. 389, 391.

(t) The jurisdiction of the Commission does not extend to the local port to port rates of water carriers. Corona Coal Co. v. Secretary of War, 69 I. C. C. 389, 391.

(ta) Port-to-port rates of the Warrior River Barge Line on bunker coal from Black Warrior River mines in Alabama to Mobile, Ala., and to New Orleans, La., found not within the commission's jurisdiction. Corona Coal Co. v. Secretary of War, 69 I. C. C. 389, 391.

(u) The Commission has the power to require the establishment of through routes where one of the carriers is a water line even though the rail line would thereby be shorthauled. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 317, 328.

(v) Provisions of section 15, paragraph (3), of the act, restricting commission's regulatory power over rates of water lines, is inapplicable to water lines owned, controlled, or operated by rail lines, which by section 5, paragraph (11) of the act, have same status as the controlling railroad. That commission has not the same power to fix minimum rates over such water carrier as though it were an all rail line was decided in Rail-and-Water Rates from Atlantic Seaboard 63 I. C. C. 267. Reduced Rates from New York Piers, 81 I. C. C. 312, 330.

(w) A rate applies only as a local or proportional rate for the transportation wholly by water. Such rates, are not within the jurisdiction of the Commission. Roasted coffee from Atlantic seaboard, 83 I. C. C. 131, 134.

(x) Section 15 (3) of the act authorizes commission to establish through routes and joint rates applicable to transportation of property where one of the carriers is a water line. However, by that same section and paragraph it is provided that commission shall not "have right to establish any route, classification, or practice, or any rate, fare, or charge when transportation is wholly by water." Boston Wool Trade Asso. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C., 445, 449.

(y) Nothing in amendments to the act warrants different conclusion from that expressed in rule 71 of Tariff Circular 18-A, wherein commission said "Ocean carriers between ports of United States and foreign countries not adjacent are not subject to terms of the act; nor to commission's jurisdiction." Boston Wool Trade Asso. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C. 445, 448, 450.

(z) Water carriers on the Great Lakes were engaged in carrying goods from one port to another in the same state, from a port in one state to ports in another state, and also from ports in one state to destinations in another state in connection with rail carriers. They were also interested in operating amusement parks. HELD, the Interstate Commerce Commission had power under section 20 of the Act as amended to order a universal system of bookkeeping and accounting and to require reports on all the business of defendants, whether interstate or intrastate, since the intrastate business was so inextricably bound up with the interstate business that to limit the provisions of the Act to interstate business would defeat the purpose sought to be accomplished by reports and accounting systems. I. C. C. v. Goodrich Co., 224 U. S. 194, 213, 32 Sup. Ct. 436, 56 L. ed. 729.

II. DISCRIMINATION AND REASONABLENESS.

See Intra VI Discrimination; Reasonableness of Rates.

§3. In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Carriers of interstate traffic are not obliged to pay charges of steamboat lines when no agreement for a through rate exists. In the Matter of the Application of F. W. Clark, 2 I. C. R. 796.

(b) A carrier by rail has no better transportation rights than a water carrier. Both are lawful and necessary instrumentalities of commerce. Both are indispensable and the rail carrier must compete fairly, and is not at liberty to resort to unlawful methods to divert traffic from a water carrier. Lehmann Higginson & Co. v. S. P. Co., 3 I. C. C. 80, 90.

(c) A common carrier has not the right to make a discrimination where the conditions are equal, between two steamboats in delivering freight to them, on the ground that the greater charge is not unreasonable. Samuels v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 420.

(d) A charter provision of a railroad, granting the power to take "tolls from all persons, property, merchandise, and other commodities transported on their road, provided only the net profits of the road shall never exceed 25 per cent per annum," does not give the company the right to discriminate between connecting steamboats in the matter of freights. Samuels v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ala.), 4 I. C. R. 420.

(e) The requirement of the agreement of a railway and steamship association, that its members apply "full local rates upon all traffic subject to the association agreement coming from or going to" connecting lines which do not maintain association rates, while to traffic from other connecting lines conforming to such rates full local rates are not applied, is repugnant to that clause of the Act to Regulate Commerce, §3, which forbids carriers to "discriminate in their rates and charges between connecting lines." Cincinnati Freight Bureau v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 592.

(f) A railroad company operating steamers in connection with its railroad as a single line is not guilty of a discrimination against another carrier, within the prohibition of the Interstate Commerce Act, by refusing to allow a rival steamboat company to land its boats at a wharf used by it solely for connecting its railroad and boats, where there is no regular public station at such wharf, but the general station is at a little distance and ample facilities there exist. Ilwaco R. Nav. Co. v. Oregon S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (C. C. App. 9th C.), 5 I. C. R. 627.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(g) A rail carrier may control or connect with a line of steamships engaged in foreign commerce, with which it may interchange business as freely as with another rail carrier, and it may quote a combined rate for the through movement, the agent of the railroad company acting as the agent of the steamship company in so doing. An inland carrier may go into the foreign shipping business without contravening any provision of the Act; nor is there anything in such statute which denies to a rail carrier the right to quote a rate from an inland point to a foreign destination over its own through route or by any other route. But as to such carriers engaged in foreign business, the rail carrier has, so far as this law is concerned, a purely contractural or proprietary relation, not a relation related or controlled in any manner by this Act. On foreign commerce the rate to be published with the Commission should be the rate to the port and from the port—an open rate, which any one who desire to do so may use with equal advantage. The publication of such rate does not in any manner limit the very valuable privilege of through billing. Such through billing should clearly separate the liability of the rail and the ocean carrier and show the published rate of the inland carrier. The routing of the freight, however, should remain with the shipper, and upon him may be imposed no greater charge to the port when his freight goes by one ocean line than by another. Cosmopolitan Shipping Co. v. Hamburg-American Packet Co., 13 I. C. C. 266, 281.

(h) The Commission does not favor the existence of lower rates at ports put into effect by rail carriers to meet water competition. Darling & Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 79, 87.

(i) A boat line incorporated as a common carrier obtained its facilities from a salt company by which it is owned and in whose interest it is operated; it published no rates except upon salt in cargo lots; its rates were manipulated for the benefit of the salt company, and it used as terminal facilities the docks and warehouses of the salt company by whose agents and employees all shipments had to be handled. HELD, that the boat line is a mere device to defraud the law, and payments made to it by connecting rail carriers in the guise of divisions are rebates. Colonial Salt Co. v. M. I. & I. Line, 23 I. C. C. 358.

(j) A shipper of salt does not have to deliver his shipments to a boat line controlled by a competitor, and such boat line, although it publishes rates on salt in cargo lots, cannot be considered a common carrier, but a private facility of the salt company by which it is owned. Colonial Salt Co. v. M. I. & I. Line, 23 I. C. C. 358, 366.

(k) A railroad may not have a preferred line of steamships to the exclusion of other ships. But a railroad has the right to reserve wharves for its own use and for the use of such water carriers as it prefers, provided it affords to the public access to equal facilities elsewhere at equal rates. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 417, 424.

(l) A railroad line has the right to reserve for certain boat lines certain of its water terminals, provided such reservations do not effect discrimination against traffic destined to such waterside terminals and to be carried therefrom by other boat lines. Mobile Chamber of Commerce v. M. & O. R. R. Co., 23 I. C. C. 417, 427.

(m) Free wharfage is a legitimate means of making a port attractive to ocean lines, and the Texas City interests in pursuing that policy will be protected against coercion by carriers. In Re Wharfage Charges at Galveston, 23 I. C. C. 535, 545.

(n) Water competition may be nullified by community of interest between rail carriers and water carriers. Bowling Green Business Men v. L. &. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 228, 237.

(o) The cost of transportation per mile by water is comparatively high for short distances and very small for long distances. Southwestern Shippers Traffic Assn. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 570, 583.

(p) Carriers have the right to hold traffic to their own lines so long, but only so long, as in so doing they do not encroach upon the rights of the public. They may hold Texas cotton to their own lines and enjoy the haul to the port of Galveston so long as shippers are not unjustly discriminated against or their lawful right of choice of routes and destinations interfered with. They may not, however, dictate to shippers of cotton that it shall move to Galveston or to any other particular port. The community tributary to another port, such as Port Aransas, is entitled to ship cotton to the port of its own selection, and that, too, upon reasonable rates and without unreasonably or unjustly discriminatory restrictions. Aransas Pass Channel & Dock Co. v. G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 403, 414.

(q) Carriers cannot so adjust rates as to build up one port and close or prevent the opening of others. Aransas Pass Channel & Dock Co. v. G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co., 27 I. C. C. 403, 415.

(r) If rail carriers exchange bills of lading, it is discriminatory for them to refuse like recognition of water lines. Kansas City Missouri River Nav. Co. v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 67, 73.

(s) If carriers are permitted to apply higher rates for the same service on traffic routed over connecting water lines than on traffic routed all rail, they will be in a position to destroy water competition and to deprive communities and shippers of the advantages of location upon navigable waters. Inland Nav. Co. v. Wabash R. R. Co., 43 I. C. C. 588, 592.

(t) Competing boat lines similarly situated should be put by a rail carrier on an equality in the use of a river warehouse and incline in the transfer of l. c. l. traffic. Cumberland Transportation Co. v. C. N. O. & T. P. Ry., 45 I. C. C. 444, 447.

(u) It does not follow necessarily that water rates should be on as high a level, relatively, as all rail or rail-and-water rates. New Bedford Board of Commerce v. Director General, 55 I. C. C. 274, 276.

(v) Ocean rates are generally not published and are subject to fluctuations. It is by no means certain that an equalization based on such rates constitutes a permanent basis upon which to construct the rail rates to the ports, because the equalization results only from a particular and definite relationship of rates, and if one rate factor included in the calculations is variable, the equalization must be destroyed to the extent to which variations occur from the particular rate which was employed in the equalizing process. Unless this process of equalization rests upon substantial, fairly permanent, and controlling facts and natural relationships it can not be proper and lawful. Inland Steel Co. v. Director General, 57 I. C. C. 339, 340.

(w) The water rates on transcontinental traffic from the Gulf ports have generally been lower than from the Atlantic ports because of the shorter distance, less frequent sailings therefrom, and because the rail rates from the Middle West to the Gulf ports were higher than to the north Atlantic ports. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 55, 56.

(x) Rates which coastwise railroad-owned steamship lines desire to apply on shipments moving on export bills of lading from south Atlantic and Gulf ports to New York, N. Y., there transferred to trans-Atlantic lines for transportation to nonadjacent foreign countries, are not local rates between two points in United States, nor rates between points in United States on traffic to be exported, but are joint rates applying over all-water lines from ports of United States, and the portion of such charges which would accrue to such steamship lines are merely divisions of joint charges made in conjunction with connecting trans-Atlantic lines. Ocean Steamship Co. of Savannah, 78 I. C. C. 251, 256.

(y) Respondent, Ocean Steamship Company proposed to increase the rates on railroad crossties, wooden, from Savannah, Ga., to New York and Boston. Respondents rates are ordinarily published on a weight basis, but its rates on lumber and ties are published per 1,000 feet. Rate was $4.48 on Feb. 28, 1922, advanced on June 19, 1922 to $5.15 applying on pine and oak ties, and suspended schedules rates of $5.60 on pine ties and $6.72 on oak ties are proposed. There is a considerable movement of ties in connection with the Clyde Line from Jacksonville, and respondents rates on ties have been particularly affected by the rates of that carrier. The basis here sought to be made effective has been maintained for some months by the Clyde Line and provision therefor in connection with respondents line was deferred to accommodate protestants because of various outstanding contracts based on the lower rate. HELD, proposed increased rates justified. Rates on crossties from Savannah, Ga., 78 I. C. C. 679.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) "Lake-and-rail" means a movement partly by rail and partly by lake boats which involves break of bulk. Escanaba Business Men's Assn. v. A. A. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 11, 12.

(b) "Across-lake" means a movement by rail to the lake and across the lake by car ferry without break of bulk. Escanaba Business Men's Assn. v. A. A. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 11, 13.

(c) "Rail-lake-and-rail" means a movement by rail to the lake, by boat to another lake port, and from thence by rail, which involves breaking bulk twice. Escanaba Business Men's Assn. v. A. A. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 11, 13.

(d) "Across-lake-and-rail" means a movement by rail and car ferry to the western lake port, and from thence by rail which may or may not involve breaking bulk. Escanaba Business Men's Assn. v. A. A. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 11, 13.

(e) Ocean rates fluctuate according to spare room as the time approaches when the vessel must sail. Chamber of Commerce of New York v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 55, 70.

(f) Transshipment rate limited to traffic delivered to respondent by water lines with which it has no through rates. Murray Lighterage & Transportation Co. v. D. & H. Co., 25 I. C. C. 388, 390.

(g) A boat line would have to file a tariff before through routes with rail carriers could be established. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R., 33 I. C. C. 384, 385.

(h) A water carrier must file its tariff with the Commission before the latter can compel the establishment of through routes with rail carriers. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R., 33 I. C. C. 384, 385.

(i) The action of a navigation company in transporting through interstate shipments in connection with the rail line, without filing its tariffs with the Commission, is unlawful. Inland Nav. Co. v. W. Ry. Co., 43 I. C. C. 588, 591.

(j) Rail carriers should notify consignees, from time to time, of the names of steamship companies which have adopted the average agreement by posting the names at piers where freight is received. New York Board of Trade v. Director General, 59 I. C. C. 205, 210.

(k) The act does not require that rates of Ocean S. S. Co. of Savannah on shipments moving on export bills of lading from Savannah, Ga., to nonadjacent foreign countries be published and filed with commission. This transportation has been conducted without filing of tariffs for nearly seven years; no complaint has been made; and no objection is made to its continuance. If steamship company is subjected to limitations of the act it will be deprived of a substantial portion of its total traffic, and such requirement would operate to disadvantage of carriers and the public through loss of service over an available route. Ocean Steamship Co. of Savannah, Ga., 78 I. C. C. 251.

(l) No violation of Act shown by reason of carrier's failure to give advance notice of arrival of steamer. Scandinavian American Trading Co. v. B. & O. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op., A-388.

(m) Steamship tariff schedules are binding on the passenger only when filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and shipping board and posted as required by law. Vanderberg v. Detroit & C. Nav. Co., (Mich., 1921), 186 N. W. 477.

§5. Reparation.

See Reparation.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Respondents proposed to cancel the tariff provision that freight charges on petroleum crude and fuel oil from points in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to certain named destinations in Arizona and New Mexico and to Cananea, Mexico, shall be ascertained on the basis of an estimated weight of 7.4 pounds per gallon and to provide in lieu thereof that the charges shall be based on the actual weight per gallon. From the record it is clear that the suspended schedules are aimed primarily at Mexicon oil which is received at Texas ports and at present is being consumed in volume in the mining operations of the copper regions of Arizona and New Mexico. This Mexican oil, it is said, weights from 7.98 to 8 pounds per gallon, its weight thus exceeding somewhat the estimated weight of 7.4 pounds now in use in this territory. So far as this record shows, petroleum oil in tank car has seldom, if ever, moved under anything but estimated weights. Of the Oklahoma oil, 85 per cent, it was stated, weighs from 7.48 to 7.57 pounds per gallon, the balance ranging from 7.29 to 7.43 pounds. Beyond what has been stated respondents submitted little evidence tending to show that 7.4 pounds does not fairly approximate the average weight of crude and fuel oil in this territory; on the contrary they concede that it is fairly representative of fuel oil from the Texas and Oklahoma fields. The practice of shipping petroleum oils under estimated weights has long been in effect, and this record falls far short of justifying the restricted exception to this practice which is here proposed. HELD, suspended schedules have not been justified. Actual weights on crude and fuel oil, 69 I. C. C. 194.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission is required by section 25 of the act to preserve for the carrier by water the protection of limited liability provided by law. In the Matter of Bills of Lading, 64 I. C. C. 347, 352.

IV. THROUGH ROUTES AND JOINT RATES.

See Through Routes and Joint Rates.

§6. In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The Act to Regulate Commerce does not empower the Commission to compel railroad companies to enter into joint arrangements with carriers by water for through carriage at through rates. The fact that a railroad company makes such arrangement for one of its branch roads will not charge it with unjust discrimination for refusing to make identical arrangements on other parts of its system, when it appears that from such other parts of its system it actually makes through arrangements by a more direct route and at the same rates, which are presumptively of equal convenience to shippers. Re Joint Water & Rail Lines. (Com.) 2 I. C. R. 486.

(b) Several rail carriers engaged in interstate commerce each cross or touch a navigable river leaving a large space of territory along and near the river and between their lines that can be served only by steamboats, and in connection with steamboats these rail carriers carry freight to and receive it from this territory at points where they touch or cross the river respectively, but as to it they make through rates with only one line of steamboats and refuse to make such through rates with other steamboats on the river. HELD, that under the Law the rail carriers may do this and that it is not unjust discrimination nor unlawful preference. Citing Napier v. The Glasgow & Southwestern Railway Company, 1 Railway & Canal Cases, 292. In such a case all that a steamboat has a right to demand, with which the rail carriers have refused to make through rates and to do through billing, is that the rail carriers shall receive from and deliver to such steamboat freight for transportation at their published local tariff rates. Copeheart & Smith v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 278.

(c) Where a carrier not subject to the Act to Regulate Commerce, for example, a steamboat plying the Tennessee River between Decatur, Alabama, and Bridgeport, in the same State, has applied to rail carriers engaged in interstate commerce for through rates and through billing of freight and has been refused these, and during a period of several years has paid these rail carriers their local published tariff rates on freight, and now sues to recover the difference between the amount so paid on the local rates and the proportion of the through rate between the same points covered by the local rates, HELD, that no recovery can be had in such a proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the complaint is dismissed without prejudice. Capeheart & Smith v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 278.

(d) Where several rail carriers engaged in interstate commerce each cross or touch a navigable river, leaving a large space of territory along and near the river and between their lines that can be served only by steamboat, and in connection with steamboats these rail carriers carry freight to and receive it from this territory at points where they touch or cross the river respectively, they may make through rates with only one line of steamboats and refuse to make such through rates with other steamboats on the river; and this is not unjust discrimination or unlawful preference. Capehart v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 278.

(da) An aggregate through rate is itself an entirety, although made up of agreed percentages, proportions or divisions, as the case may be, of the entire rate among the several carriers; and where the rail carrier makes a through rate from a point on a navigable river with a steamboat line, and refuses to make such through rate with another steamboat, the Commission cannot compel the rail carrier to receive freight from or deliver it to the steamboat, with which it has refused to make a through rate and to do through billing, upon the prepayment of charges for an estimated proportion of the through rate equal in amount to that which the rail carrier receives from the steamboat line with which it has an arrangement for through rates and through billing. Capeheart & Smith v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 278.

(e) All that a steamboat has a right to demand, with which the rail carriers have refused to make through rates and to do through billing, is that the rail carriers shall receive from and deliver to such steamboat freight for transportation at their published local tariff rates. Capehart v. L. & N. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 278, 282.

(f) The phrase "common control, management or arrangement for continuous carriage or shipment" in the first section of the Act to Regulate Commerce was intended to cover all interstate traffic carried through over all rail or part water and part rail lines. The receipt successively by two or more carriers for transportation of traffic shipped under through bills for continuous carriage over their lines is assent to a common arrangement for such continuous carriage or shipment and previous formal arrangement between them is not necessary to bring such transportation under the terms of the law. Trammell v. Clyde S. S. Co. et al, 4 I. C. R. 121.

(g) The share of the through rate for the transportation of salt from producing points in Michigan to points on the Missouri River, which is allowed to the boat line on Lake Michigan, the controlling interest in which is owned by the same persons who own a controlling interest in the corporation producing salt at the point named, and which share amounts to from 30 to 33 1-3 per cent of the through rate, and is considerably higher than the former charge for carrying salt on Lake Michigan, but which increase is partly accounted for by the fact that additional services are included,—is not so grossly disproportionate to the value of the additional through services as to amount to a rebate in favor of the salt interests which control the boat line. Re Transportation of Salt, 10 I. C. C. 148.

(ga) Discrimination by railroads against steamboat line, in refusing to make a joint rate with it while making such joint rate with its competitor. Re Alleged Unlawful Discrimination against the Enterprise Transp. Co. 11 I. C. C. 587.

(h) The Commission instituted an investigation as to alleged unlawful discrimination against the Enterprise Transportation Company by railroads leading from New York City. Railroad lines leading west from New York make joint through rates with the New England Navigation Company, controlling the Fall River line of steamers, which plies between New York and Fall River Mass., and some other New England cities, and also controlling other important steamer lines operating on Long Island Sound. Such joint rates apply in both directions between western and New England points. The New England Navigation Company is owned and operated by the New Haven Railroad. The rail lines centering in New York and running westerly thereof refuse, for stated business reasons, to make the like or any joint rating arrangement with the Enterprise Steamship Company, a steamship line plying between Fall River and other New England points and New York and in competition with the New England Navigation Companys Fall River line. This Fall River line may, by reducing rates on local traffic, force out of business the Enterprise Transportation Company, while obtaining a lucrative and supporting business from through traffic, and upon disappearance of such competition, restore the former charges. The existence of the Enterprise Company as a competitive factor is of distinct value to the public and that existence may depend upon its right to engage in through business. HELD, this investigation was made with the understanding that the Commission is without power to grant relief, and no opinion as to whether the through routing arrangement should be extended to the Enterprise Company is expressed; but if the public is to have the legitimate benefit of water competition, it is evident that authority should be provided to establish through routes between rail and water carriers, or at least to prevent unjust discrimination by rail carriers between connecting water lines. In the matter of alleged unlawful discrimination against the Enterprise Transportation Company by railroad lines leading from New York, 11 I. C. C. 587.

(i) The rail lines centering in New York and running westerly therefrom refuse, for stated business reasons, to make any joint rating arrangement with the Enterprise Transportation Company, a steamboat line plying between Fall River and other New England points and New York city, and in competition with the Fall River line of the New England Navigation Company, which is owned and operated by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company. The Fall River line may, by reducing rates on local traffic, force out of business the Enterprise Transportation Company, while obtaining a lucrative and supporting business from through traffic, and, upon disappearance of such competition, restore the former charges. The existence of the Enterprise Transportation Company as a competitive factor is of distinct value to the public, and this existence may depend upon its right to engage in through business. By reason of want of power to grant any relief, the Commission expresses no opinion as to whether the through routing arrangements should be extended to the Enterprise Company; but if the public is to have the legitimate benefit of water competition, it is evident that authority should be provided to establish through routes between rail and water carriers. Re Alleged Unlawful Discrimination against the Enterprise Transp. Co. 11 I. C. C. 587.

(j) Railroad lines leading west from New York City make joint through rates with the New England Navigation Company, controlling the Fall River line of steamers, which plies between New York and Fall River, Mass., and some other New England cities, and also controlling other important steamer lines operating on Long Island Sound. Such joint rates apply in both directions between Western and New England points. The New England Navigation Company is owned and operated by the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co. The rail lines centering in New York and running westerly thereof refuse, for stated business reasons, to make the like or any joint rating arrangement with the Enterprise Transportation Company, a steamship line plying between Fall River and other New England points and New York City, and in competition with the New England Navigation Company's Fall River line. This Fall River line may, by reducing rates on local traffic, force out of business the Enterprise Transportation Company, while obtaining a lucrative and supporting business from through traffic, and upon disappearance of such competition, restore the former charges. The existence of the Enterprise Transportation Company as a competitive factor is of distinct value to the public, and that existence may depend upon its right to engage in through business. This investigation was made with the understanding that the Commission is without power to grant any relief, and no opinion as to whether the through routing arrangement should be extended to the Enterprise Company is expressed; but if the public is to have the legitimate benefit of water competition; it is evident that authority should be provided to establish through routes between rail and water carriers, or at least to prevent unjust discrimination by rail carriers between connecting water lines. Matter of Alleged Unlawful Discrimination, 11 I. C. C. 587.

(k) Complainant, Enterprise Transportation Company, attacked defendant for refusing to make a through route and joint rate from Jamestown, Pa., for the transportation of fish. Complainant has been operating a line of steamboats on Long Island Sound since some time in 1905. Its boats ply between Fall River and New York City and call en-route at Jamestown, R. I. Its principal competitor is the New England Navigation Company, which is owned and controlled by the defendant Pennsylvania Railroad. The latter stops at Newport but does not at Jamestown. The Navigation Company and defendant maintain a through route and joint rate from Newport to Philadelphia. A large tonnage of fish is shipped annually from Jamestown to Philadelphia, Jamestown being 3 miles from Newport. Rates from Newport are 34c and from Jamestown 37c. HELD, that from Jamestown no satisfactory through route exists within the meaning of the Act. That, even if the present arrangement should be regarded as a satisfactory through route, complainants right to maintain this proceeding would not be affected thereby, since, at the time complaint was filed, through route from Jamestown by defendants lines had been abandoned and for a time thereafter was not in operation. Pennsylvania and complainant should be required to establish, for the transportation of fish, from Jamestown to Philadelphia, a through route, and apply thereto a joint rate of not more than 34c. Enterprise Transportation Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R., 12 I. C. C. 327.

(ka) Complainant has been operating a line of steamboats on Long Island Sound since some time in the year 1905. Its boats ply between Fall River and New York City, and call en route at Jamestown. R. I. Its principal competitor is the New England Navigation Company, which is owned and controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The boats of the Navigation Company ply between Fall River and New York City and stop at Newport, R. I., but do not now stop and never have stopped at Jamestown. Previous to the time complainant began business as aforesaid the navigation company and Pennsylvania Railroad Company maintained, and have ever since maintained, and applied to the transportation of fish a through route and joint rate from Newport to Philadelphia. At the time complainant began to operate as aforesaid no such route or rate was in existence from Jamestown to Philadelphia. A large tonnage of fish is shipped annually by water from Jamestown, which is about 3 miles from Newport. At some time during the summer of 1906, and after complainant had begun operations, the navigation company and Pennsylvania Railroad Company, by using the Naragansett Ferry Company as their agent to receive shipments of fish at Jamestown and transport same from that point to Newport, extended said through route to Jamestown. This service was discontinued about November 1, 1906, but renewed about February 1, 1907, and has been continuously maintained since, except that when the boats of the Narragansett Ferry Company are not running, the transportation from Jamestown to Newport is performed by the Newport and Jamestown Ferry Company. The through rates to Philadelphia are: From Newport 34 cents per 100 pounds, and from Jamestown, 37 cents. Out of these rates the Pennsylvania Railroad Company receives 7 cents per 100 pounds for the transportation from New York to Philadelphia, and the ferry company receives 3 cents for the transportation from Jamestown to Newport. The ferry company is named as a party to the tariff prescribing the through rates, but refuses to concur in the tariff or file with the Commission its rates for the transportation from Jamestown to Newport. The local rate of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for transporting fish from New York to Philadelphia is 22 cents per 100 pounds. Complainant receives at Jamestown shipments of fish desined to Philadelphia and delivers same to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at New York. Deliveries to the latter are made at the same place and at about the same time, whether carried thereto by complainant or by the navigation company, and reach Philadelphia at the same time in the one case as in the other, but such shipments leave Jamestown a little earlier when received over complainant's line than when the carriage is over said through route. When the initial shipment is over complainant's line the Pennsylvania Railroad Company exacts for the haul from New York to Philadelphia said local rate of 22 cents, and refuses to make with complainant a through route and apply thereto a joint rate. Complainant's local rate for transporting fish from Jamestown to the place where delivery is made to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, as aforesaid, including drayage across the city of New York, is 17½ cents per 100 pounds, while the local rate of the navigation company for transporting fish from Newport to such place of delivery, including drayage, is 23 cents per 100 pounds. Upon all the facts and circumstances disclosed by the record, HELD, That from Jamestown to Philadelphia no satisfactory through route exists within the meaning of the language of the Act to regulate Commerce. That even if the present arrangement should be regarded as a satisfactory through route, complainant's right to maintain this proceeding would not be affected thereby, since, at the time the complaint was filed, through route from Jamestown by defendants' lines had been abandoned and for a time thereafter was not in operation. That the Pennsylvania Railroad and complainant should be required to establish, for the transportation of fish, from Jamestown to Philadelphia, a through route, and apply thereto a joint rate of not more than 34 cents per 100 pounds, except that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company may, if it wishes to do so, apply to the Commission for an order requiring complainant to indemnify it against any loss it may suffer in the premises by reason of the financial irresponsibility of complainant. Enterprise Transportation Co. v. Penn. R. R. Co. et al. 12 I. C. C. 327.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(l) That a steamship company has no vessels and that its stock is not paid in, does not deprive it of the right to a ruling by the Commission as to whether it is entitled to be part of a through route in connection with rail carrier. Flour City S. S. Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 179, 186.

(m) Where a steamship company stands ready with sufficient financial backing to engage in business as a common carrier in connection and under arrangement with rail carriers, the Commission will not refuse to recognize it as a common carrier in determining whether through routes and joint rates should be established merely by reason of the fact that it has refrained from the actual carrying of traffic until the rights and privileges necessary for its successful operation should be granted. Flour City S. S. Co. v. L. V. R. R. Co., 24 I. C. C. 179, 187.

(n) Cancellation of rates with boat lines permitted where boat lines manipulated manifests and received excessive divisions. Seattle Shingle Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 30 I. C. C. 364, 368.

(o) To a contention by one railroad that a water carrier has always been found reliable, and that it does not desire to establish through routes and joint rates with a second line so long as the service rendered by the first is satisfactory, it may be rejoined that the controlling consideration must be the public benefit. This is buttressed by the presumption that, where possible, and where the roadway has not been constructed by private outlay, competition is the normal safeguard commonly relied on in the first instance. Unless there is something, such as lack of financial responsibility, to rebut the presumption that the interests of the community would be better served by two carriers than by one, the right of the petitioning boat line for through routes and joint rates is fairly apparent. Decatur Nav. Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 31 I. C. C. 281, 286.

(p) A natural waterway, improved by the expenditure of public funds, should be thrown open as far as possible to the free and unrestricted use of all those who desire to avail themselves of it. It differs materially from a privately constructed and owned roadbed, which, though quasi-public in nature, is built by individuals or corporate interests primarily for their own gain. A navigable river is a public highway, a natural avenue of commerce, and the public interests demand that its advantages be utilized to the fullest extent. It is true that the Act to Regulate Commerce, in giving the Commission authority to establish through routes and joint rates, was not intended to require the Commission to establish such routes and rates whenever requested without regard to the peculiar circumstances of each case. In view of the fact that the Act was designed to promote the free movement of interstate commerce, and bearing in mind that a large river is a natural artery of commerce, it would seem that any responsible common carrier operating on the river would be prima facie warranted in requesting the Commission to allow it to participate to the fullest possible extent in the interstate commerce originating on the river. Decatur Nav. Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 31 I. C. C. 281, 288.

(q) An objection by rail carriers to the establishment of through routes and joint rates with a water carrier, is not entitled to great weight where no reduction in rail rates to the point of junction is contemplated. Bowling Green Protective Association v. E. & B. G. P. Co., 31 I. C. C. 301, 304.

(r) The Commission is empowered to make through routes and joint rates even when one of the defendants is a water line. Bowling Green Protective Association v. E. & B. G. P. Co., 31 I C. C. 301, 306.

(s) The Commission has power to make through routes and joint rates when one of the carriers in a water line. Bowling Green Protective Asso. v. E. & B. G. Packet Co., 31 I. C. C. 301, 306.

(t) Spirit of act to maintain freedom of our ports and to allow boat lines to engage in traffic upon equal terms. Pacific Nav. Co. v. S. P. Co., 31 I C. C. 472, 479.

(u) Where it is sought to apply the limitation in section 15 in a proceeding by an ocean carrier plying between two ports, to secure the establishment by a rail carrier having rail lines between such ports, of through routes and joint rates accorded competing ocean carriers, the question is whether or not the establishment of through routes with complainant would embrace substantially less of defendant's line than is included in the through rail-and-water routes maintained with the competitors. Pacific Nav. Co. v. S. P. Co., 31 I. C. C. 472, 479.

(v) If rail carriers are permitted to choose the particular boat lines with which they will establish through routes and joint rates, they will be able to dictate who shall operate on the water and who shall not, for a boat line accorded a monopoly of through rail-and-water traffic will soon be able to drive competitors out of business. The spirit of the Act is to maintain the freedom of ports and to allow boat lines to engage in traffic on equal terms. To permit rail carriers serving a port to favor one boat line or another would destroy the freedom of competition between boat lines which the Act is intended to preserve, and would practically close ports to all but the favored vessels. Pacific Nav. Co. v. S. P. Co., 31 I. C. C. 472, 479.

(w) The maintenance by a rail carrier of through routes and joint fares with one ocean carrier while denying them to another, constitutes undue preference and advantage to the former and undue prejudice and disadvantage to the latter, in violation of section 3. Pacific Nav. Co. v. S. P. Co., 31 I. C. C. 472, 479.

(x) It is a generally accepted principle of rate making that through rates should be less than the sum of the intermediate rates. That this rule should be applied where one of two connecting carriers transports the goods by water and the other by rail is evident from the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Not only is the Commission given power, under section 15, to require rail carriers to join with water carriers in establishing through routes and joint rates, but under section 6 as amended it is authorized to establish maximum proportional rates by rail to and from ports to which the traffic is brought, or from which it is taken by the water carrier, and to determine to what traffic and in connection with what vessels and upon what terms and conditions such rates shall apply. Chattanooga Packet Co. v. I. C. R. R., 33 I. C. C. 384, 392.

(y) It does not follow because the initial tariff filed by a boat line included joint rates with rail carriers, party theretofore with other like carriers to lower rates between the same ports, that the concurrence of the rail carriers suffices to bring the new and higher joint rates under the requirements of the clause of section 15. The exemption therefrom attaching to rates filed by the lake carrier alone would attach to the joint rates in question. Otherwise a new instrumentality of water commerce can not file in the first instance joint rates with rail connections without subjecting itself to limitations not of its own making but which it must inherit from predecessors whose domination by rail owners was supposed to account for thir ill success as public servants. Bay State Milling Co. v. Transit Corporation, 43 I. C. C. 338, 347.

(z) It can not be accepted without proof that the duty of providing arrangements the same as was formerly practiced by the railroad-owned boat lines is incumbent on a new water carrier or upon such carrier in connection with rail carriers in the Chicago and Milwaukee switching district. Grain Products Rates via Great Lakes, 43 I. C. C. 550, 555.

(aa) The Commission is not justified in sanctioning an arrangement restricting competition by excluding a boat line that seeks through routes and joint rates on the same basis as that enjoyed by its competitor. Gulf Atlantic S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 309, 312.

(bb) A navigable river, being a natural highway, should be thrown open as far as possible to the free and unrestricted use of all those who desire to avail themselves of it, and that a responsible common carrier operating thereon is prima facie warranted in asking for the establishment of through routes and joint rates with rail lines reaching the river. Gulf Atl. S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 309, 312.

(cc) If through rates are accorded to complainant boat line and in event of failure to agree upon amount of bond for the protection of defendant in its participation in such through rates, a specific sum will be fixed by the Commission upon request. Gulf Atlantic S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 309, 313.

(dd) Whenever and wherever, within the powers granted by the statute under which the Commission operates, there is presented an opportunity to utilize water transportation, this Commission will freely exercise its authority. Charleston & Norfolk S. S. Co., 47 I. C. C. 365, 371.

(ee) In establishing a through route and joint rates between rail and water carriers in a case where physical connection between a rail line and a water line is necessary it must appear (1) that such connection is reasonably practicable, (2) that it can be made with safety to the public, and (3) that the business to be handled will justify the outlay. The Act is broad and comprehensive in terms and contains no other limitation upon the authority of the Commission to establish through routes and joint rates between and over rail-and-water lines. Colonial Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 625, 629.

(ff) To apply the limitation of section 15 to cases which involve questions as to the propriety and feasibility of through routes and joint rates between and over rail-and-water lines would be inconsistent with the comprehensive and all-embracing authority plainly intended to be accorded by the Panama Conal Act. Col-Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 625, 630.

(gg) The word "property" of that part of section 6, as amended by the Panama Canal Act, construed to apply to passenger and freight traffic, in the establishment of through routes and joint rates between rail and water carriers. Col-Nav. Co. v. N. Y. N. H. R. R., 50 I. C. C. 625, 631, 632.

(hh) The act does not confer upon the Commission the power to prescribe minimum rates over a through route where one of the carriers is a water line. Rail-and-Water Rate from Atlantic Seaboard, 63 I. C. C. 267, 275.

(ii) Complainant attacked combination rates of $1.38 charged on 73 bales of cotton concentrated at Sinton, Tex., shipped during Sept. 1918, to Galveston, Tex., for further concentration, and reshipped Nov. 2, 1918, by water from Galveston to Fall River, Mass., as unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory and unduly prejudical to extent they exceeded $1.24 and $1.25 plus a charge of 3c for second concentration applicable through Houston, Tex. Prior to June 25, 1918, the through rates were constructed on the New York combinations. The joint factor up to New York was the combination on Galveston. Effective June 25, 1918, the joint rates to New York and the local rates into and out of Galveston were increased 15c. Thereafter on cotton given second concentration at Galveston and reshipped to New York complainants were required to pay an increase of 15c in the rates to and a similar increase in the rates from Galveston, whereas at Houston second concentration was available to their competitors at the transit charge of 3c in addition to a single increase of 15c in the joint rate. On Dec. 12, 1918, second concentration was authorized at Galveston on the same basis as at Houston. No evidence was offered to show that the rates attacked were unreasonable. Any unjust discrimination which may have existed has been removed and complainants were not damaged, complaint dismissed. Spinnler & Co. v. Director General, 73 I. C. C. 611.

(jj) If there be dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions attending the interchange of traffic with a water line compared with interchanges with all rail lines, rail carriers are entitled to be compensated for the greater expense, either by a large division of the through rate or by reasonable additional charge. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 317, 346.

(kk) Rail carriers may make a reasonable charge to cover the additional expense, if any, of interchange with boat lines over and above the cost of interchange with rail carriers. U. S. Department v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 317, 346.

(ll) The law authorizes the Commission to require the establishement of through rail and water routes and joint rates which short haul a rail carrier. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 317, 355.

(mm) Joint rates over rail and water routes ought to be divided without regard to the extent to which rail carriers may be shorthauled, and not upon a plan designated to discourage or render impracticable the use of such joint rates. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 317, 355.

(nn) Whatever may be the case as between rail lines, joint rates over rail-and-water routes ought to be divided without regard to the extent to which rail carriers are short-hauled, and not upon a plan designated to discourage or render impracticable the use of such joint rates. U. S. War Department v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 355.

(oo) The exaction by rail lines of their local rates as divisions of through routes and joint rates with water carriers has for its purpose the protection of the long haul. It is a means of accomplishing indirectly what Congress, in the law respecting the establishment of through routes and joint rates, has sought to prevent. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 356.

(pp) Whatever powers the Commission may have are limited by the fact that the act does not confer upon it the power to prescribe minimum rates over a through route where one of the carriers is a water line. Roasted coffee from Atlantic seaboard 83, I. C. C. 131, 134.

(qq) Section 15 (3) of the act authorizes commission to establish through routes and joint rates applicable to transportation of property where one of the carriers is a water line. However, by that same section and paragraph it is provided that commission shall not "have right to establish any route, classification, or practice, or any rate, fare, or charge when transportation is wholly by water." Boston Wool Trade Asso. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C. 445, 448, 449.

(rr) Refusal of certain rail carriers to join with White Star Line, a lake line carrier, in through routes and joint rates from Port Huron and Detroit, Mich., through Toledo, Ohio, to points in c. f. a. territory, while participating in such through routes and rates with Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Co., a competing lake line operating between Detroit and Cleveland, Ohio found unduly prejudical. Joint rates in connection with complainant's line is desirable in public interest, and establishment thereof required. White Star Line v. N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 473.

(ss) Suggestion that through freight might be diverted to complainant lake line if joint rates are established in connection with it, sufficient to reduce all-rail traffic so as to make operation of proposed through package cars impracticable. HELD: When it is so highly desirable that all means of transportation should be utilized and developed to highest possible efficiency such potentialities should not be permitted to prevent establishment of routes and rates that are actually and presently in the public interest. White Star Line v. N. Y. C. R. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 473, 477.

(tt) Where a railroad tendered cotton, which had been damaged by fire and water while waiting to be unloaded, to a connecting steamship company, which refused to accept it, the shipper's contention that there was no delivery to the steamship company, and that the freight was therefore not earned, was without merit, in view of the fact that there was no claim against the railroad in relation to the damage. Stevens v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 202 N. Y. S. 195.

§6½. Free transportation.

See Free Transportation.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) In the provision of section 1 as amended by the Hepburn Act, that "no common carrier subject to the provisions of this Act shall issue or give any interstate free ticket, free pass," etc.,

the phrase "common carrier" is not limited to "common carriers subject to the provisions of this Act," and hence a common carrier subject to the Act may exchange passes with ocean steamship lines and foreign railroads. United States v. E. R. R. Co., 213 Fed. 391.

§6½a. Barge lines and rail carriers.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) General principles indicated which should govern the division of joint rates the level of switching charges at the ports, the levying of per diem charges for detention of cars or barges at interchange points, and the establishment of additional through routes and joint rates, between the barge line and rail carriers. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317.

(b) Everything that can be done ought to be done to give the barge line a fair opportunity to demonstrate its worth. The project should be viewed in the light of the service which can reasonably be anticipated and without permitting vision to be obscured by the difficulties and embarrassments which surround every new enterprise. On the other hand the experiment will not be fairly conducted if the barge line is permitted to tap the resources of the rail lines by depriving them in any way of just compensation for the services which they perform in connection with its operation. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 353.

(c) In view of the experience that the country has had with recurrent rail congestion car shortages, and with increased rates, the possibilities which the barge line offers as a means of adding to the sum total of transportation facilities and of providing a cheaper form of carriage are plainly of prime public importance. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 353.

(d) Is owned and operated by the Government, not necessarily as a permanent governmental undertaking, but to test the possibilities of transportation by barge upon inland waterways. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 353.

(e) The Mississippi-Warrior River barge line is owned and operated by the Government, not necessarily as a permanent governmental undertaking, but to test the possibilities of transportation by barge upon inland waterways. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry. 77 I. C. C. 353.

(f) Reciprocal switching charges are assessed upon traffic received from or delivered to rail lines, while higher industrial switching charges are assessed on traffic from or to the barge line. HELD: Reciprocity is a factor extraneous to the service and so "indefinite, uncertain, and speculative," as well as variable, that it is not entitled to weight as a reason for a differentiation in the charges, and the element of reciprocity, as between the rail carriers, found not to justify the difference. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 360.

(g) The allowance by connecting rail lines of per diem reclaims to a switching line found to be a reason for assessing higher charges on traffic of the Mississippi Warrior River barge line, so long as the latter pays no per diem reclaims. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317, 361.

(h) So long as the Mississippi-Warrior River barge line is compelled to pay a penalty for the detention of cars, the rail lines ought to pay a corresponding penalty for the detention of barges. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 317, 361.

(i) Fact that connecting rail lines furinsh cars to a switching line while the barge line does not furnish cars is not a justification for rail carriers assessing higher switching charges on the barge line's traffic. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 360, 361.

(j) General principles indicated which should govern the levying of per diem charges for the detention of cars or barges at the interchange points between the Mississippi-Warrior River barge line and rail carriers. U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 361.

(k) If the average switching service performed on traffic received from or delivered to the Mississippi-Warrior River barge line is more expensive than the average switching service performed on traffic received from or delivered to rail lines corresponding higher switching charges in the former case are justified U. S. War Dept. v. A. & S. Ry., 77 I. C. C. 361.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission will not order a physical connection with a dock, the location of which is unknown. Baltimore & Carolina S. S. Co. v. A. C. L. R. R., 49 I. C. C. 176, 177.

V. EVIDENCE.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The presumption is that a reasonable water-and-rail rate would be some what less than a reasonable rail-water-rail rate. Augusta & Savannah Steamboat Co. v. O. S. S. Co. of Savannah, 26 I. C. C. 380, 387.

(b) Distance of haul is to be considered in determining reasonableness of rates by water. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 643.

(c) Condition of harbor is to be considered in determining reasonableness of rates by water. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 643.

(d) Depth of channels is to be considered in determining reasonableness of water rates. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 643.

(e) Capacity of boats is to be considered in determining reasonableness of water rates. Comercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 643.

(f) Wharves and wharfage may be considered in determining the reasonableness of rates by water. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 643.

(g) Condition of navigation is to be considered in determining reasonableness of rates by water. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 644.

(h) The density of traffic is to be considered as determining reasonableness of rates by water. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. 639, 644.

(i) Cost of operation may be considered in determining reasonableness of rates by water. Commercial Club of Duluth v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 27 I. C. C. 639, 644.

(j) Boat line originating traffic considered same as branch line to rail carrier. R. R. Com'rs. of Fla. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 28 I. C. C. 356, 359.

(k) Large and important quantities of low-grade commodities move into and out of the south Atlantic ports by tramp steamers. Fourth Section Violation in the Southeast, 30 I. C. C. 153, 170.

(l) In constructing joint rates via rail and water, some difference should be made in water rates for lower classes. Bowling Green Protective Asso. v. E. & B. G. Packet Co., 31 I. C. C. 301, 305.

(m) Water lines must be looked upon as rate-making lines between the two seaboards as to traffic involved. Rates on Asphaltum, Barley, Beans, and Canned Goods, 33 I. C. C. 480, 486.

(n) It is impossible for an independent to engage in a rate war with a boat line financed by owning railroads. Lake Line Application Under Panama Canal Act, 33 I. C. C. 699, 716.

(o) What voice lake lines have in naming their rates or divisions, when any at all, is usually that of an official who occupies a dual traffic capacity for the railroad and its controlled lake lines, Rates via Rail-and-Lake Routes, 37 I. C. C. 302, 307.

(p) With railroad competitors of lake lines, investment, traffic density, and gross revenues have increased greatly, even while average revenue per unit of tonnage was decreasing. Rates via Rail-and-Lake Routes, 37 I. C. C. 302, 310.

(q) The water rates on transcontinental traffic from the Gulf ports have generally been lower than from the Atlantic ports because of the shorter distonce and less frequent sailings therefrom, and because the rail rates from the Middle West to the Gulf ports were higher than to the north Atlantic ports. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 55, 56.

(r) Conference rates were maintained by water carriers operating in transcontinental service from the north Atlantic and Gulf ports and established at a conference under a "gentlemen's agreement." Appendix 1. Transcontinental Cases of 1922, 74 I. C. C. 48, 55, 96.

(s) Shipment by boat from New York, N. Y., to Albany, N. Y., thence rail to interstate destination, rail carrier advancing water charges found not a through shipment, there being no common control, management, or arrangement for continuous carriage from New York to ultimate destination. Amendt Milling Co. v. M. C. R. Co., 83 I. C. C. 585.

VI. REASONABLENESS OF RATES.

See Supra II; Loss and Damage; Reasonableness of Rates.

§8. In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) A line of steamships plying between New York and Boston every other day makes the distance in 24 hours, does the largest part of the carrying trade of the grocers of Boston on shipments from New York, carries flour from New York to Boston for 8½ cents per hundred pounds; other lines, part water and part rail, known as the "Sound Lines," make daily trips between New York and Boston, and carry flour from New York to Boston at 9 cents per hundred pounds; an all-rail line composed of the lines of the defendants upon through billing and through rates to Boston alone on shipments from New York makes daily runs between these points and carries flour from New York to Boston at 9 cents per hundred pounds; each and all of these carriers are in actual competition for this business and it involves the carriage of traffic important in amount. HELD, upon the facts that this is a case in which the circumstances and conditions in the carriage of this commodity are substantially dissimilar at Boston to what they are at Readville, an interior town about eight miles from Boston, on the line of the all-rail carriers, where no competition exists between the all-rail carriers and the water lines, and justifies the all-rail carriers in meeting the rate by the water line at Boston by charging 9 cents per hundred pounds on flour, while the combined local rates of the two rail carriers are higher upon shipments of this kind of freight from New York to Readville than they are upon the joint through rate from New York to Boston. The all-rail line is composed of two separate and distinct lines of railroad, owned by two separate and distinct corporations; but by an arrangement these two corporations make joint through rates on all business from and to New York and Boston passing over their lines, and for this business they furnish fast freight trains which stop at no stations between New York and Boston and have the right of way over all other freight trains; as to all other points along their lines, however, they each charge their local rates, and this business is done by way freight trains of each Company respectively for itself and on its own account; all of which methods and rates in each instance are duly advertised in their published tariffs. On the facts herein above stated, a firm of dealers in the City of Boston ordered a consignment of flour from New York to Readville by the all-rail lines of the defendants in this proceeding, and subsequently claimed in their complaint to the Commission that they should have been charged for this service the through rate to Boston and not the local rates of the defendants from New York to Readville. HELD, that the facts show that complainants are mistaken as to their rights in this matter and that the complaint cannot be sustained, and must be dismissed without prejudice. King & Co. v. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. Co. 3 I. C. R. 272.

(b) Where a line of steamships, plying between New York and Wilmington, N. C., makes a through rate from New York via Wilmington and the Carolina Central Railroad to interior points, by adding the steamer rate to the local tariff rate of the railroad to the interior points, there being no agreed through rates for such freight between the steamship and rail lines, the rail carrier, when the freight is tendered to it at Wilmington, is under no obligation to pay the rates earned by the steamer in transporting the freight from New York to Wilmington, but may decline to do so, leaving the steamship and the shipper to settle the matter of the steamship's charges before the carrier takes the freight and transports it to the interior point. In the Matter of the Application of F. W. Clark 2 I. C. R. 796.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) Joint rates with water line should not be greater than all-rail rates. Kansas City Missouri River Nav. Co. v. C. & O. Ry. Co., 34 I. C. C. 67, 74.

(d) The maintenance of lower rates by differential rail-and-water routes should be required only when the cost of transportation is less than the all-rail cost. Lake and Rail Rate Cancellations, 42 I. C. C. 513, 520.

(e) A showing that the lake link in rail-lake-and-rail routes constitutes but from 13 to 26 per cent of the total distance, cannot be accepted as conclusive proof of the impracticability of the rail-lake-and-rail-routes. Lake and Rail Rate Cancellations, 42 I. C. C. 513, 520.

(f) One of the most important factors to be considered in fixing rates on commodities moving by water is that of the space occupied. The rates on uncompressed cotton may properly be considerably higher than on compressed cotton. The former takes approximately twice the space necessary for the latter, and the desirability of utilizing the space of vessels to the fullest extent is well recognized. Cotton from New Orleans, 49 I. C. C. 751, 754, 756.

(g) Authority granted boat lines subject to the Commission's jurisdiction to increase their rates to the same extent granted railroads operating between the same points or in the same territory, but in the construction of rail-and-lake rates the present parity between Chicago and Duluth should be maintained. Increased Rates, 1920, 58 I. C. C. 220, 253.

(h) Water craft are operated under conditions which make it impossible to predict at all times the precise date of docking and clearing, and rail carriers can not be held responsible therefor. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 62 I. C. C. 583, 588.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The question of the loss of weight of grain during elevation is one of property rights that must be disposed of in the courts under the general law. Baltimore Chamber of Commerce v. Pa. R. R., 15 I. C. C. 341, 346.

(b) Wherever the transportation charge is by weight and the weight of the cheaper grade commodity is substantially the same, the poor man pays more freight in proportion to the value of the service than he who consumes the costlier article. Association of Union Made Garment Manufacturers v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 16 I. C. C. 405, 406.

(c) The Commission does not suggest that all weigh masters should be appointed or licensed by the government, but it does think that there are points at which, and perhaps circumstances under which, official weigh masters should act, and that the power should exist to appoint such persons and determine their sphere of action. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 34.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) The Commission has jurisdiction over rates collected in excess of actual weight, such charges being mere overcharges. Wheeler L. B. & S. Co. v. A. & C. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 10.

(b) The Commission may order a refund of charges based on weight in excess of actual weight. Noble v. St. L. S. W. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 62; Peters v. O. S. L. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 598; Wheeler Lumber Bridge & Supply Co. v. A. & C. R. R. Co. 20 I. C. C. 10, 11.

(c) It has been said that some Federal tribunal, perhaps the Commission, should be given authority over track scales. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 23.

(d) When transportation is interstate some of its incidents, such as receipt, delivery, storage, demurrage, car service, and weighing, assume an interstate character. As the Act to Regulate Commerce applies to "all services in connection with the receipt, delivery * * * * * and handling of property transported" the Commission has jurisdiction of the weighing service. Detroit Coal Exch. v. M. C. R. R., 38 I. C. C. 79, 80, 81.

II. METHOD OF COMPUTING CHARGES.

§2½. In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Prima facie the system of charging by weight is more just than any other. It is the only system whereby the charge is made proportionate to the service rendered. It is the only system whereby inequalities as between shippers resulting from differences in the size of cars, can be obviated. Leonard v. C. & A. R. Co., 2 I. C. C. 599, 602.

(b) The charge for transportation under the net-weight practice being reasonable and just and without complaint on the part of the shippers or carriers an increased charge by the device of charging for the gross weight, being one sixth advance for the same service, was unwarranted, making the rate unreasonable Proctor v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 131.

(c) The question as to correct weights and shipments, as between carrier and shipper, is one of fact to be determined in a manner just to both parties and as to which the ex parte action of either cannot conclude the other. Potter Manufacturing Co. v. C. & G. T. R. Co., 4 I. C. C. 223, 229.

(d) When actual weights of cotton shipments cannot be ascertained without great inconvenience to the shipper or carrier, and when transportation charges are promptly adjusted by the carrier upon the basis of actual weights furnished by the consignee, a practice of billing the cotton at a proper estimated weight per bale should not be deemed unlawful Phelps & Company v. The Texas & Pacific Railway Company 4 I. C. R. 363.

(e) When actual weights of cotton shipments cannot be ascertained without great inconvenience to the shipper or carrier, and when transportation charges are promptly adjusted by the carrier upon the basis of actual weights furnished by the consignee, a practice of billing the cotton at a proper estimated weight per bale should not be deemed unlawful. Phelps & Co. v. Texas & Pacific Railway Co., 6 I. C. C. 36.

(f) Published tariffs specifying rates per standard crate on vegetables shipped from Florida to northern or northeastern points should state plainly the weight dimensions of the crate to which the rates apply. Re Alleged Unlawful Charges v. 8 I. C. C. 585.

(g) Complaint alleged that defendants' carload rate on apples from certain points in Illinois to New York City was unreasonable in that an arbitrary weight greater than the actual weight was imposed, but subsequently defendants amended their tariffs so as to make them apply to only actual weight on such apples. Complaint dismissed. White & Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co. et. al. 12 I. C. C. 307.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) The weight basis for assessing charges should be the same for returned shipments as for shipments forwarded. In re Express Rates, 24 I. C. C. 380, 408.

(i) An exhaustive investigation of change in weighing in all parts of the country by the Commission revealed that three-fourths of all the track scales in use in the United States were of defective design or improperly constructed. Less than one-fourth were properly inspected. Not more than 10 per cent were accurately tested and a majority were not in a proper sense tested at all. The methods of weighing were heedless and unsatisfactory in many cases. The stenciled tare weights upon 80 per cent of all cars were erroneous. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 9.

(j) Where weighing methods have been inaccurate it does not meet the situation to say that the railroad has given to one shipper, by assessing charges on too low a rate, what it has taken from another by enforcing an excessive weight. In so far as possible the weight assessed should be the true weight. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 10.

(k) In practical railroad operation it may not be possible to weigh loaded cars by the most perfect method. The time and expense in the different methods of weighing must be considered. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 16.

(l) Cars should never be weighed in motion coupled at both ends, and ordinarily not when coupled at one end. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 17.

(m) Cars should never be weighed in motion coupled at both ends; they may properly be weighed in motion when uncoupled upon track scales especially designed for that purpose and in charge of thoroughly competent men; they should not ordinarily be weighed coupled at one end, and never unless at points where the greatest attention is paid to the condition of the scale and the competency of the weigh master. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 17.

(n) Stencilled weight on cars often inaccurate. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 19.

(o) Grain being weighed at the primary grain market, usually by a weighmaster under the supervision of a Chamber of Commerce or of the state of municipality itself, and the weight of flour and other grain products being usually ascertained by the counting of the number of packages each of a certain weight, there is at the present time but little dissatisfaction as to the weighing of these commodities. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 22.

(p) More complaint exists as to the weighing of coal than any other commodity except lumber. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 24.

(q) In the general investigation undertaken by the Commission evidence indicated that coal was usually weighed at or near the mine by the railroad or the mine owner; that the coal if not properly trimmed was liable to fall from the car; that it was subject to extensive pilfering en route; that a substantial change in weight between the time the coal left the mine and its arrival at destination might also occur on account of evaporation; that it was frequently wet at the mine in the process of mining or preparing for shipment, and the drying out of the water lightened the weight of the car; and that the coal itself as it came from the mine sometimes contained moisture so as to cause a loss in weight by drying in the course of transit. HELD, it was proper for a railroad company to provide in its tariff that the weight as ascertained at point of origin should govern unless shown to be incorrect within such measure of tolerance as might be fixed. Where the commodity varies in weight during transportation the carrier might provide that the weight so ascertained should govern irrespective of the destination weight. It could not, however, provide that an incorrect weight, no matter when ascertained or where ascertained, should control. Where coal is wet in process of preparation for shipment so that the moisture does not become at any time a part of the coal itself, but soon evaporates, a proper deduction should be made from the weight as ascertained at the mine. When the moisture is a part of the coal itself, even though it subsequently evaporates, the carrier may properly require that the weight at the mine shall govern. When coal falls from the car or is lost by pilfering the carrier ought to be held responsible since the falling from the car is due from improper loading and the pilfering is a loss, for which the railroad must stand responsible. Some method should be adopted by which the weight of the coal at the mine can be accurately ascertained. There should probably also be the right upon the part of the shipper to demand a reweighing under proper restrictions. When possible, the car should be weighed light before being loaded. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 25.

(r) The Commission has no control over the contract between the coal producer and his purchaser. If the mine producer insists that his contract of sale shall provide for a mine rate, the Commission cannot control that action. It can, however, see to it that freight charges are assessed upon actual weights, and that the rules under which those rates are ascertained are correct. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers 28 I. C. C. 7, 25.

(s) The evidence indicated that the car of lumber was usually weighed at the point of origin, and usually weighed a second and frequently a third time; that in case the subsequent weighing showed more than the original weight, the weight was advanced, while if they showed less no change was made in the original weight. That the same kind of lumber in the same state of dryness did not always possess an absolutely uniform rate; that green lumber shrunk greatly in weight in the process of drying; that dried lumber would often absorb moisture and increase materially in weight; and that accumulation of snow and ice upon the car tended to increase the weight of the car beyond its stenciled capacity. HELD, that in view of the fact that more complaint has been made touching the weighing of lumber than with respect to any other commodity, and in view of the varying practices of the railroads in recognizing claims for errors in weight, some method should be devised by which the true weight of lumber could be more accurately ascertained. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 27.

(t) Tolerance is the limit of error within which the ascertained track scale weight of a carload of freight shall be deemed to be correct. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 29.

(u) Evidently accuracy in the matter of weight becomes important in proportion to the value of the article, when the question is as to whether the entire carload has been delivered, and in proportion to the amount of the rate, when the question concerns merely the assessment of freight charges. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 29.

(v) Accuracy in matter of weight becomes important in proportion to value of article. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 29.

(w) Five hundred pounds may be regarded as reasonable tolerance. In re

Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 30.

(x) It is not to be expected that all railroads of the country will be equipped with theoretically ideal scaling devices. To require this would be unreasonable, but such devices are among the most important of the appliances of a railroad, for they virtually determine the charge which the shipper is to pay and the railroad to receive. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 32.

(y) The car may undoubtedly vary somewhat in weight from week to week, according to climatic condition, and therefore, when possible, it should be weighed both light and loaded at that end of the route at which the weight is governed. This, however, in the great majority of instances is impossible. The stenciled tare weight must be accepted, and it is extremely important that this weight should be as accurate as possible, while the stenciled weight can never be made absolutely accurate, there is no excuse for the wide area of error that now exists. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 34.

(zaa) Under the present system the transaction is usually closed before the dispute as to the weight of a shipment begins. Much trouble would be avoided if the interested party could be notified before the car is received and unloaded of exactly the amount upon which freight charges are to be assessed and given an opportunity to make whatever claim he desires in respect to weight before the unloading of the car, not only as a matter of justice to the shipper, but as a protection to the carrier against unreasonable claims on account of excessive weight. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 35.

(bb) Every carload of freight, where track scales are relied upon to determine weight upon which freight charges are to be assessed, should be weighed within 50 miles of the point of origin ordinarily. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 36.

(cc) Cars must be spotted in order to be properly weighed. American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co. v. B. Ry. of O., 28 I. C. C., 350, 351.

(dd) Rule that charges will be assessed on weights as ascertained at defendant's regular weighing stations and that this rule will not be departed from held unreasonable. Schenck v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 29 I. C. C. 125.

(ee) Carriers are not required to accept weight ascertained on private scales. Schenck v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 29 I. C. C. 125, 127.

(ff) It is unjust and unreasonable not to promptly report scale weights to billing office and give shipper opportunity to surrender additional billing. National Casket Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 31 I. C. C. 678, 684, 685, 698.

(gg) Weights of many commodities transported cannot be taken with unfailing exactitude. The most accurate weights which can be secured with due consideration of all of the necessities of the situation should unquestionably be obtained. But the Commission will not condemn lightly a system which gives satisfaction at many important markets. Kansas City Live Stock Exch. v. A. T. & S. F. Ry., 34 I. C. C. 423, 427.

(hh) If carriers choose to adopt elevator weights, where ascertained, in preference to track-scale weights, their right to cancel elevation allowances is not affected thereby. Grain Elevation Allowances at Kansas City, 34 I. C. C. 442, 445.

(ii) The provision, in rules applying on traffic handled under class rates, for loading of articles other than those requiring refrigeration, provided weight thereof does not exceed 25 per cent of total weight, not justified. Rates and Rules on Shipments of Packing-House Products, 36 I. C. C. 62, 63.

(jj) Actual billing under a given, minimum is not conclusive as to weight which can be safely loaded. Eastern Live Stock Case, 36 I. C. C. 675, 685.

(kk) Weight of inside door protection has always been included in gross weight of shipments and practice is not unlawful. Keystone Wood Co. v. P. R. R. Co., 37 I. C. C. 622, 624.

(ll) Where a classification provides for the application of charges based on the minimum weight as stenciled on a tank car, provision should be made for reducing gallons to pounds. Lewis Mfg. Co. v. C. B. & Q. R. R., 41 I. C. C. 671, 672.

(mm) The shipper has a right to a reasonable check of weights at the point of origin to be used as the basis for assessing charges. Romann & Bush P. I. & Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 126, 128.

(nn) Complainant attacked rates charged on carloads of slab wood shipped intrastate from Perry to La Grande, Ore., subsequent to April 29, 1919, as unjust and unreasonable. Perry is 4.2 miles from La Grande, applicable rate 90c per 128 cubic feet. In 69 I. C. C. 7, a cord unit of 192 cubic feet was substituted on fuel wood 16 inches and under in length, and this basis is now effective. HELD, rates charged not unreasonable, complaint dismissed. Grande Ronde Lumber Co. v. Director General, 69 I. C. C. 355.

(oo) Complainant's contention that assessment of freight charges should be upon the weight at destination instead of at point or origin not sustained. Miller & Co. v. G. T. W. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A417.

(pp) Deduction of 1,000 pounds for lining and stoves on shipments of potatoes not shown unreasonable Miller & Co. v. C. St. P. M. & O. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A539.

(qq) To weigh all shipments of canned goods would add to cost of handling and would be detrimental to both shippers and canners. Allen Bros. Co. v. P. B. & W. R. R. Co. Unrep. Op. A-709.

§3. Actual Weight.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) When actual weights of cotton shipments can not be ascertained without inconvenience to the shipper or carrier, and when transportation charges are promptly adjusted by the carrier upon the basis of actual weights furnished by the consignee, a practice of billing the cotton at a proper estimated weight per bale should not be deemed unlawful. Phelps & Co. v. T. & P. R. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. 363, 369.

(b) Complainant attacked class rate on apples, carloads from Kansas City, Mo., to El Paso, Tex., as unreasonable in that an arbitrary weight greater than the actual weight was imposed. Subsequently, defendant amended its tariff so as to make it apply to only actual weight on the apples. HELD, complaint dismissed. D. M. Payne v. A. T. & S. F. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 190.

(c) Complainant attacked defendants carload commodity rate on apples from certain points in Illinois to New York City as unreasonable in that an arbitrary weight greater than the actual weight is imposed, but subsequently defendants amended tariffs so as to make them apply only actual weight on such apples. HELD, complaint dismissed. W. N. White & Co. v. B. & O. S. W. Ry. 12 I. C. C. 307.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(d) Actual weighing of the articles making up a carload is the only way by which their actual weight can be ascertained to a certainty, but this practice is not always convenient, practicable, or even advisable. Where the commodity is not susceptible of a reasonably accurate estimated weight, there should be sufficient margin between the minimum and the maximum weights to allow for reasonable variation between the estimated and the actual weights. Georgia Rough & Cut Stone Co. v. Georgia R. R. Co., 13 I. C. C. 401, 403.

(e) Theoretically, a shipper should not pay freight on more than the actual weight of the commodity shipped, and under the same principle, the carriers should receive a revenue on the actual weight carried. By reason of the varying conditions, however, it is almost impossible to accurately follow that theory or principle. The best that can be done is to make a regulation that, in the light of experience, will come nearest doing substantial justice between all shippers and carriers on all kinds of commodities. Rice v. Georgia R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 75, 79.

(f) To assess freight charges upon any other than actual weight is to impose rate either too high or too low and to discriminate between different shippers. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 30.

(g) There is force in the contention that as to all commodities freight charges which are based upon weight as the unit should be assessed upon the actual or correct weight. Official Classification Ratings, 37 I. C. C., 166, 187.

(h) While provision for assessment of charges based on actual weight of shipments loaded to full visible capacity is proper where it may be determined by casual inspection, it would be highly improper in connection with potato shipments to leave interpretation of such a provision to local agents as it would result in confusion and open the door to unlimited discriminations and preferences. Northern Potato Traffic Asso. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co. 57 I. C. C. 385.

(i) Charges in excess of actual weight are unreasonable Reparation awarded. Kaye & Carter Lumber Co. v. M. St. P. & St. Ste. M. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. 159.

(j) When more of an article is shipped on one day to one consignee than can be loaded, the balance, if loaded in a box car, will be carried at the carload rate on the actual weight. Hartford Canning Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. 288.

§4. Capacity Weight.

(a) A rule or regulation of a carrier which has not provided track scales at stations, forbidding shippers to load grain in cars beyond a specified weight above the marked capacity, under penalty of increased rates on the excess weight, if properly established, is not unlawful, provided the increase is not unreasonable and the margin between the maximum and minimum carload weight is so wide that shippers may without scales readily comply with both rules.

Suffern v. Indiana, D. & W. R. Co. 7 I. C. C. 255.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Where complainant is charged on a carload of coal on the basis of 80,500 lbs., and it appears that the weight at destination was 66,760 lbs., and the car was physically capable of carrying not over 70,500 lbs., complainant is entitled to reparation on a weight basis of 70,500 lbs. §5. Estimated Weight.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) When actual weights of goods shipped cannot be ascertained without needless inconvenience, estimated or constructive weights may be taken if the method of estimation works no inequality in its practical application to competing modes of conveyance. Rice v. Cincinnati, W. & B. R. Co. (Com.) 3 I. C. R. 841.

(aa) In assuming for transportation purposes that a barrel of refined petroleum oil weighs 400 pounds and that a gallon of that commodity weighs 6.3 pounds when shipped in tanks, defendants use constructive or hypothetical weights so much out of proportion to actual weights that positive and measurable preference is constantly granted to the shipper by the tank method; and so far as that practice enables the tank shipper to secure the carriage of more pounds of freight for the same money than the shipper in barrels it subjects the latter to unlawful prejudice. When actual weights cannot be ascertained without needless inconvenience, there is no serious objection to the use of estimated or constructive weights, provided the method of estimation works no inequality in its practical application to competing modes of conveyance. Rice v. Cinn. W. & B. R. Co., 3 I. C. R. 841.

(b) A practice of billing cotton at a proper estimated weight per bale should not be deemed unlawful when actual weights of shipments cannot be ascertained without great inconvenience to the shipper or carrier, and when transportation charges are promptly adjusted by the carrier upon the basis of actual weights furnished by the consignee. Phelps v. Texas & P. R. Co. (Com.), 4 I. C. R. 363.

(c) Practice of billing cotton at proper estimated weight per bale should not be deemed unlawful when actual weights of shipments cannot be ascertained without great inconvenience to the shipper or carrier, and when transportation charges are promptly adjusted by the carrier upon the basis of actual weights furnished by the consignee. Phelps v. Texas & P. R. Co., 6 I. C. C. 36.

(d) Complainant attacked rates charged on horses and mules less carloads from Bayou Sara, La., to St. Louis, Mo., on the classification basis as unreasonable. Rate is double first class of $1.80 per 100 pounds upon an estimated weight of 2 000 for the first animal, 1,500 pounds for the second, and 1,000 pounds for each additional animal. Distance covered is 667 miles. This rate when applied to the transportation of a single animal is not unreasonable, but it is unreasonable for a shipment of four animals, amounting in that case to $99, while the charge upon a carload of 25 animals is only $100. Defendants less carload tariff would be rendered more just by reducing the charge to 90c per 100 pounds, the first class rate, increasing the estimated weight of the first animal to 4,000 pounds, and leaving the weights for the additional animals as they now are, at 1,500 pounds for the second and 1,000 pounds each for all others included in the shipment. HELD no order issued, but complainant may apply to the Commission for reparation if compelled to pay rates in excess of those indicated. Barrow v. Y. & M. V. R. R. 10 I. C. C. 333.

(ef) Carload rate on apples from certain points in Illinois to New York City based on estimated weight, sustained. White & Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co., 12 I. C. C. 306.

(g) The Commission has recognized the right of carriers, in order to facilitate the movement of business, to fix an estimated weight upon certain standard packages upon which a rate is based.

This estimated weight is taken into consideration in the making of the rate itself, and of such estimated weights shippers have the right to complain before this Commission and secure relief; but the facts in this case do not justify a holding that the estimated weight complained of was a violation of the act. Claim for reparation denied. White & Co. v. B. & O. S. W. R. R. Co. et. al. 12 I. C. C. 306, 307, 308.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(h) There is no objection to specific or estimated package rates. National League of Commission Merchants of U. S. v. A. C. L. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 132, 135.

(i) In instances where it is difficult to secure the actual weight of articles shipped, estimated weights per unit may be used in arriving at proper charges. The standard weights per unit established by carriers as a basis for charges in such instances, must be fair and should be the result of careful investigation. In re Suspension of Western Classification No. 51, 25 I. C. C. 442, 532.

(j) Where published estimated weights are neither related to the actual weights of the commodities, nor uniform; they must be revised. New Orleans Shippers' Asso. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 34 I. C. C. 32, 36, 37.

(k) Lack of uniformity in estimated weights results in discrimination New Orleans Shippers' Asso. v. I. C. R. R. Co., 34 I. C. C. 32, 37.

(l) The fact that estimated weight of 200 pounds per barrel has been so long in effect should not prevent adoption of correct weight if estimate now applied does not fairly represent true weight in transportation. Increased weights on flour in barrels and half barrels, justified. Official Classification Ratings, 37 I. C. C. 166, 187.

(m) A necessity for the use of estimated instead of actual weights in the fruit and vegetable traffic as well as the desirability of uniformity has been established. Fruits and Vegetables, 43 I. C. C. 291, 317.

(n) It is impracticable to provide different estimated weights for lumber dependent upon the locality of production, stage of seasoning, or species, as the weights differ even in the same locality, and it is difficult to determine how much the lumber has been seasoned, or to distinguish between the different kinds of pine lumber. Berthold & Jennings Lumber Co. v. S. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 113, 114.

(o) The suggestion that carriers publish as estimated weights the maximum known weight per gallon of each commodity that moves in tank cars, and to provide for the application of those weights in the absence of a certificate from the shipper as to the actual weight per gallon at the time of loading, approved. Consolidated Classification Case 54 I. C. C. 25.

(p) A proposal to fix a rate on crude gas, fuel oils, not to exceed 89 per cent of the rate on refined oils. HELD, plan gives emphasis to element of weight and in determining the proper relationship of the rates relative values and the nature of the commodities should also be taken into consideration. Pure Oil Co. v. Director General, 56 I. C. C. 218, 222.

(q) Shippers should not expect to have transportation charges collected on a basis less than actual weight. If in the future the size of orange or lemon boxes is changed, carriers will be expected to change their estimated weights to conform to the actual weight of the respective boxes. California Citrus League v. Director General, 58 I. C. C. 373, 382.

(r) Where the practical and only effect of the proposed increases in estimated weights would be a substantial increase in transportation charges, the respondent should show not only that the proposed estimated weights are not excessive, but also that the application of the existing rates to such estimated weights will not result in unreasonable transportation charges to the shipper. Increased weights on kale, lettuce and spinach, 61 I. C. C. 586, 589.

(s) Estimated weights are commonly used for the convenience of both the shipper and the carrier, and they should preferably bear some close relation to the actual weights. Increased weights on kale, lettuce and spinach, 61 I. C. C. 586, 589.

(t) In the absence of proper tariff authority therefore, it is unlawful, of course, to use estimated weights that are less than the actual weights. Lake Charles Rice Milling Co. v. A. & N., 63 I. C. C. 18, 39.

(u) Charges, based on estimated weight of 8.5 pounds per gallon, on oil of coal tar, light, from destructive distillation of coal, in tank-car loads found unreasonable to extent they exceeded charges based on actual weight of 7.4 pounds. Reparation awarded. Semet-Solvay Co. v. Director General, as Agent, 83 I. C. C. 492.

(v) Rule of consolidated classification providing that weights on petroleum and products in tank cars be based on full shell gallonage capacity of tank at certain estimated weights per gallon, found not reasonable. Complainant contending that estimated weight be ascertained upon basis of 60 degrees Fahrenheit. Estimated weights per gallon are not assailed; but if, as matter of fact, such weight does not result in correct estimated weight per car because of temperature variations, any desirable correction should be through change in assumed weight per gallon rather than in manner proposed by complainant. Western Petroleum Refiners Asso. v. St. L.-S. F. Ry. Co., 83 I. C. C. 702.

(w) Rates on petroleum and products in tank cars are computed not upon actual, but upon estimated, weights, Estimated weights per car are arrived at by multiplying gallonage in tank and dome at time of loading by estimated weight per gallon specified in the classification. Semet-Solvay Co. v. Director General, as Agent 83 I. C. C. 492, 703.

(x) Contention that weight computed on basis of marked capacity of car should have been on basis of estimated weight not sustained because agent of carrier was not furnished with copy of invoice showing number of feet of lumber in loaded car and whether lumber was green or seasoned as required under tariff. Berthold & Jennings Lumber Co. v. A. T. & N. Ry. Co., Unrep. Op. A-888.

(a) Although the fact that most shippers of a given article in part of a described territory were permitted to secure reduced rates by billing at net weight, while many other shippers of the same article in another portion of that territory paid higher rates through billing at the full weight of the package and its contents is ample warrant for an order requiring the carriers to remove the unjust discrimination as between such shippers by discontinuing the practice of shipping at net weights in any part of the territory, yet on the other hand, unless the net-weight practice was prevalent throughout substantially the whole territory affected and either authorized by carriers generally in that territory or so well known from constant and general application as to receive implied sanction, it would not of itself constitute sufficient ground for an order requiring a reduction in rates when all the carriers applied their established charges on the basis of gross weights. Decision in Proctor & Gamble v. Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton R. R. Co. et al., 4 I. C. C. Rep. 87, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 131, which was based mainly upon testimony indicating general prevalence of the net-weight practice. HELD: In the light of further evidence, not controlling in this case. Proctor & Gamble Co. v. C., H. & D. Ry. Co., 9 I. C. C. 440.

(b) The fact that most shippers of a given article in part of a described territory secured reduced rates by billing at net weight while many other shippers in another portion of the territory billed their goods at full weight of the package and contents, is not ground for reducing the rate, where the carriers, on being asked to discontinue such unjust discrimination, applied their established charges on the basis of gross weights, unless such net-weight practice had been so prevalent throughout substantially the whole territory inspected, and either authorized by carriers generally or so well known from constant and general application as to receive implied sanction. Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 9 I. C. C. 440.

§5½. Origin weights.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Carriers' practice of exacting charges on cedar posts and poles on point of origin weights instead of weights taken in transit, not found to have been illegal or unreasonable. Northern Mercantile Co. v. A. E. R. R. Co., 42 I. C. C. 290, 294.

(b) The rule that charges on coal will be assessed on weights ascertained at defendant's regular weighing stations and that this rule will not be departed from found unreasonable. Aetna Portland Cement Co. v. D. G. H. & M. Ry., 46 I. C. C. 407, 409.

(c) The Commission approves the assessing of charges on articles subject to shrinkage in transit on basis of origin weights. Ewing & Co. v. O. S. L. R. R. Co., 46 I. C. C., 471, 472.

(d) Where there is obvious error in the point of origin weight, the carriers should see to it that shippers are enabled to secure either through correction or claim a quick adjustment to the basis of the actual weight. Adams v. A. B. & A. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 415, 417.

(e) The fact that the tariff prescribed that the point of origin weight will be used as the basis for assessing charges should not mean that an erroneous record of scale weight shall govern. Romann & Bush Pig Iron & Coke Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 51 I. C. C. 126, 128.

(f) Charges on sweet potatoes based on scale weights, and on peaches based upon estimated weights, obtained at points of origin, found not to have been unreasonable. Shippers did not weigh shipments at destinations; estimated weights sought would not fairly represent actual weights; and a check of tariffs several years back showed no provision for estimated weights on these commodities. Oyler & Son v. L. & N. R. R. Co., 66 I. C. C. 175.

§6. Reweighing.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Under a complaint by a jobber shipping coal, which questions the reasonableness of reweighing charges, it is immaterial to the determination of the question whether the jobber pays the mine owner on the basis of the original weight or the reweighing rate. Rice v. Georgia R. R. Co., 14 I. C. C. 75, 80.

(b) If the original weight was improper the shipper ought not to be required to pay for reweighing. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 30.

(c) Where a reweighing is requested by a shipper and such reweighing shows error beyond the limit of tolerance fixed, no charge should be made for that service. In re Weighing of Freight by Carrier, 28 I. C. C. 7, 31.

(d) Tariffs should provide that where reweighing is requested by shipper, and shows error beyond limit of tolerance fixed, no charge shall be made for reweighing. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 31.

(e) Following rules should be adopted: Reweigh every car within one year from date when it is put into service; reweigh after it undergoes substantial repairs; reweigh at least once in two years. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 25.

(f) If the shipper for his own purposes requests a second weighing, there is no apparent reason why he should not pay a reasonable sum for this service, unless it appears upon such weighing that the original weight was erroneous and that the shipper was therefore justified in asking that the car be reweighed. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 36.

(g) Where a shipper notified of an advance in the weight of a car during the course of transportation elects, he should be permitted, without any expense to him, to require a third weighing of that car. He should also be allowed, without liability to demurrage charges, a sufficient time in which to examine into the weight of the car before it is unloaded. If no claim of over-weight is made before the unloading, then no such claim should be entertained at all. In re Weighing of Freight, 28 I. C. C. 7, 36.

(h) The right of a shipper to demand a reweighing of its car and if the weight upon which charges had been levied was incorrect, to have the same corrected without any reweighing charge, applies to a switch movement to the private scales of the shipper. American Brake Shoe and Foundry Co. v. Belt Ry. Co., 28 I. C. C. 350, 353.

(i) It is the right of shipper to demand reweighing if he desires it. American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co. v. B. Ry. of C., 28 I. C. C., 350, 353.

(j) The contention that where the actual delivery of the car is made by a switching carrier no duty rests upon that carrier to reweigh the car upon request, is answered by section one of the Act which, in connection with the instrumentalities and services comprehended in the term "transportation," makes it the duty of every carrier subject to the Act "to provide such transportation upon reasonable request therefore. If a switching carrier participates in the through movement of a car, a reweighing of the car is included in the transportation which it is its duty to perform upon reasonable request. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R., 38 I. C. C. 79, 81.

(k) A car to be reweighed is not properly chargeable with any empty movement. It is already at the industry or team track and its empty movement therefrom after the reweighing operation is included in the road-haul freight rate. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R., 38 I. C. C. 79, 82.

(l) As there is no extra empty movement in connection with a car to be reweighed, and the length of the average reweighing movement is comparatively short, the scales being located at convenient places throughout the terminals, it does not necessarily follow that the cost of an average industrial switching movement and all the services incident thereto would fairly represent a mathematically determined percentage of the cost of an average reweighing movement. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R., 38 I. C. C. 79, 83.

(m) A consideration of the several links in the average reweighing movement after placement as compared with the average industrial switching movement, will afford a foundation for prescribing approximately a proper relation of these charges. The several short operations which are necessary to take a car to and from the scale constitute one complete service, just as the several operations necessary to move a car from one industry to another constitute one complete service. The weighing operation is merely one link in the weighing movement, and is not unlike a number of individual operations incident to the average switching movement. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R. Co., 38 I. C. C. 79, 84.

(n) There are many incidental services comprehended in the industrial switching charge which are not included in the reweighing charge. The industrial switching charge covers the movement of an empty car to the originating industry, and the movement of an empty car from the industry at destination; the reweighing charge covers no such extra empty movements, as the cars are already at the industry, and the empty movement therefrom after reweighing is included in the line-haul freight rate. The industrial switching charge also includes free time for loading and for unloading; the reweighing charge includes no additional free time. The industrial switching carrier is liable to loss and damage through the terminals; the carrier which performs merely a switching service in connection with the car to be reweighed appears to disavow responsibility for loss and damage in the process. The industrial switching movement is always to a definite point, and this point in extreme instances may be as far as 22 miles away; the reweighing movement may be to any one of several scales distributed throughout the terminals and is therefore comparatively short. Detroit Exchange v. M. C. R. R. Co., 38 I. C. C. 79, 85.

(o) Charges for reweighing carload freight after placement at industry or team track found unreasonable to extent that they exceeded 75 per cent of the industrial switching rates contemporaneously in effect. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R. Co., 38 I. C. C. 79, 85.

(p) Disagreement between line-haul carriers and switching carriers as to proportion of reweighing charges each should bear is tantamount to a dispute regarding divisions. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R. Co., 38 I. C. C. 79, 86.

(q) If the reweighing develops a shortage less than the tolerance, the shipper should pay for the extra service performed; if the reweighing develops a shortage in excess of the tolerance, no charge should be made against the shipper. Whether in the latter instance, all or part of the reweighing charge should be paid by the line-haul carrier is a matter of no concern to the shipper. That is a question to be decided by the carriers participating in the transportation and their inability to agree should not be used as an excuse to increase the charges to be paid by the shipper. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R. Co., 38 I. C. C. 79, 86.

(r) There is no rule by which the weight shown at destination is entitled to more consideration than that shown at point of origin, when both weights were ascertained by the same method. Flint Erving & Stoner Co. v. N. O. G. N. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. A-40.

(s) Altho a Carriers tariff may provide expressly for reweighing on request failure to reweigh in no way indicated that the original weight was erroneous. Chestnut Lumber Co. v. N. O. & N. E. R. R. Co., Unrep. Op. 1857.

§7. Scaleage and shrinkage.

See Facilities and Privileges §12; Scaleage and Shrinkage.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Absolute precision in the adjustment to a schedule of scaleage deductions so as to meet all varying conditions is beyond a reasonable possibility. Baltimore Chamber of Commerce v. Pa. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 341, 344.

(b) The weight obtained by weighing both trucks at a time preferred to scaling obtained by weighing trucks separately. Wheeler Lumber, Bridge & Supply Co. v. A. & C. R. R. R. Co., 20 I. C. C. 10, 11.

(c) An initial carrier's tariff provided for a deduction in weight on account of moisture; a connecting carrier which participated in the movement, neither concurred in such tariff nor had a similar tariff provision of its own. HELD, that complainant was entitled to the deduction only on that part of the haul performed by the first carrier. Hull Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. C. 302.

(d) On shipments of coal the deduction for moisture from actual net weight does not establish the remainder as net weight, but provides simply an arbitrary basis on which to compute charges. C. W. Hull Co. v. S. Ry. Co., 24 I. C. 302, 303.

(e) The Commission has approved the assessing of charges on articles subject to shrinkage in transit on basis of origin weights. Ewing & Co. v. O. S. L. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 471, 472.

(f) The carriers tariffs provided that the weight of shipments of coal as determined at the point of origin would be corrected, and no charge for re-weighing made, when the difference between that weight and the weight as determined at destination upon reweighing at request of shipper or consignee exceeded 1 per cent of point of origin weight, minimum 500 lbs. On Mar. 1 1917, the tariffs were so amended as to provide for an additional difference between the two weights of 1 per cent of point of origin weight on bituminous coal and ½ per cent on anthracite, as a condition precedent to correction of the origin weight and the reweighing of the shipment free. The two tolerances described were published in one tariff rule, which provided that they should be computed separately and added together, the percentage in each case to be taken of the weight as determined at the point of origin. On cars of 50,000 lbs. or more this was tantamount to saying that the total tolerance should be 2 per cent; but on cars of less weight this was not true, on account of the operation of the minimum weight provision of the scale tolerance. Thus on a 40,000 lbs. car a 2 per cent tolerance would amount to 800 lbs., whereas by computing the tolerances separately and adding them together the total tolerance would be 900 lbs., that is the 500 lb. minimum in lieu of the 1 per cent scale tolerance plus 400 lbs., or 1 per cent, for the moisture tolerance. HELD (1) that the original tolerance scale had not been shown to be unreasonable; but (2) that the increased total tolerance had not been justified; and (3) that the additional tolerance for moisture absorption and evaporation had not been justified. Northwestern Traffic & Service Bur. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 47 I. C. C. 549.

(g) Tolerance is the allowable margin of error between the origin and destination scale readings arising from differences in scales or errors in weighing or from the absorption or evaporation of moisture by the shipment in transit, which must be exceeded as a condition precedent to the correction of the billed weight and the reweighing of the shipment free. N. W. Traffic and Service Bureau v. C. M. St. P. Ry. 47 I. C. C. 549.

(h) Increase in tolerance on anthracite coal of 1 per cent difference between origin and destination weight and ½ of 1 per cent on bituminous coal, as an allowance for evaporation and moisture in addition to the regular tolerance allowance of 1 per cent, not justified. Northwestern traffic & Service Bureau, Inc. v. C. M. & St. Paul Ry. 47 I. C. C. 549, 556.

(i) A rule that there will be deducted from the weight of the grain lost one-eighth of 1 per cent of the shipping weight on wheat, rye, oats, and other small grain, and one-fourth of 1 per cent on corn to cover shrinkage due to evaporation or other natural causes is not unreasonable. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 544.

(j) On a weight of 60,000 pounds shrinkage of 60 or 70 pounds on wheat, and 120 pounds on oats and barley, are normal and not indicative of inaccurate weighing or losses in transit. Claims for loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 573.

(k) A rule for correction of the billed weight when the difference between it and the destination weight exceeded a reasonable tolerance, would disregard shrinkage. Adams v. A. B. & A. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 415, 418.

(l) In Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 25, the Commission said that where coal is washed in preparing it for shipment and the moisture does not become a part of the coal itself but soon evaporates there would seem to be a strong reason why a proper deduction should be made from the weight at the mine; but that where the moisture is a part of the coal itself even though it subsequently evaporates, the carrier may properly require that the weight at the mine shall govern. Farmers Feed Company v. Erie R. R., 52 I. C. C. 317.

§7½. Track Scales.

See Supra §5½.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Where the weight of merchandise is uniformly the same, the carrier or the consignee may ask to have the weight verified up to the moment of delivery; it is the weight disclosed by the scales and not the weight mark on the bill of lading, that controls. Baird v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. (C. C. E. D. Ark.) 4 I. C. R. 422.

(b) Complainant attacked as unreasonable weight charged on two carloads of coal from Midland Valley, Ark. to Kansas City Mo., rate assessed $2 per ton, minimum 88,000 pounds. Cars were weighed at Muskogee showing 81,500 pounds on one car and 77,000 pounds on the other. There is no testimony in the case to show how the mine weights were ascertained, but the testimony of complainant did show that such weights were often wrong. The Commission is of the opinion that the track weights should determine the actual weight. HELD, weight on which shipment was charged unreasonable to extent they exceeded the track scale weights, reparation awarded. J. H. Leonard v. M. K. & T. Ry., 12 I. C. C. 538.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(c) The commonest defect in the installation of track scales of today seems to be in the construction of the pit containing the scale itself. Not only should the foundations be sufficient, but the pit itself should be so constructed that it can be kept absolutely dry and can be readily entered for the purpose of inspection. When great accuracy is desired it should be kept at a uniform temperature. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 10.

(d) A general investigation of the conditions of weighing revealed that in a very considerable part of the country track scales were not originally properly installed. The main platform bearings were out of place, and many scales were binding. There were also all kinds of false bearings, levers were out of level, connections were not plumb, and check rods were too tight. The record indicated that a majority of the track scales should be at once rebuilt in order to obtain reasonably accurate results, and that many additional scales should be installed. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 11.

(e) A majority of the track scales now in use should be rebuilt, and many additional should be installed. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 11.

(f) Formerly the platform above the standard track scale was attached to the scale itself, the track upon which the car stood being laid on the platform. With this system of construction the platform is very liable to bind at the edges, producing inaccuracy in weights, and the modern method is to support the tracks upon which the car rests when being weighed, upon standards which pass down through the platform, so that the platform itself is stationary and not connected with the scale. A second track is laid upon the platform so that the car, when the scale is not in use, may be passed over the scale without engaging its mechanism. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 11.

(g) If the pit which contains the track scale is damp the bearings rust and this interferes with the correctness of the result. If anything gets between the platform and the edge of the pit, in those cases where the weighing track rests upon the platform, the scale may bind. HELD the scale should be kept as clean as possible and a frequent inspection made by going into the pit of the scale. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 12.

(h) In order to make certain of the correctness of the test car used in testing track scales, access must be had to a master scale which has been tested by standard weights obtained from the Bureau of Standards maintained by the United States government. There should be one such scale upon every considerable railroad system. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 12.

(i) Although a person of intelligence may readily be taught to give a track scale the necessary daily inspection, this should be supplemented by an expert inspection at regular intervals. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 12.

(j) The only certain way to determine whether a track scale is accurate is by a weighing test on the scale itself, which consists in putting upon the scale a known weight and then comparing the reading with that weight. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 12.

(k) The track scale which is in use should be inspected and balanced every day. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers 28 I. C. C. 7, 12.

(l) Track scales should be accurate within at least 100 pounds. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 13.

(m) Scales should be tested by test car at least once in two months; in many cases every month. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 13.

(n) A modern track scale, properly installed and kept in proper condition, should be accurate within at least 100 lbs., and when under test it shows a variation of 100 lbs. or more it should be considered out of order. It is not maintained that the weight of the contents of a car can ordinarily be ascertained within 100 lbs. by track scaling. Into that result many sources of error may enter aside from the inaccuracy of the scale itself, but that particular source of error should not exceed the limit named. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 13.

(o) There are two general classes of instruments for recording carload weights. The automatic device is attached to the scale beam and stamps upon paper without the intervention of any human agency the weight of the car as it would be recorded upon the beam itself. The only duty of the weigh master is to identify the car of which the weight is taken. Assuming the device to be perfect in operation, the only liability to error arises from applying the rate accorded to the wrong car. With the mechanical self recording device the operator observes the scale beam as the car passes across the scale and rests upon the scale. When the beam is balanced he throws a lever engaging mechanism, which records the weight, as shown by the scale. Here the human element is present since the operator must observe the moment at which the scale balances and throw the lever of the recording contrivance. The weight is recorded at the moment when the lever is thrown, so that an error in observing the scale beam or in placing the lever results in an erroneous weight. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 17.

(p) It is just as essential to provide a competent operator as to furnish a suitable scale, and so far no device has been invented which will dispense with intelligence, faithfulness and ability upon the part of that operator. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 18.

(q) Carrier may not provide that weight of a particular scale shall govern, In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers 28 I. C. C., 7, 30.

(r) The governmental duty of exercising authority over the installing and testing of scale tracks is eminently local in its character and the different states should be encouraged to assume and exercise an actual jurisdiction in this particular. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 32.

(s) With respect to the operation of track scales, a federal tribunal should have authority to lay down general rules for the placing of cars when weighed; that is, to determine whether they shall be weighed in motion or at rest and whether they shall be coupled at one or both ends or entirely disconnected from other cars. The authority should extend to the prescribing of the particular cases, or rather the particular classes, of scales upon which cars may be weighed in a given number. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 33.

(t) Government should determine kind of apparatus with which track scales are to be tested, manner of testing and frequency with which test shall be made. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers. 28 I. C. C. 7, 33.

(u) Some federal tribunal, perhaps the Commission, should be given authority to fix the points at which track scales shall be installed; to prescribe the standard of such scales and their installation; to test or supervise the testing of such scales; and to supervise the operation. It is not suggested by the Commission that the federal authority should actually test all the track scales of the country, much less provide the necessary apparatus for that purpose. The statute should require carriers themselves to install proper scales and properly maintain and test them and should invest the federal tribunal with authority to make necessary rules and regulations to the securing of this end. The government should determine the kind of apparatus with which these scales are to be tested, the manner of the testing, the frequency with which the test should be made, and should require a report of such tests and should have authority to make and supervise tests when it saw fit. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 33.

(v) Every carload of freight, where track scales are relied upon to determine the weight upon which freight charges are to be assessed, should be weighed within 50 miles of the point of origin ordinarily, and the result at once communicated either to the consignor or the consignee as the parties may direct. If during the subsequent course of the shipment the weight is advanced, the same party should be at once notified by telegram. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 36.

(w) The Act does not require freight charges upon shipments of grain to be assessed upon elevator weights. The weight of grain transported must be determined with reasonable accuracy by the carriers as an incident to their service of transportation. They must provide adequate facilities for weighing. At many places throughout the United States such weighing is done on track scales, and condemnation of this method would find no warrant in law. If carriers choose to adopt the elevator weights where ascertained, in preference to track-scale weights, their right to cancel elevation allowances is not affected thereby whether or not the carrier has paid for the weighing. Grain Elevation Allowances at Kansas City, 34 I. C. C. 442, 445.

(x) Scale weights are presumably correct. Fissell v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 40 I. C. C. 539, 540.

(y) Scale and weight experts in general agree that scales dependent upon elevator cribbing for foundation must sooner or later become unlevel and a source of inaccurate weight. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain 48 I. C. C. 530, 539.

(z) In most instances country elevators are equipped with small capacity automatic or hopper scales, and the carload weight is ascertained by weighing numerous separate draughts. Thus, even though the scales are reasonably accurate and the weighing is carefully performed, there is greater possibility of error than in the case of official weights which are obtained in some instances on track scales but more often in one or two draughts on large capacity hopper scales. This greater tendency to error results from the fact that on all scales a certain weight is required to "break the beam," the amount depending upon the sensibility of the beam and being, it is said, about 10 pounds on hopper scales and 40 pounds on track scales. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 540.

(aa) In addition to errors made by weighers and the inevitable variations between the origin and destination weights resulting from the well known and generally recognized fact that scales are only relatively accurate, there are many other conditions not incident to transportation that may and do produce differences between the loading and the unloading weights. Among these are loss or diversion of grain between the scale and the car at loading and unloading points; unavoidable waste during the process of loading and unloading and natural shrinkage due to the evaporation of moisture; loss of grain in transit as the result of the careless or faulty application of grain doors or cooperage by shippers; the removal of grain for inspection purposes by state and board of trade inspectors, and waste resulting from the consignee's failure to remove all grain from the car. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grain, 48 I. C. C. 530, 542.

(bb) The presumption of accuracy which attaches to scale weights must be rebutted clearly to be overthrown. Pendleton & Gilkey v. Director General, 64 I. C. C. 145, 146.

(cc) Carriers should not be required to accept weights ascertained by shippers on private scales. Providence Fruit & Produce Exchange v. Director General, as Agent, 66 I. C. C., 300, 301.

(dd) The presumption of accuracy which attaches to scale weights must be rebutted clearly, to be overthrown. Palmer & Semans Lumber Co. v. C. & O. Ry. Co. Unrep. Op. 2011.

(ee) Scale weights are generally considered only authentic evidence of the actual weight and not shown to be incorrect. Independent Cooperage Co. v. N. C. & St. L. Ry., Unrep. Op. 2088.

§7¾. Wagon Weights.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Charges on coal from Corbin, B. C., to Spokane, Wash. not found based on an erroneous weight. Weight claimed was ascertained by weighing over private wagon scales. The car was weighed light after shipment was unloaded; but tariffs provide for reweighing, and the difference between billed weight and weight that would have resulted if actual tare weight of car had been used is within the approved tolerance of 500 pounds. International Fuel Co. v. S. I. Ry. Co., 38 I. C. C. 622, 623.

III. DISCRIMINATION.

See Discrimination.

§8. In general.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) When actual weights cannot be ascertained without needless inconvenience, there is no serious objection to the use of estimated or constructive weights, provided the method of estimation works no inequality in its practical application to competing modes of conveyance. Rice v. C. W. & B. R. Co. 8 I. C. C. 842, 854.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Charging on actual weight to complainant and estimated weight to competitors found discriminatory. American Creosote Works v. I. C. R. R. Co., 18 I. C. C. 212.

(c) It amounts to the same thing whether the rate be high or the weight be excessive. Inaccuracies in weighing results in the imposition of unreasonable charges and in discrimination between shippers just as real as do differences in the freight rate itself. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 10.

IV. EVIDENCE AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

See Bills of Lading §7; Burden of Proof, Evidence.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) The question as to correct weights and shipments, as between carrier and shipper, is one of fact to be determined in a manner just to both parties and as to which the ex parte action of either cannot conclude the other. Potter Manufacturing Co. v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co., 4 I. C. R. 223.

(aa) Allegations of unreasonable rates on vegetables from points in Florida to New York and other northeastern destinations were investigated by the Commission in a proceeding instituted upon its own motion, but the evidence presented was too uncertain and inconclusive to enable the Commission to make the necessary comparisons or arrive at any definite conclusion. Published tariffs specifying rates per standard crate on vegetables shipped from Florida to northern and northeastern points should state plainly the weight or dimensions of the crate to which the rates apply. Re alleged unlawful charges, 8 I. C. C. 585.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(b) Positive evidence of the incorrectness of a carrier's scaling is necessary before another weight can be substituted, Browne Grain Co. v. G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 163, 164; Noble v. D. & T. S. L. R. R. Co. 20 I. C. C. 60, 61.

(c) Disputes as to weights of past shipments raise questions of fact which are quite difficult of determination, as reweighing is ordinarily impossible, and evidence of a very positive character as to the incorrectness of the scaling by the carrier is necessary before another weight can be substituted therefor. Browne Grain Co. v. G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 163, 164.

(d) The weight of an article is considered in determining the classification. Barrett Mfg. Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 79, 80; W. E. Caldwell Co. v. C. I. & L. Ry. Co., 20 I. C. C. 412, 415.

(e) The burden of justifying increased weighing charges is on the carrier. Blackmer & Post P. Co. v. M. P. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 162, 163.

(f) A dispute as to weight of a past shipment raises a question of fact which is difficult of determination and evidence of a positive character as to the incorrectness of the scaling by the carrier is necessary before another weight can be substituted therefor. Kulzer v. G. N. Ry. Co. Unrep. Op. A-849.

V. REPARATION.

See Reparation.

§10. In General.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Reparation on the basis of excessive weight on yellow pine crossties is denied inasmuch as the shipments originated at many different points, the consignors being mere agents of complainant, and no evidence of any personal knowledge of actual weights having been introduced. Switzer Lumber Co. v. A. & M. R. R. Co., 22 I. C. C. 471 473.

(b) Excess charges based on erroneous weights are analogous to overcharges National Pole Co. v. M. & I. Ry. Co., 33 I. C. C. 372, 373.

VI. TARIFFS AND CONSTRUCTION.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) As practice of making scaleage deductions is not a matter of rates, the Commission sees no reason why the amount of the weight deductions should be published in tariffs. Baltimore Chamber of Commerce v. Pa. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 341.

(b) The practice of making scaleage deductions based on estimated weights does not present a question of rates; it is a question of bailment only. Baltimore Chamber of Commerce v. Pa. R. R. Co., 15 I. C. C. 341, 346.

(c) It is not proper to provide in tariffs that weights at either the point of origin or the point of destination shall govern, unless those weights are correctly taken; that is, such a tariff would be unreasonable unless the shipper were permitted to show by reweighing or by other means that the weights at the point of origin were inaccurate. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 30.

(d) A carrier may not by providing that weights at either the point of origin or the point of destination, shall govern irrespective of whether such weights are correctly taken, exempt itself from liability to the shipper for loss of property in transit. It can properly provide only against that variation in weight which may actually be supposed to occur during the transportation and for such measure of possible error as is reasonable in the premises. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 30.

(e) A rule of the carriers provided that where a shipper asked for a reweighing of a carload of freight he should pay 50c, where the reweighing was upon the scales of the shipper, and the Commission HELD that as the carrier was obliged to spot the car, this charge was not unreasonable. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 30.

(f) In the absence of proper tariff authority therefor, it is unlawful to use estimated weights that are less than the actual weights. Lake Charles Rice Milling Co. v. A. & N. Ry. Co., 63 I. C. C. 18, 39.

ALL OTHER CITATIONS

Vegetable Oils Transportation, 46 I. C. C. 674, 676.

§12. Inspection bureaus.

See Inspection.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) It appeared that railroad weighing and inspection bureaus were accustomed to enter into an arrangement with certain shippers by which the weight certified by the shipper to be correct was so accepted by the carrier. The shipper agreed to pay any additional charges due to underweight where the weight was subsequently corrected and to allow the carrier access to all its records, invoice books and papers pertaining to the weights of the cars shipped. The agreement covered package freight, put up in standard packages where the weight was determined by counting the number of packages shipped in a particular car and also freight which must ordinarily be weighed in the car by some one. This weighing was done upon the scales of the industry under the inspection of the weighing bureau. It appeared that the weighing bureau frequently weighed such cars. It was also able by inspection of the books and records of the shipper to determine whether the weight charged against the customer corresponded with the weight rendered to the carrier. HELD, that the system appeared to work satisfactory and without discrimination. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 28.

(b) Representatives of weighing bureaus may examine books and record of shippers. In re Weighing or Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 28.

(c) The Weighmaster should be the representative of public authority. In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C., 7, 34.

(d) Some degree of supervision over weighing facilities at country points is exercised by state weighing departments or by organizations of grain dealers, or by both, but in general it is wholly inadequate and adds little to the trustworthiness of unsupervised weights. Inaccurate weighing prevails at country shipping points to an extent which impairs the credibility of unsupervised weights as a whole and which justifies careful inquiry into local conditions before accepting the claimed weights as correct. Claims for Loss and Damage of Grains, 48 I. C. C. 530, 542.

(e) The character of the supervision over the weighing of shipments, if any is exercised, is a fact which may readily be determined by investigation and which properly may be considered in connection with other pertinent facts in reaching a conclusion as to the probable accuracy of the claimed weights. Claims for loss and damage of Grain, 56 I. C. C. 347, 349.

ALL OTHER CITATIONS

In re Weighing of Freight by Carriers, 28 I. C. C. 7, 12, 23.

VII. REASONABLENESS OF CHARGES.

§13. In General.

See Reasonableness of Rates.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) A charge of 50 cents per car where cars are switched to private scales for weighing unless weights so ascertained were used for the assessment of freight charges not to be unlawful. American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co. v. B. Ry. of C., 28 I. C. C. 350.

(b) The weighing service, although performed after the initial physical delivery of the car, is nevertheless an incident of the transportation service, especially as the weight secured is used in the computation of freight charges and in the settlement of claims for shortage. Detroit Coal Exchange v. M. C. R. R., 38 I. C. C. 79, 80.

(c) Making charge for weight of ice in connection with fish, packed in barrels, while making no similar charge for weight of ice when fish are packed in bulk; found unreasonable. Tariff subsequently modified. Warren Fish Co. v. L. & N. R. R., 46 I. C. C. 375, 377.

(d) The charge for weighing is for general application and is not to be viewed merely in the light of some specific movement. At some points the service is less than at others, and the cost varies accordingly. Blackmer & Post Pipe Co. v. M. P. Ry., 49 I. C. C. 162, 163.

VIII. WEIGHING ALLOWANCES.

See Allowances.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant attacked the carrier's refusal to make an allowance of $3 per car on lumber and other products switched between its plant and thepoint of interchange with the carrier's line at Wiggins, Miss., 6,500 ft., and for the weighing of such shipments, as unreasonable and in violation of sec. 15. The mill was located at a greater distance from the main line than any other mill served by a tap line. Most of the plants on the carrier's line were located very close to its tracks so that practically no switching service was required, and no allowances were paid to any of them. The carrier had its own scale equipment and was ready to perform the same weighing service for complainant that it did for all other shippers, but complainant had installed private scales for its own convenience. HELD that in the absence of discrimination the carrier was under no obligation to perform the switching service sought, and that its refusal to make complainant an allowance for the service was not unlawful or unreasonable. Complaint dismissed. Finkbine Lum. Co. v. G. & S. I. R. R., 48 I. C. C. 705.

WHARFAGE

See Allowances §8(8); Dockage, Facilities and Privileges §16; Water Carriers §63¾.

CASES 1887-1908

(a) Charges for wharfage, graduated by tonnage of vessels using a wharf, are not open to the objection that they are duties on tonnage within the meaning of the Constitution. Ouachita, etc., Packet Co. v. Aiken, 1 I. C. R. 379.

(b) Wharfage is subject to local state laws, Congress having passed no Act to regulate it; and by those laws its reasonableness must be determined. Ouachita, etc., Packet Co. v. Aiken, 1 I. C. R. 379.

(c) Where wharfage charges are reasonable, it in no way concerns those who pay them, what application is made of the proceeds. Their appropriation to maintain, extend, light and police the wharves is unobjectionable, although a profit may be realized by lessees from the city which owns them. Ouachita, etc., Packet Co. v. Aiken, 1 I. C. R. 379.

(d) The appropriation of wharfage charges to maintain, extend, light and police the wharves is unobjectionable, although profits may be realized by lessees from the city which owns them. Ouachita etc. Packet Co. v. Aiken (U. S. Supt. Ct.) 1 I. C. R. 379.

(e) A transportation company operating a railway and a line of steamboats connecting at the company's wharf is not required, by the 3d section of the interstate commerce act, to permit the boats of a competitor to land at such wharf. Ilwaco R. & N. Co. v. Oregon S. L. & U. N. R. Co., 5 I. C. R. 627.

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(f) A corporation operating municipal dock and wharves in connection with interstate commerce, was found not to be a common carrier subject to the act. Wharfage. Handling and Storage Charges, 59 I. C. C. 488.

WITNESSES

See Immunity of Witness; Interstate Commerce Commission §6; Procedure Before Commission §1½; §22.

YARDAGE

See Allowances §8(8).

IMPORTANT CASES SINCE 1908

(a) Complainant attacked certain "yardage charges" in connection with the feeding, watering, and resting of hogs shipped in carloads from points in Idaho, Oregon, Colorado and Utah to Los Angeles, Cal., as illegal and unreasonable. The hogs were stopped en route, as repuired by the federal 28-hour law, unloaded into the carrier's yards, and rested, watered and fed. The feed was furnished by complainant, but the services incident to unloading, watering, feeding and resting the hogs were performed by an "independent contractor" at charges ranging from $1 to $1.50 per car, collected by the carrier with the freight charges and paid over to the contractor. No charge was made for rental of the yards. HELD, following Streever Lumber Co. v. C. M. & St. P. Ry., 34 I. C. C. 1, that it was not within the province of the Commission to determine the issues presented. Complaint dismissed. Pacific Coast Beef & P. Co. v. O. S. L. R. R., 46 I. C. C., 401.
